Gauntlet Thrown Down and Accepted

At the Instance of the Wholesale Grocers' Association of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware, One Cereal Concern Cuts Off All Retail Buyers in Philadelphia and Another Cuts Off Retail Grocers' Association. Retail Elements Combine for Stiff Fight. Will Throw Out Goods of All Manufacturers Severing Direct Relations and Divert Trade from Jobbers Belonging to Wholesaler's Association.

The Wholesale Grocers' Association of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware has at last succeeded in arousing the friction between certain manufacturers and various large retail buyers which it has been endeavoring to arouse for some months. As the result of its action, the Philadelphia Retail Grocers' Association, the Acme Tea Co., the William Butler Co., Robinson & Crawford and practically every other chain-store concern in Philadelphia have received word from the Toasted Corn Flakes Co., of Battle Creek, Mich., that after January 1, 1908, their orders for Toasted Corn Flakes would no longer be received direct, as they had been up to that date. All of the concerns named have been buying direct from the Toasted Corn Flake Co. and their orders have been eagerly solicited by the representatives of the Toasted Corn Flake Co.

In addition to the action of the company named above, the Natural Food Co., of Niagara Falls. N. Y., manufacturers of shredded wheat biscuit, has cut off the Retail Grocers' Association from its direct buying list, although, somewhat inconsistently, it does not propose, according to its local representative, to cut off the Acme Tea Co., the Butler Co. or any other chain-store concern, all of which are in exactly the same class, so far as purchasing goods is concerned, as the Retail Grocers' Association, and much smaller.

As to this feature of the Natural Food Co's attitude, which seems to the outsider rather inexplicable, the writer had an interview with Mr. Andrew Ross, local representative of the company, during the week. Asked why the Natural Food Co. should single out one member of an alleged objectionable class and refuse to sell it, while continuing to sell others much smaller, Mr. Ross contended that the Retail Grocers' Association was not singled out, that the policy of his company had for years been to gradually cut off its retail buyers and that in pursuance of that policy it had cut off the Retail Grocers' organizations of Reading, Pa.; Wilmington, Delaware; Baltimore, Md., and several others. Besides these, he said, several large individual retail buyers had been cut off for the same reason. According to him, the time of the Philadelphia Association to be cut off had simply come, and eventually all other retail buyers both in Philadelphia and everywhere else, would be also cut off. Mr. Ross was pressed to explain the motive of his company in cutting off the largest retail buyer in Philadelphia, while continuing direct relations with eight or nine others in the same market very much smaller, but he gave no explanation other than the above.

The most important factor in the situation is the Retail Grocers' Association, which comprises over 700 of the best retail stores in Philadelphia including practically all of the large central stores such as Martindale & Co., Hanscom Bros., the Acker Co., and others in that class. The association will not submit tamely to being excluded from privileges which it has formerly enjoyed, and a sharp conflict is imminent. The temper of the organization can be seen from the following resolutions, which were adopted at the meeting last Monday evening. This meeting, incidentally, was the largest attended and most enthusiastic in the history of the organization:—

Whereas, Certain persons alleged to be wholesale grocers of Pennsylvania, Delaware and New Jersey, have united for the purpose of enforcing the employment of so-called legitimate methods for the distribution of commodities handled by the grocery trade, and

Whereas, The efforts of such a union tend to illegal discrimination, disturbing economical distribution, balking competition and enhancing cost of products to the consumer and destroying the good relations now existing between the manufacturer and the distributor, and

Whereas, The efforts of the said union have been mainly, and in some cases solely against the Philadelphia Retail Grocers' Association, be it therefore

Resolved, That the Philadelphia Retail Grocers' Association use every legal and moral method in combating any agreement that may tend to levy an unearned tribute, restrain freedom of commerce or increase the cost to the consumer, and be it further

Resolved, That, as members of the Philadelphia Retail Grocers' Association, we will place no orders for specialties or new goods unless the same be billed through the Retail Grocers' Association. And be it further

Resolved, That, such wholesale grocers as become identified with such conspiracy or agreement be known to have become unfriendly to the retail grocer and relations be accordingly. Be it further

Resolved, That the President and Secretary be hereby authorized to employ such attorneys necessary to properly investigate the above conditions, and take such legal action as may be deemed advisable.

Resolved, That these resolutions be printed and a copy sent to each member of the Association.

Within the next few days a meeting will be held by the Retail Grocers' Association, the Acme Tea Co., the William Butler Co. and the other chain-store concerns. The purpose will be to form an offensive and defensive alliance among these firms, all of which together means a fighting strength of 1,100 of the most active retail stores in Philadelphia. According to the resolutions adopted by the association, each member will refuse to handle the goods of any manufacturer cutting off the organization, which it is clearly within his power to do. If 1,100 retail stores adopt this course simultaneously the result will be a dull thud in the sales of the manufacturers involved. A concerted effort will also be made by the members of the association to transfer their trade to jobbers who are not affiliated with the Wholesale Grocers' Association.

On Friday last, at 3 o'clock, practically all the large central retail grocers met at the association rooms and decided finally to join the association in its fight. They are already members. This is one of the organization's strongest elements of strength—it has with it every one of the large retailers.

The argument which of course lies at the bottom of the move, on the part of the Wholesale Grocers' Association, is that no retailer or set of retailers has the right to buy direct from the manufacturer. The jobbers' organization takes the position that a "wholesaler" buying in five-case lots should be permitted to buy from the manufacturer, while the Retail Grocers' Association, or the Acme Tea Co., buying in 100-case lots, should not. The retailers' organization will stand solidly upon the principle that the only sensible criterion is the quantity bought, and that each manufacturer should establish a jobbing quantity, which any one with the price could buy.

The Cocoanut Man Who Denied Before Being Accused

The Recital of Some Peculiar Methods by which Some Cocoanut Concern Sought to Obtain An Advantage Over A Competitor. The Fake Telephone Calls. Some Interesting Correspondence.

The Franklin Baker Co., well-known Philadelphia manufacturers of shredded cocoanut, told a "Grocery World" representative during the week of some peculiar business methods they have discovered on the part of a competitor who also does business in Pennsylvania.

For several consecutive days the Baker concern received telephone messages purporting to come from customers asking for prices on their various lines of goods. There was nothing especially unusual about these calls, except that they came with unusual frequency and in no case resulted in an order. Finally one day it became revealed that the calls were fakes. The individual who was doing the calling under false pretences was finally sharply questioned as to which member of the alleged firm he really was, the voice not being recognizable. He said he was the bookkeeper, but when Baker & Co. themselves called up the house he claimed to be from, the entire establishment denied having communicated with them at all. At once the Franklin Baker Co. sent the following letter to their trade:—

> Owing to the fact that a representative of a competitor of ours is using the names of our customers to obtain prices from us over the phone, we are obliged to refuse to give phone quotations unless we recognize the voice of the buyer.
> Please pardon us, therefore, if there is a little delay in quoting you. We assure you that this is for your own protection as well as ours.

The above letter was sent because the scheme at once revealed itself as that of some unscrupulous competitor, working in the hope of getting a private price which he could either cut under, or use to knock the Baker Co. with their own customers.

Up to this time the Baker people had no direct evidence as to the identity of the competitor who had done the thing, although there was in their mind the name of one concern as the only one in the business capable of such cheap tricks. At this juncture the Baker Co. received the following ridiculous though illuminating and significant letter:—

> Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 21, 1907.
> The Franklin Baker Company,
> Philadelphia, Pa.
> Gentlemen:—Within the last few days we have been told and shown copies of a circular letter you have sent out, under date of December 17, 1907, in reference to "The representative of a competitor securing your quotations, over the telephone, by using the names of your customers."
> As we are the representatives for the largest COCOANUT house in the country (L. Schepp Co., New York) and have caused you the loss of trade in Philadelphia, this looks to us like a fling at our business integrity. We will give you to DISTINCTLY UNDERSTAND that we are not interested, in any way whatever, what your prices may be, nor have we ever used any telephone and used the names of COCOANUT buyers to learn what you are doing.
> We shall be glad to hear from you regarding the above.
> Yours very truly,
> HARRY J. RORER.
> Representing L. Schepp Co., New York City. Schepp's Cocoanut.
> Dictated H. J. R.

Remembering that there are several other concerns selling shredded cocoanut in Pennsylvania, any one of whom the Baker Co. might have meant, the letter from the Schepp agent tells its own story. The Franklin Baker Co. are now about to send another communication to their trade reproducing the Rorer letter "as a matter of amusement," and adding at the bottom this concise comment: "If the shoe did not fit so nicely we do not think he would take such great pains to deny something of which he has not been accused."

The incident is simply another illustration of the fact that there are some concerns who when they enter business lay aside every principle of dignity, decency and fairness, and who will stoop to the most contemptible tricks to obtain an advantage over a competitor.

S. B. Goff & Sons Co., of Camden, N. J., are offering a 25-cent bottle of their cough syrup free to any dealer sending for it. They have a special offer that will interest you; better write to-day. You get in good company when you stock Goff's remedies, as more than 14,000 grocers are handling them.

No Adulterations in Breakfast Foods

Pennsylvania Dairy and Food Department Completes Its Investigation into Proprietary Brands of Cereals. Dr. Frear, State Chemist, Reports a Total Absence of Adulteration and Tonic Drugs. Considerable Misbranding However, and Many False Claims. Weights Extremely Variable.

As reported in the "Grocery World" at the time. the Pennsylvania Dairy and Food Department several months ago began an investigation into the quality of the principal brands of breakfast foods on the market. In all eighty-two samples were gathered and handed to Dr. William Frear, State chemist, for analysis. Dr. Frear is president of the Foods Standard Commission, acting under the immediate authority of the National Government and is one of the country's most eminent chemists. He has completed the work assigned him and submitted to Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust during the week an elaborate report, covering fifty-two typewritten pages.

The investigation made by Dr. Frear was purely chemical and microscopical. He says that "the determination of nutritive values was confined to ascertaining what the ingredients of the foods are and whether or not they are normal in composition." No attempt was made "to compare their digestibilities and nutritive values by direct physiological experiment." The examinations were conducted in such a manner as to ascertain as far as possible the truth or falsity of the high claims made by the manufacturers of these preparations or the charges made by others that "certain of these foods are highly medicated and that many of them are extensively adulterated with worthless materials, such as corn cobs, corn stalks, wheat bran, etc." The result of the examination tends to show that the claims of many manufacturers are highly colored and sometimes absolutely false, while the charges that drugs or foreign substances have been used is not sustained.

The following quotations from Dr. Frear's report indicate one weak point in many of the breakfast foods:—

> Freedom from insect invasion and destruction is an important condition for merchantable breakfast food. Many of the samples when opened for examination, were found to be infested, and many of them exhibited evidences of very extensive destruction. This was true, however, not only of packages that were manifestly shelf-worn, but of many that were fresh in external appearance. In view of the fact that these samples had been shipped in the same case with many other samples and had necessarily been stored for a time in the same lock-closets prior to examination, and also to the well-known fact that the insects causing such destruction are able to pass rapidly from package to package and equally well work their destructive effects, it has seemed fairest not to make a specific report with respect to the particular samples found infested, lest injustice be done to dealers and manufacturers whose goods were sound when sold to the agent.

Seven samples of rolled and crushed oats were examined. These were found to be practically all they were represented to be. There was no evidence that sulphurous acid had been employed as a bleaching agent and no instance of false labeling as to package weight. Except as barley is represented, in whole or in part, in some of the so-called malted breakfast foods, only one barley product appeared among the samples. The statement on the label that this food "contains more brain producing elements than any other breakfast food" is declared by Dr. Frear to be "not true, since there are other breakfast foods richer in cereal germs that contain more phosphorous."

The samples of corn products examined consisted of corn meal, hominy or grit, and cooked products. No harmful foreign products were discovered, although some of the labeling is not justified by the actual facts. Many samples of wheat products were examined. No foreign tissues were found in the samples, but the claims of many of the labels are false. Several cases of flagrant misbranding are noted. In the examination of the so-called malted or predigested breakfast foods, Dr. Frear found that in almost every instance the claims of the label are not borne out by the actual facts. Many of these foods claim great medicinal virtue and are presented to the consumer as restorers of brain power or nerve force, builders up of the human system. Claims of this sort are undoubtedly meant to deceive the public and attract buyers; there is absolutely no basis for many of the assertions found on the labels of some of these products. They constitute misbranding of the most flagrant sort and are violations of the pure food law.

In reference to self-raising flours, Dr. Frear says the samples examined "showed the presence of no sulphurous acid." There was no evidence of misbranding except in two samples which have on the principal face of the package in large type the name "Buckwheat," though it is explained elsewhere in small type that the articles are mixtures of buckwheat with other flour. These are distinctly in violation of the United States regulations. Several of the samples revealed considerable amounts of nitrous acid used for bleaching purposes. Dr. Frear says: "The sale of flours that have been bleached should not be permitted without a proper declaration of this treatment, for while it may be said that the effect of the treatment is an improvement in the appearance of the flour, the real object is to make possible the sale as a high-grade article of flour known by its color to be an inferior product. It is this in violation of the spirit of the Fourth Article of Section 5 of the Act of June 1, 1907, which defines a food as 'adulterated' if it be mixed, colored, powdered, coated, stained in a manner whereby damage or inferiority is concealed. It is not only in violation of the spirit of the act, but also contrary to its letter, if the definition of the verb stain is held to be 'to discolor'; that is, 'to alter the natural tint or hue.' United States regulation 12 embodies this view. It says: 'The term 'stain' includes any change produced by the addition of any substance to the exterior portion of the food which in any way alters the natural tint.'"

The report of Dr. Frear will appear in full in a special bulletin of the Dairy and Food Division, to be issued within the next thirty days for the information of the trade and the consuming public. In that report the various breakfast foods examined are distinctly named, with the results of the chemical analyses and the comments of the chemist upon the quality of the products and the character of the claims made by the manufacturers. While it has not been shown that the various foods contain anything injurious to health, it has been demonstrated that many of them are peculiarly susceptible to infection by insects and worms and that every household using them should own a microscope. And it has also been shown that they possess no superiority over other foods and that the extravagant claims put forth by their manufacturers are without foundation. That is the most serious charge that can be brought against them. They are sold in many instances because of the claim for medicinal properties which they lack.

The demonstration that bugs and worms exhibit a marked partiality for breakfast foods suggests that some regulation should be adopted to bring the product directly from the manufacturer to the consumer. If the newly manufactured samples sent the chemist by the agents of the Dairy and Food Division were contaminated by associating for a few days with some samples that were more ancient, it is a fair inference that the shelves of a retail grocery, no matter how careful the grocer, would ere long contain few cases of breakfast food that were free from bugs or worms or both. In no instance would the consumer be justified in eating the food without subjecting it to a microscopic examination, and in every instance it should be as fresh as possible, coming directly from the factory to the consumer, not subject to association with that manufactured some months previous, and almost certain to be infested by creatures that would relish nothing better than the change to new pastures in the fresh breakfast foods.

A brief summary of the result of his investigations follows:—

> It has been shown clearly that the materials used in preparing the cereal breakfast foods are wholesome grains, or some of their more valuable products, and that the addition of bran, corn cobs, corn stalk, or similar foreign substances, sometimes said to be used as adulterants, is purely imaginary. Furthermore, the samples exhibited a good condition of dryness, but many were wormy when received.
> In general they exhibited no evidence of the use of bleaching agents, except in the case of a few pancake flours.

The test for tonic materials, such as strychnine, and also for morphine, were negative.

On the other hand, the net weights contained in the packages were most variable.

The representations concerning the chemical composition and nutritive value of the preparations were often very highly misleading and sometimes utterly reckless.

The costs of these foods is low, if they are regarded as confections to please the taste, but very high if they be treated as substitutes for the ordinary domestic cereal products.

One merchant took 100 books to use on mean customers. He found they were good for all kinds of people and now uses 500 Forbes Indexed Coupon books every three months. See advertisement.

Can't Force a Manufacturer to Disclose His Formula.

The Supreme Court of South Dakota on Tuesday last declared void the provisions of the State pure food law requiring patent medicines to bear the formula telling the composition of the medicines. The decision releases R. F. Brown, a wholesale druggist of Sioux Falls, who applied for a writ of habeas corpus in a test case.

Heart-to-Heart Talks With Grocery Clerks

"Mutual Aid Sheets" Which a Large Eastern Retail Grocer Tucks in Each Clerk's Weekly Pay Envelope. Some Advice From the Head of the House on Selling Goods and Other Subjects.

[The "Grocery World" has come into possession of a series of "Mutual Aid Sheets," which are weekly little talks issued regularly to its clerks by one of the large retail grocery stores of the East. The talks are typewritten and a copy is enclosed in each clerk's pay envelope. They are so soundly practical and so useful generally that it is this journal's purpose to publish them weekly or bi-weekly for the edification of other clerks as well as other grocers who have clerks.—ED.]

NOW FOR "PLAIN THINGS."

The spirit of economy is abroad. Now it will be potatoes, pork chops, canned tomatoes and baking beans. Let us be ready. Tomorrow we'll make potatoes 39 cents a basket. We'll sell tomatoes 3 cans for 25 cents, and we'll push beans out at 7½ cents a quart. That's the way to fall in line. The store that does these things is simply sizing up a situation. Put your fancy stuff out of sight. Forget Christmas. Talk common things. Refer to the advertised staples. Lots of them are sorry they spent so much. Watch the result of this ad.

SELL TEA.

Begin to sell tea. Don't waste time knocking tea store presents. It does no good—except to the fellow you knock. Talk up that 37-cent Ceylon. Tell about its peculiar strength. Its flowery aroma. Its distinct flavor and its remarkably beautiful color in the cup. Find out your customer's kind and her price. Give her a sample of one for less money. Give it cheerfully and keep her in mind. Ask next time how she liked it. Cultivate the habit of remembering sample-giving. Women like it. They somehow fancy that they're singled out. Keep it up; it's a winner. But, gentlemen, sell tea. Don't be guilty of taking a grocery order week in and week out from the person who has "her own tea and coffee man."

BORING THE TRADE.

Be careful about boring people. If a person wants to look around, let her. Let her do it in peace and comfort. Many a man and woman is driven—actually driven, from a store by inopportune solicitation. Dogging people is practiced largely in the cheaper department stores. Avoid it. Study tact. Wait till she's ready. Don't act over-anxious. Make her feel at home and she'll come again, with an order.

THE UNADVERTISED COUNTER

is telling. Blue Label catsup at 20 cents. Baker's cocoa at 22 cents. Fels Naptha soap at 4½ cents. Ivory at 7 cents, and such things as these that are displayed on the unadvertised counter must meet the view of the stranger. The impression given is a good one. But don't appear to push these things or to give the impression that they're catch pennies. But rather that the prices are in line with other things in the store and are merely shown up as a matter of course.

"Figures Don't Lie"

SUPPOSE somebody paid you for all the eggs broken in your store or while being delivered. Did you ever stop to think how much money it would mean to you?

¶ Do you know that the average breakage of eggs is eight to a case of thirty dozen? Suppose you sell 100 cases a year, that's 800 broken eggs; suppose you only pay 20 cents per dozen for them, that means 66⅔ dozen or $13.35. Suppose we can show you how to save nearly every penny of this sum! Suppose we can show you how to handle eggs in half the time without breakage, would it interest you? We will do so gladly if you will write us, and the information won't cost you anything.

What You Want is Uniformity

When we launched Gurnse fancy print butter on the market we realized that the quality which the grocer most needed in butter was uniformity. It were far better for him to sell a good second grade, if it could be held uniform, than the fanciest grade to-day and something different to-morrow.

Gurnse never varies. It comes from our own dairies and so is under our supervision from the very beginning. From the churn to the carton it is relentlessly inspected, and when it finally passes the inspection of the Philadelphia Produce Exchange it can be accepted for as near perfect as butter can be.

Manager "Prices-Current."

The Fight.

The fight seems to be on between the jobbing interests and the large organized retail buyers, over the latter's right to buy from the manufacturer, and it is probably a good thing that it is. It has been pending for a long while, it had to come some time, so let it come now and be fought out.

In Philadelphia there are about ten large retail buyers. Of these the largest is the Retail Grocers' Association, which buys for 700 stores. Next come the Acme Tea Co. with about 180 stores, the William Butler Co. with about 100, and several more with chains of retail establishments down to 15 or 20 in number.

Up to the present time practically all these concerns have been able to buy all but a very few articles direct from the manufacturers. The largest have been able to buy everything on the list except perhaps one article. As a matter of fact, in some lines the Retail Grocers' Association has become one of the two or three very largest buyers in the entire country.

The Toasted Corn Flake Co. and the Natural Food Co. are the only manufacturers to disturb the direct-buying relations of these concerns up to the present time. The first manufacturer named has cut them all off, but the second has cut off only the Retail Grocers' Association. In this it has done an inexplicably unfair and inconsistent thing. To reach a conclusion that no retailer or set of retailers should buy direct from the manufacturer, and in furtherance of that conclusion to cut off all such concerns at once is one thing, but to reach that conclusion, and then cut off the one concern most entitled, by reason of its larger purchases, to remain, is another. The Natural Food Co. does not undertake to explain the philosophy which leads it to refuse to sell the Retail Grocers' Association, representing 700 stores, while freely accepting direct orders from chain-store concerns with twenty stores, and indeed it could not explain it on any rational ground. The only available explanation seems to be that the Retail Grocers' Association, by reason of its importance, has been made the special object of attack by the Wholesale Grocers' Association. This, however, does not relieve the Natural Food Co. from a position which it will be hard to make the retail trade of the country believe is fair.

The jobbers are excessively short-sighted in stirring up this wasp's nest. They have in the "Grocery World's" judgment been very badly advised. The secretary of their organization, whose work this is, has nothing to lose by the controversy. He is not in business, and if he makes his personal point he is probably quite indifferent to the possible losses of those affiliated with him. For the retail concerns cut off by the manufacturers will not buy of the jobber, and if they did it would not be from the members of the Wholesalers' Association. They will simply stop buying anywhere the goods of the manufacturers who cut them off. Furthermore, no member of the Retail Grocers' Association bought all his goods from the association. The balance of his trade went to jobbers, and it was often a very considerable balance. There is already a well-concerted plan to divert this trade to jobbers not members of the Wholesalers' Association, and even if this succeeds only in part it will be felt. Thus the manufacturers who allowed themselves to be influenced by the Wholesalers' Association will suffer, the jobbers responsible for the manufacturers' action will suffer, and nobody will gain anything whatever.

Another reason why the jobbers have made a great mistake is that for months the 150 retail grocers' associations which compose the Pennsylvania Retail Merchants' Association have been eager to organize a State co-operative buying organization. In one month a strong hand could fuse them into the largest single buying organization in the world. There is much reason for expecting that those in control of the State Association may consider this the ripe moment for such a movement.

The Woman's Home Companion.

In answer to the "Grocery World's" challenge to the "Woman's Home Companion" to reveal the scene of its January article attacking grocers, the following highly evasive and unsatisfactory letter has been received:—

THE CROWELL PUBLISHING CO.
WOMAN'S HOME COMPANION
FARM AND FIRESIDE

New York, N. Y., Dec. 31, 1907.

My Dear Sir:—In reply to your letter of December 23d, which arrived during my absence from the office, I am very glad to know that you will reproduce the greater part of our article entitled "Can We Afford to Be Clean?" in your publication.

We are very willing to give the names of the Philadelphia suburb referred to in our January article and of the two stores at which purchases were made—but not for publication in the "Grocery World" or for any other use which might result in harm to the merchants in question. It is our invariable custom to give full information to our readers and friends, and I invite you when you are next in New York to call at this office. If you are still curious at that time about the names of the grocers whom we used as examples and if you can convince us that your use of these names will not in any way reflect discredit on them or us, we shall be very glad to place such information as we have at your service.

We have noted with much interest the comments which you have made upon our article, and in the thought that they might be of some interest to our readers we are reproducing some of them in our February number.

Yours sincerely,
FREDERICK L. COLLINS,
Editor.

To E. J. Buckley, Esq., Vice-President "The Grocery World," Philadelphia, Penna.

The "Grocery World" has even less hesitation now than before the above was received in expressing its belief that the article reproduced last week was in part at least a pure fable.

The writer has been a newspaper writer for several years, and has learned among other things to tell a newspaper fake as far as he can see it. The "Woman's Home Companion" article reads in part not only like a fake, but like an exceedingly clumsy fake by a writer grossly ignorant of his subject. A sample statement was touched upon last week that a grocer close to Philadelphia sold prunes as seconds. Prunes are never sold as seconds. Another statement was that certain roasted coffee purchased at a certain dirty grocery store and analyzed, proved to be a blend of Mocha, Java, Rio and chicory. That we believe to be a pure invention. Probably never since the world began has Rio coffee been blended with Mocha and Java, as the result would be an outrage on the palate. Furthermore, even if it had been, no analysis could disclose it for two reasons: 1, not even the ablest coffee expert can pick out different grades of coffee blended and then roasted; 2, the chemical constituents of Mocha, Java and Rio are so nearly identical that the keenest chemical analysis could not detect the difference.

The Returning Good Times.

The prosperity of this country must invariably depend upon the employment of its labor. So long as labor is generally occupied at good wages, there may be occasional pinches, due to the high cost of necessities, but there can never be any real hard times. On the contrary, with labor unemployed to any marked degree, there can be no good times, for the only foundation upon which prosperity can build is not present.

For several weeks the largest industrial concerns in the country have been dispensing with men. Others have been threatening to, and this much more than any scarcity of currency has been responsible for the temporary tightness of the times.

Thousands of these idle men will this week return to work. In Pennsylvania alone it is estimated that 10,000 have taken or will take up their tools again. This cannot fail to have an immediate effect upon the situation. It will restore confidence in the future, by far the most vital factor in the recurrence of prosperity, and it will increase the demand for merchandise, the next important factor. As for increasing the supply of currency, that is a secondary consideration, for if there is real need of money, men can create it out of sticks and stones if need be.

Already the prices of many food products have been forced downward by the lack of demand. Others are expected to fall somewhat during January, even though the demand should improve. They are too high, probably in many cases not higher than market conditions would warrant, yet still too high for the people to buy much of.

Dr. Wiley's Retreats.

Dr. H. W. Wiley's argument with the Corn Products Co., which controls glucose manufacture in this country, over whether the latter's product should be called glucose or corn syrup, is still unended. While it is probably politic for the glucose concern to conciliate if it can the food authorities, in order to avoid all possibility of trouble, it is still aggravating to see it wasting so much time with Dr. Wiley over a question in which he hasn't a leg to stand on.

To those who have kept a careful watch on the administration of the Federal food law, the retreats which Dr. Wiley has been compelled to make from arbitrary positions assumed in the beginning show clearly how very arbitrary and unwarranted they were.

In the original regulations Dr. Wiley ruled that the giver of a guarantee of purity must stand prosecution, even though he also held a guarantee for the same article. Only a month ago he was compelled to give out an opinion by the United States Attorney-General overruling him absolutely.

Dr. Wiley said that the labels of imported food products must be printed in English. A few weeks ago he retracted this and decided that importers could do as they pleased about it.

In the beginning Dr. Wiley announced unofficially that in all probability no preservative or artificial coloring could be used. Overborne by the Secretary of Agriculture he has been compelled to pass goods preserved with benzoate of soda or sulphuric acid and to himself give out a list of dyes that could be used.

His attempt to dictate the form of a food label, even of such as conformed in all respects to the law, was Dr. Wiley's most flagrant assumption of unlawful authority. A short time ago he issued another ruling explaining that his label regulation was not mandatory, but merely advisory.

And so he has been compelled to withdraw from one illegal position after another. And there will be more retreats before the food law is completely threshed out. His regulation defining an original package, for example, contradicts every court decision on the books. Dr. Wiley, with all of his admitted ability, is a mischief-maker.

California's New Food Law Now in Effect.

The Pure Food and Drug Law of California went into effect on January 1, 1908. The enforcement of this law is placed with the State Board of Health, which will locate a laboratory at the State University Laboratory, Berkeley. Prof. M. E. Jaffa, a food expert of international reputation and a chemist of renown, has been appointed director. The law makes the sheriff of each county an agent of the Board for the collection of samples, and upon a verified complaint being filed with him must purchase samples and send them to the laboratory for examination.

"The Best Known and Known as the Best"

The past history of the "EXTON" crackers reflects their future. They will be in demand long after the inferior ones are buried under the sod of bitter experience.

The energy expended in endeavoring to supplant the always-reliable "EXTON" crackers with others of no reputation and little merit would bring far more net profit to the grocer if used in pushing the sale of the high-grade "EXTON" brand.

If you will carefully note the methods of the grocers who are forging ahead and doing the largest all-the-year-around business, you'll find it's the trade that handle the old reliable "EXTON" cracker.

A Quarter is a Popular Price

Not a grocer in business but has a 25-cent coffee. It's a custom of the trade to which there are probably no exceptions.

If he is wise he will sell more 25-cent coffee than coffee at any other price, for a quarter is a popular price and for that price, at good profit to himself, he can sell a coffee that will satisfy almost anybody.

The most taking 25-cent leader in the market is our Moco-Mo. It is a full-bodied, fragrant blend and packed in a most unique way, first in a sealed bag, then the bag in a sealed carton. All the fragrant freshness that the coffee has when it comes hot from the roaster, is held until the coffee is opened in the consumer's kitchen.

Hams That Always Sell

There is another sort of ham much less preferred to the absolutely unidentified and unbranded ham, and that is the ham of the packer who gets good raw material to-day and poor to-morrow.

Both of these kill the grocers' trade, because they are so irregular. They please his customers to-day and provoke them to-morrow. No trade can last long under hot and cold applications.

Swift's PREMIUM Hams are always regular. We have the pick of the hogs of the whole country and hence we can keep the quality even the whole year through. Swift's PREMIUM Hams hold and increase trade.

New Year Retail Prospects. Old Markets to Go. Mr. Callanan Says It's Glucose. No Decrease of Bottled Liquor Trade as Result of Temperance Campaign. Small News of the Trade.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

New York, January 3, 1908.

With kindly words of caution and warning offered to them from various sources, the retail grocers are not entering upon the new year with any reckless spirit likely to lead them into extravagances in buying supplies or otherwise. Yet the writer can assert that some of the most conservative and successful of the retailers have little patience with the cry of hard times and say that the panic period has passed. "As far as the grocery trade is concerned," said one large retailer, "there is nothing to fear for those who have their business on a substantial basis. Everybody was frightened for a time, but conditions are now improving and will soon improve even faster."

The New Year's trade was quite satisfactory, according to a number of representative retailers who were asked about conditions. Some said that it was better than the Christmas trade, although others found the latter all that could be desired. Collections have improved, partly as the result of the fact that banks are getting nearer to a cash basis. Savings banks that had a $50 limit a short time ago are now meeting all ordinary demands. While the limit was in force a person who tried to insist on getting more than the amount mentioned was subjected to the rule requiring a 60-day notice of withdrawal.

City officials are at last showing some sympathy with the movement against the downtown retail markets, especially the old Washington Market. There is a plan to tear down this market and to build an office structure for city departments or to sell the land, which is worth some millions. The principal objections have been, however, not against the market itself, but against the stalls built on the sidewalks outside the market. The stalls shut out the light from the market itself and are an injury to the tenants inside as much as to the entire neighborhood. The authorities have in the past, on various occasions, convicted some of the short-weight practices and of selling food that was not fit to eat, especially meat.

It has been charged in behalf of the retail grocers that the sidewalk dealers have sold more decayed food than has been sold at any other place of equal size on the globe. The tricks of the outsiders are said to have brought the entire market into a certain disrepute, much undeserved in the case of the regular dealers renting space inside.

Although some of the city officials now talk of tearing down the market it is likely that there will be strong pressure to allow it to stand and to improve it by removing the objectionable sheds built on the sidewalks and by making it cleaner and brighter in various ways. It is believed that a decision will be reached by the coming spring.

The market is one of the oldest in the city. Although the uptown movement of population long ago reduced its usefulness, yet it has always been a busy place, as steady streams of people pour through it and by it on the way to cars and ferries, and it retains some of the old time trade of people who think that they ca buy cheaper there than elsewhere. But the days when farmers brought produce to markets and sold to the consumers have long since passed in New York.

Glucose and not corn syrup is the right name, says L. J. Callanan, who has further sent a letter to Secretary Wilson, of the Department of Agriculture, expressing the hope that this official will not change his recent ruling on this subject. The New York grocer says that he thoroughly disapproves of the efforts of those who are trying to get a new ruling. In part he says: "If glucose is healthy a syrup which is composed of 85 per cent. of it should be called glucose syrup. If it is unhealthy, why should it be sold at all? It was a mistake to call it 'corn syrup.'

"I have never known an article to meet with success which has been put on the market under false pretences. Look at oleomargarine. To-day after years of fighting, it is still under the ban. If it had been introduced as oleomargarine, sold as oleomargarine, without being colored, it would be a staple article in this country to-day. But, no, the people who introduced it claimed that it would not sell unless it was colored to imitate butter. This is where the mistake was made. It is conceded by every man who has looked into it carefully that oleomargarine, properly made, is as good as any butter and will keep better than butter. What is its position as a mercantile article to-day? It could not be sold unless it was sold as butter—a fraud being committed on the party to whom it was sold. This I contend would not have been the case had it not been colored.

"It is idle to say that if an article has merit it will not sell under its own name. If its merits are properly placed before the people it will sell, but the minute a doubt is cast upon an article and its name is changed in order to hide the name of the material from which it is made, its doom is sealed. It may run for a short time; expensive and lying advertising may cause a good temporary demand for it, but it will be a continual fight, with the result that in the end it will be forced out of the market. If the fight now made on its healthfulness and its purity, it will become a standard article, and will be used by the people of this country with pleasure in quantities which will tax the capacity of the Corn Products people to produce."

In conclusion, Mr. Callanan declares that in his opinion the time has come when manufacturers and grocers will find it the wise and the popular plan to make the labels tally as close as is possible with the food that is sold, so as to avoid anything that might have even the appearance of deception.

In view of the growth of Prohibition sentiment as made evident by the enactment of laws prohibiting the sale of liquor in a number of Western and Southern States, some have supposed that the liquor trade all through the country is declining, and that the distilleries have seen their best days. The writer asked several grocers who sell bottled liquor and wines and they agreed that their trade has not been curtailed. It may be that the saloon trade would feel the effect more quickly than would the dealers in bottled supplies, if the public is getting more abstemious, as is supposed in some quarters. The actions of employers in discouraging their men from drinking, as illustrated several days ago in the case of a railroad president calling on his force to take the pledge, must have a practical result, it is argued. Yet it has often been said that New York is not easy to change from its ways, and so it may be that the liquor trade is not declining here as much as elsewhere, if it is declining at all.

The Business Men's Sunday-Closing Association continues to distribute literature appealing to religious, patriotic and to union labor sentiment to close the stores on the first day of the week. In a statement now being sent out, the association says that there may be excuses, in rare cases, for buying food on Sunday, but there can be none at all for buying anything else. Yet the excuse that sometimes it is necessary to buy food on Sunday serves to keep the delicatessen stores open between certain hours of Sunday, and as they compete with the small grocers some of the latter keep open for the same reason.

A report of the Coffee Exchange of the city of New York for 1907 shows that the sales were 10,555,260 bags, compared with 18,112,500 bags in 1906. The highest price paid for future was in March, when the May, 1907, sold at 6.70 cents. The lowest price for future was in January, when that month sold for 5.05 cents. The highest quotation during the year for No. 7 coffee, the standard grade, was 7⅜ cents and the lowest 5⅞ cents.

Words and Their Meaning

Pork and Beans are simply words, they don't mean anything in particular—except a variety of goods packed under this title of an equal variety of quality and character.

Snider's Pork and Beans mean much—this name on a can means that your trade will keep coming to you for more. They are put up with one idea—to be so unusually good that nothing else will take their place. This is the reason that grocers everywhere are not asked for Pork and Beans any more, but Snider's Pork and Beans. You will get a good understanding of the reason if you will serve a can on your own table.

Wholesale grocery firms and importers of nuts have appointed a committee to formulate plans for relieving trade abuses. The rejections and cancellations have been especially numerous this season, the tight money market being variously given as the cause or the excuse. It is proposed to have a form of contract similar to that in use in the California fruit trade. The committee comprises Frank Farnan, of LaManna, Azema & Farnan; H. W. Fanning, of Austin, Nichols & Co.; E. J. James, of Bennett, Day & Co.; Wm. A. Higgins, of Wm. A. Higgins & Co., and William Hills, Jr.

FRED. A. MCGILL.

Jobbers After a Better Canned Goods Contract.

The National Association of Wholesale Grocers will undertake to bring to pass a better form of canned goods contract, a demand for which has arisen especially strong of late. To that end Secretary Beckmann has called a conference between 15 or 20 of the leading canned goods buyers of the country and the Contract Committee of his association, to be held at Chicago on January 20th. The National Association Executive Committee will convene at the Auditorium Hotel on January 21st and the chairman of the committees of the organization the preceding night. It was deemed a good time to take up the question of a more satisfactory and binding canned goods contract, especially as such action will be in line with the proposed action of the National Canners at Cincinnati on February 3d to 8th. Between the two great organizations of buyers and producers it is hoped to evolve a uniform contract which will obviate the deplorable conditions of cancellation and rejection, which have been especially grievous this year.

Specialty Salesman Facing Trouble

Proceedings About to Begin Against T. H. M. Townsend, Formerly of Sharon Hill, on Questionable Check Transactions. Accused Also of Embezzlement.

Civil and criminal proceedings are about to be begun in this city against T. H. M. Townsend, a specialty salesman formerly of Sharon Hill, Pa., but now of Wildwood, N. J. The charge will be questionable financial transactions.

It seems that Townsend, who is quite well known among the retail trade of this section, has had something of a criminal record. He is accused of embezzling a large sum of money from a former employer, a local wholesale grocery house, a few years ago. For this he was never prosecuted, as a trust company which had become his bondsman made good the money.

The plaintiffs in the action now about to be brought are H. T. Barnes, a grocer, 550 North 56th street, and F. Meixner, confectioner, 4501 Springfield avenue. In the first case Townsend induced Mr. Barnes to cash a check made by himself, which turned out to be worthless. All efforts to induce the fellow to refund the money have failed. In the second case Townsend induced Mr. Meixner to cash a check not made by himself, but given him by somebody else. Payment on this check was stopped, and in this case also Townsend has never made good. It is reported that he has been in the habit for years of requesting retail grocers to cash his checks.

Window-Dressing Articles Wanted

For several months the "Grocery World" has been looking for the right man to take charge of its "Window-Dressing Department" and contribute a good, suggestive weekly article. We have tried several, but none was exactly what was wanted.

We will now attempt to get these articles from our subscribers, probably every one of whom has some technical knowledge of window-dressing. What we want is articles clearly describing window displays that can be made by the average retailer; not necessarily new or original—in fact, those which have been used successfully are perhaps preferable to all others.

For all acceptable articles, the "Grocery World" will pay an average price of $5 each. All matter sent in under this arrangement should be addressed to the "Window-Dressing Department." If drawings are also sent they should be made throughout in black ink (not pencil).

THE GROCERY MARKETS

Tea.

The tea market has remained in statu quo during the past week, and very little business has been done, owing to the holiday. Values are unchanged throughout, however, and everything is steadily held. Through all the financial stress, no weakness whatever has developed in tea. The demand is from hand to mouth only.

Coffee.

The market for Rio and Santos coffee has remained steady during the past week. Most of the trade seem to be expecting an advance in the near future, with a much heavier demand from interior points. The hand-to-mouth-policy which has marked the trade for the past six months has had the effect of bringing buyers continually into the market, and when the money tightness lifts there may be a considerable increase in the demand. There is still no indication that the speculative public intends to come into the coffee option market, and until they do the plans of the syndicate will be considerably hampered. Arbuckle Bros. are reported to have been very large buyers of all grades of washed coffees during the last few weeks, and this has resulted in a considerable stiffening of the mild market. Java and Mocha are unchanged and steady.

Sugar.

There has been no special change in sugar during the week. The raw situation is still steady to strong, and an advance in refined would not be unexpected, as the margin between raw and refined is now down to 70 points, except in New Orleans, where it is considerably larger. A temporary shortage in raw sugar during the present month is still indicated. The demand for refined sugar is very moderate.

Just before the "Grocery World" went to press, prices on refined sugar advanced 10 points.

Syrup and Molasses.

Glucose is unchanged for the week. Compound syrup is in fair seasonable demand at ruling prices. Sugar syrup is unchanged and in fair demand. Molasses is strong in New Orleans and almost equally so in secondary markets. The price for fine molasses is high and firm, owing to light supply. The demand is fair.

Fish.

The fish market has been exceedingly quiet during the week, but as to mackerel, firm. Norway mackerel is in extremely light demand, and if an active demand develops prices may go even higher than the present very high level. The Irish catch has been a partial failure up to the present time, although the situation is very strong. Cod, hake and haddock are steady, but in only fair demand. Domestic sardines are strong by reason of light supplies, but the rumored advance has not yet come. Imported sardines are strong and scarce. Salmon is steady, unchanged and quiet.

Canned Goods.

The canned goods market has had a quiet week. Tomatoes are unchanged and in very light demand. The talk of the 1907 pack has now culminated in a semi-official opinion that it may reach 14,000,000 cases. This seems extremely formidable, but if it is true, as many packers state, that only 20 per cent. of the pack, whatever it may have been, remains in the packers' hands, it will not actually be as formidable as it looks. Corn is dull and unchanged. Peas are steady, unchanged and dull. Peaches are scarce, quiet and unchanged. Apples are weaker and it is probable that an offer of $2.75 for New York State gallons might be accepted. Maine gallon apples are offered at $2.40, which is relatively low, as the difference between Maine and New York State brands ought not to be over 25 cents a dozen. The Baltimore small line is unchanged and inactive. California canned goods in first hands are very dull.

Dried Fruits.

Prunes are dull and unchanged, both in primary and secondary markets. Peaches and apricots show no change and little business. Currants are fairly active at ruling prices. Raisins are moving to some extent at prices that show little strength. Apples are quiet and a little easy. Citron is easier, now that the holidays are over. Figs are inclined to be easy also. Dates are now about the cheapest dried fruit on the market.

Beans and Peas.

Pea beans are unchanged from last week, on a basis of $2.25 both on spot and to come forward. The demand is light. Marrows are quoted at the same figure, and are quiet. California limas are unchanged and quiet. Dried peas of all grades are firm, unchanged and in fair demand.

Butter.

The butter market is about unchanged. The receipts of fancy fresh butter continue very light, and the demand is readily absorbing everything as fast as it arrives. Storage stocks are being reduced satisfactorily and the market is in a very healthy condition on the present basis. No change is anticipated during the next few days.

Eggs.

The egg market is about unchanged from a week ago. The fresh receipts clean up every day on arrival. There has been some increase in the receipts of fresh, but the demand continues very good and the present market is firm and unchanged. The future depends on the production of new-laid eggs. If present weather continues, there is likely to be an increase in supply, but not sufficient, probably, to change prices. Stocks of storage eggs are gradually decreasing, and the market as to them is unchanged.

Cheese.

The cheese market is very quiet, as is characteristic of the season. Stocks of cheese are lighter than usual at this season, and prices are 10 per cent. above a year ago. There is not likely to be any increased consumption of cheese during the next few weeks, and the price is therefore not likely to change.

Provisions.

The market for smoked meats is unchanged, and the demand continues dull. There is not likely to be any increase in the demand for the next few weeks, and the future depends on the supply of hogs. Pure and compound lard are unchanged, and a fair demand is reported for both. Family and butt pork are unchanged and dull. Canned meats and dried beef are unchanged and the demand is light.

Produce.

Pennsylvania potatoes, 78 to 80 cents per bushel; York State, 75 to 78 cents per bushel; Jersey, 45 to 50 cents per basket, demand fair to good; sweet potatoes, primes, $1 per basket; culls, 75 cents per basket, scarce and good demand; yellow turnips, 40 cents per basket, 65 cents per bushel; white, 25 cents per basket, demand fair; white onions, $1.35 per bushel crate; yellow globe, 65 to 70 cents per bushel, demand fair; savoy cabbage, 50 cents per barrel; domestic, $2.50 to $3 per 100; Danish, $9 to $10 per ton, demand fair; horseradish, $3.50 to $4 per barrel, demand good; watercress, $2 to $2.50 per barrel, demand good; parsnips, $1.50 per barrel, 30 cents per basket, demand fair; spinach, $1.75 per barrel, demand good; carrots, $1.50 to $1.75 per barrel, 35 to 40 cents per basket, demand fair; oyster plants, 3 to 3½ cents per bunch, demand fair to good; beets, 2 to 2½ cents per bunch, demand good; York State celery, 40 to 60 cents per bunch; Pennsylvania, 6 to 14 cents per bunch, demand good.

Green Fruit.

Apples, Kings, $4.50 to $5.25 per barrel; Baldwins, $2.50 to $3.50 per barrel; Hulbersons, $3.50 to $4.50 per barrel; Greenings, $3 to $4.50 per barrel; Pippins, $2.50 to $3.50 per barrel; Spitz, $3.75 to $5 per barrel; Spy, $3 to $4 per barrel; Bellflower, $3 to $4 per barrel, demand fair; bananas, jumbo, $1.75 to $2.25 per bunch; firsts, $1.25 to $1.75 per bunch; 8-hands, $1 to $1.25 per bunch; 7-hands, 75 to 90 cents per bunch; 6-hands, 50 to 65 cents per bunch, demand poor; pineapples, $2.25 to $2.75 per box, demand fair; lemons, $2.50 to $3 per box, demand fair to good; Florida oranges, $2 to $2.75 per box; California, $2 to $2.75 per box, demand fair; grapefruit, Florida, $3.50 to $5 per box, demand poor; tangerines, $3.75 to $4.50 per box, demand fair to good.

Nuts.

Peanuts, green, choice, 4¼ cents per pound; fancy, 5 cents per pound; jumbo, 6½ cents per pound; roasted, choice, $1 per bushel; fancy, $1.25 per bushel; jumbo, $1.50 per bushel, demand fair; almonds, 19 to 20 cents per pound; Brazils, 11¾ cents per pound; filberts, 10¾ cents per pound; pecans, 11 cents per pound; walnuts, grenobles, 12 cents per pound; marbots, 13 cents per pound, demand poor.

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORTS.

Imported Fish Products.

The holiday week has naturally been a very quiet one for importers of salt fish. Nevertheless Irish and Norway mackerel remained very firm, and only some small hand-to-mouth business was done. These small purchases show very clearly that stocks in the hands of the jobbers are not plentiful and we look forward to a decided improvement in demand and price very shortly when the demand will set in again.

Holland herrings are dull and featureless and offers are way below import cost.

Scotch herrings are dull, but rather well held.

Irish fat herrings are scarce and prices tending higher.

Imported Oil Sardines.—No change to be reported. Failure of fishing seems to be general. To-day we have a report from our shippers in Japan that there also the catch this season seems to be more of a failure than ever before, so no supplies can be expected from there this season.

The fishing of sprats which had started was interrupted by the stormy weather and has not been resumed as yet. In Norway there is no fishing at present. Demand for Norway smoked sardines continues quite good and prices are very firm. The Norway smoked sardine has taken the place to a very large extent of the French sardine, owing to its scarcity this season.

Spices.

Market keeps very steady, with fair demand. We feel that the trade has allowed their stock to run very low, and we look for a large business for the full line of spices after Monday next. A large demand will stimulate the market and will have the tendency to advance prices.

Pepper remains steady but practically unchanged. There has been neither buying nor selling pressure of any consequence. We can report no crop news of any value.

Cayennes.—The market is firm, present price low.

Cassias steady and in good demand. There has been no change of importance during the week.

Cloves are very steady and slightly higher.

Pimento (Allspice).—Very active, prices unchanged.

Mace is in good demand and prime goods are scarce.

Nutmegs are in fair demand at lowest prices ever recorded.

Gingers.—Demand very steady, price practically unchanged.

Rubbed sage and sweet herbs are still selling in a most satisfactory way. Saltpetre is also in demand.

ASSOCIATION NEWS.

San Francisco, Cal.

At the last meeting of the San Francisco (Cal.) Retail Grocers' Association the following rather unusual resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, Our attention has been called to the fact that several city salesmen who call on the grocery trade have lately been amusing themselves by stating almost daily that different grocers "were in financial difficulties," "closed by the sheriff," etc., and

Whereas, Such stories have been investigated by our secretary and found to be absolutely false; and

Whereas, Stories of this kind are both harmful and detrimental to our members so accused; be it

Resolved, That we ask our members to notify our office of the names of any persons who make assertions of this kind, that we may take such steps as we may deem necessary to protect the financial standing of the member so falsely accused.

Enter the Yearly Canned Goods Sales

Department Stores with Grocery Departments Again Quoting Their Phenomenal Canned Goods Values. A Sample List of Prices from a New York Department Store.

Now enter the canned goods sales, which in the department stores, and in a lesser degree in the large central grocery stores, are coming to represent the close of the year just as surely as the sales of feminine underclothes. Already the New York department stores are out with half-page advertisements of the special canned goods sale. Owing to the condition of the market the figures quoted this year are especially interesting. Here are the values offered by the Simpson-Crawford Co., of New York City:—

New York State "cream" corn, can, 8 cents; case, $1.85.

Baked beans with pork and tomato sauce, can, 10 cents; case, $2.25.

Jersey whole tomatoes, "Royal Stuart," can, 14 cents; case, $3.25.

Whole tomatoes, can, 28 cents; dozen, $3.30.

Beets, can, 35 cents; dozen, $3.97.

Sugar peas, "Royal Stuart," can, 15 cents; case, $3.40.

Tiny sifted peas, French style, can, 20 cents; case, $4.50.

Maine sugar corn, can, 12 cents; case, $2.75.

California asparagus, can, 49 cents; dozen, $5.95.

California asparagus tips, can, 42 cents; dozen, $4.95.

Maine succotash, can, 15 cents; case, $3.30.

Green lima beans, can, 17 cents; case, $3.90.

Stringless beans, can, 19 cents; case, $4.40.

Pumpkin, can, 12 cents; dozen, $1.40.

Spinach, can, 15 cents; dozen, $1.75.

French peas, Petit Pois, can, 23 cents; dozen, $2.70.

California lemon cling peaches, can, 30 cents; case, $7.00.

Yellow Crawford peaches, can, 19 cents; case, $4.40.

Green gage plums, can, 15 cents; case, $3.45.

Bartlett pears, can, 22 cents; case, $6.20.

Apricots, can, 30 cents; case, $7.00.

White cherries, can, 37 cents; case, $8.75.

Singapore pineapples chunks, can, 18 cents; dozen, $2.10.

THE SCIENCE OF ADVERTISING

This Department is devoted to the criticism of advertising matter sent in, to the devising of new advertising ideas for special occasions, upon request, and to the suggesting of original advertisements when data is supplied. All communications sent in for this Department should be addressed to the Editor of Science of Advertising. They will be filed in their order and taken up according to strict rotation.

Mr. P. B. Albenesius, grocer of Charleston, S. C., sends in a couple of small circulars for criticism. Each one measures 5½ x 8¾ inches and is printed in black on good white paper. There is no use reproducing both, as they are both along the same line. Here is the one I consider the better:—

IT HAS COME!

By it, we mean our New Meat Counter. We are going to make This Department of our Store as attractive as possible by offering the best of everything in the Meat Line at Attractive Prices, and at the same time Guarantee every pound that goes out.

For to-day we offer the following:

SAUSAGES—Best Pork Sausages, a fresh lot, just in, 12 cts. the pound.

HAMS—Those Best Pig Hams. Sold fine last week so ordered another lot, which are just in, 10 cents the pound.

BONELESS HAM—Something nice, "eats good," only 15 cents the pound.

HOG HEAD CHEESE—The good kind, 10 cents the pound,

HERRINGS—Another supply of those nice Herrings, by the box, 15 cents.

LARD—We sell the Very Best Leaf Lard, pure and white, at 12 cents the pound.

BUTTER—We sold lots of Best Elgin Creamery Butter last week and hope to sell more this week Every pound fresh and sweet.

CUT HAMS—Just in another lot of guaranteed Hams. They cut good and sweet. 15 cents the pound.

CHEESE—Best Cream Cheese, good and fresh, 20 cts. the pound

SAUSAGES—Vienna Sausages, the best that can be bought. Try a pound, 12 cents.

The above articles are only a few that we name of our Stock. We have gotten a great many New Goods this Week. Hecker's Oatmeal, Hecker's Cream Farina, Hecker's Buckwheat, Superlative Flour, Etc.. We will be glad to have you come to our Store at any time and look around and be convinced that our Goods are Fresh and Clean.

P. B. ALBENESIUS,
THE GROCER,
S.E. Cor. Queen and Franklin Sts. Bell Phone 2530

There is very little in this circular to criticise, so far as the matter is concerned. It is poorly printed, however. Almost all of the type in it is old and battered and dirty. The effect is not good. I should insist that my printer use newer type, or if he hasn't got it, I should go to some one who has. Nothing so destroys the thoroughbred appearance of a piece of printing as battered, dirty type

There is one other fault to blame on the printer—the prices which appear in the small paragraphs should have been set in small boldface type to distinguish them from the balance of the text. The name of the goods and their price would then have been given the extra prominence that both ought to have had.

When I first read the head of this circular and the introduction I thought it was good, and I still think so, but it lacks one point which I believe would strike almost any one. This advertiser is making a sensation of the fact that his new meat counter has come, but he doesn't even suggest anything in his advertisement which shows that the coming of the new counter is worthy to have a sensation made over it. What is the new counter going to do for the business? Is it going to permit him to carry more meat than he did before? Or a more varied assortment? Or to get his orders out more quickly? Or to employ extra clerks? If there is any advantage to be gained from the counter, tell what it is, and the advertisement at once gains point. If there is no advantage to be gained from it, then the space given it in this advertisement has been wasted. Do you see the point I am making?

This advertisement is well prepared, speaking now of the reading matter, but I would be a little more explicit about the goods if I were this advertiser. Instead of simply saying "another supply of those nice herrings," I should say something like this: "We now have some more of those herrings you liked so well on account of their delicate curing." Go just a little further into the description of the goods advertised.

I should never use for the final paragraph of this circular the type that has been used. It is thin and hard to read. Regular body type should be used for all reading matter.

How to Get a Roll Top Desk Free.

The Knickerbocker Chocolate Co., of New York, have made an arrangement with the Manufacturers' Trade-Mark Association, the big premium clearing-house of New York, which enables them to substantially reward retailers who show an interest in increasing the sale of Barker's Hasty Lunch Chocolate, Bedford and Blue Ribbon Cocoas.

These goods are so fine that it is hard to sell anything else to consumers once they have had them; so besides the reward the Knickerbocker Chocolate Co. give grocers for pushing them, they are certain to please their trade.

Suppose, for example, a grocer needs a new roll-top desk, a safe, a cheese cutter, a computing or platform scale; instead of drawing on his bank account to pay for them he pushes the sale of the Knickerbocker Co.'s goods with his customers, saves the Universal Coupons packed in every case for him and adds them to those coming to him from other manufacturers, and in a short time he will have collected enough to entitle him to any of the articles named.

The Manufacturers' Trade-Mark Association issue a handsome illustrated catalogue which they send free to grocers, showing an almost unlimited array of useful articles of merchandise which they will send grocers in exchange for the Universal Coupons, together with a list of all the manufacturers throughout the country who give these same coupons to the grocers.

The Knickerbocker Co. is the only manufacturer of chocolate and cocoa from whom a grocer can get these Universal Coupons; so grocers who want valuable free merchandise as well as their regular profits will concentrate their efforts on the sale of the Knickerbocker Chocolate Co.'s goods.

Collecting Bluffs.

Well, I had a unique job last week. I was home—nothing doing on the road holiday week, so I laid around and kept my shoes shined the whole time.

Loafing don't appeal to me long, so one day I asked my boss whether there wasn't anything I could do.

"There's only one thing," he said, "and I don't believe you'll hanker after that much. I've got a batch of overdue accounts that I'd like to get in. The bookkeeper's sick, as you know, so he can't go after them. How'd you like to see if you can round some of them in?"

"Sure I will," I said, "I've never done much collecting, but I'll see what I can do."

It was a new one on me all right. I've seen a lot of collectors in my life—I've usually tried to see 'em first. And here I was one myself.

He gave me a batch of twenty three accounts—what d'ye think of that number to start a greenhorn out on? They were all overdue, and they ran into some money.

"I don't really expect you'll get much," the old man said, as I started out. "What you'll get will probably be a lot of excuses and bluffs. Money's tight, I know that, but some of these accounts ought to be paid."

"Well, now, see here," I asked him, "how do you expect me to approach these people? Am I to go after 'em hard or soft?"

"As hard as you can without stirring them up too much," he said. "They're all customers and I don't want to make 'em mad if I can help it, but we ought to have our money."

Well, I sallied out. For a while I thought I was going to be skunked, but I did collect one bill of $55. For the others I got a beautiful assortment of bluffs and excuses, just as the old man said.

There was one for about $250, sold on terms 1 per cent. in ten days, net thirty days. Been running forty-five days already.

"Can I have a check for this?" I asked the junior member of the concern.

"Well, I'll tell you," he answered, "I don't know anything about this bill. The man who looks these up and passes them is sick with the grip and I don't see how I can do anything till he gets back. I'll tell you what I'll do, on a chance, though. Give us the 1 per cent. discount and I'll give you a check right now."

"My dear man," I said, "you know very well we can't do that. As a matter of fact, you don't expect me to, do you? This is just a pleasant way of bowing me out without a check, ain't it?"

I was on all right—he didn't want to pay. He smiled, but he didn't reach for his check book.

"That's about the best I can do to-day," he said. "Try us next week, when our man will be back."

In another case they were really dying to pay, but the treasurer, who had to sign the check, was away and they were helpless till he came back.

"Didn't he leave any checks signed?" I asked.

"Well-er-not for that," was the somewhat hesitating reply.

"When'll he be back?"

"We hope sometime next week."

Exit yours truly again.

In another case there was a mistake in the bill that had to be corrected before I could get a check. The bookkeeper brought this mistake forward with great bluster—it was such a crack-a-jack reason for not paying the bill.

"What is the mistake?" I asked.

Why, they hadn't gotten one item of goods at all.

That item amounted to $14.65.

"All right," I said, "give me a check for the balance, and we'll look that one item up."

Oh, no, they couldn't do that. "Wanted to settle the whole thing at once." "It's very simple. Just send us a corrected bill and we'll send you a check."

"We'll look this up and mail you a check," I got at another place.

"But, my dear sir, it's already fifteen days overdue and I'd like to get a check to-day," I said.

"Well, we're fearfully busy getting ready to take stock, and we're afraid we haven't the time to do it just now. But we'll get at it to-morrow or next day, and let you have a check right away."

In another case they had sent to the bank for a new check book and it had been delayed. They hadn't a check in the place. "Isn't it most annoying!" the best bluffer of all demanded of me. Just as soon as the book came he would see that my house got a check.

All the stories I got belong to one or the other of these types, with the exception of one. One man told the flat truth.

"My dear man," he said, "this bill ought to have been paid long ago. I'd pay it this minute if I could. But I haven't got the money, and that's the whole story. Collections are rotten; I can't get any money in, and the futures I've had to pay for have simply drained me. The only thing I can say to you is that just as soon as I get the money you'll have your check."

And I'll bet a million dollars that account will be paid before any of the others.

I went back to the old man with the $55 and my load of excuses and handed 'em in.

"Just as I expected," he said, "they pushed you along with a lot of bluffs."

Now, the point I want to make is this: Outside that fellow who said he hadn't the money, I believe firmly that all those fellows gave me pure bluffs. They didn't think I believed 'em and I didn't—the bluffs deceived nobody. They simply skirted around the real truth of the matter, which was that they didn't have the money and couldn't pay.

Since the times got tight, a million of these bluffs have been thrown on the market. Everybody recognized 'em at once for what they were—bluffs. What nonsense to keep up such a farce! Why not come out like that one honest fellow and admit they couldn't pay because they hadn't the money? It shows no weakness not to have money when there ain't any to have.

They're all afraid of their credit. But men suspect a fellow loaded with a lot of fake excuses a darned sight quicker than they do the one that comes out and admits what the other fellow knows anyway—that he's simply short. All this business about the treasurer being away is fool rot. Think of a concern allowing itself to be tied up by the absence of one man!

Why, when my creditors come to me and present bills I always tell 'em at once that I ain't got the money. Whether I have or not.

Whatever may be said of the grocery-selling methods of Gimbel Bros., their grocery windows this year were unquestionably the most beautiful ever shown in Philadelphia. One of their displays was of native and tropical fruits and was the work of an artist of high ability.

Question: * * *, Philadelphia Pa.—I would like to have your candid opinion on the following problem: I have been cashing checks for Mrs. Miller for the last five years. These checks were given to Mrs. Miller by Mr. Smith, who was employed by Jones & Co. These checks were all payable to Jones & Co. Mr. Smith forged the indorsements, gave the checks to Mrs. Miller, who sometimes paid her grocery bill or had me cash them for her. Can I be held liable?? As this thing has been going on so long, don't you think Jones & Co. should stand for their own carelessness? Mrs. Miller has since this happened gone into bankruptcy. Mr. Smith is a fugitive.

Answer.—To state this case a little more clearly, this is the way I understand it: Given a check made payable to Jones, Smith steals the check, forges Jones' indorsement, and passes it on to Miller. Miller passes it to this correspondent, either for cash or in payment of a bill. The correspondent does not say so, but I presume he deposited the check in bank, where the forgery was in some way detected.

Now, the question is, who loses, and what is the status of the various persons through whose hands this check passed? A forged indorsement passes no title, so that the right to the check never passed from Jones unless he was grossly negligent in letting the check get into Smith' possession. Lacking negligence Jones loses nothing.

If Miller accepted the forged checks as consideration for anything of value, she has two actions against Smith, one civil, to recover the value of the thing she gave up, and the other criminal, for obtaining goods, or money under false pretences.

The above correspondent has a civil action against Miller, for the amount of money advanced or credited to her on account of the checks, but he has no criminal action against her unless he can prove that she knew the indorsement was forged. Since Miller has gone into bankruptcy, I am afraid his chances of recovering anything are slim.

If the correspondent obtained money on the checks from a bank, or from any person, such bank or person may recover it from him, and so on all down the line.

MAKE OUR HISTORY YOUR GUIDE TO SUCCESS

A few years ago A. W. Johnson, a retail grocer, refurnished his store with tilting bins, new scales, electric coffee mill, molasses pump and a new dried-beef cutter. These equipments were satisfactory labor-saving devices with the single exception of the new dried-beef cutter; this, although a highly advertised, standard machine, was incapable of doing nice work. After carefully investigating the merits of every slicing machine on the market he did not find one that was actually slicing dried beef in a workmanlike, economical manner. Being a thorough, competent mechanic with an inventive turn of mind, backed by many years of experience cutting dried beef, he determined to design and construct an altogether new machine, avoiding or correcting the defects of the others and embodying new, practical devices of simple construction.

The new machine was a success—a world beater—it sliced dried beef to perfection. His customers were delighted with the broad. smooth, perfect slices, deliciously juicy, transparently thin—so much superior to any beef they ever saw—naturally he gained trade, his sales of beef increased week by week until Johnson's dried beef became a household word, and people would use no other kind, while the new machine sliced up every little scrap in thin, salable slices and reduced waste to a minimum.

Send for a sample of this famous sliced beef—the beef that beats the world.

Nothing Artificial Here

La Toscana Virgin Olive Oil is unique in several respects. One is the fact that its wonderful clearness is not produced artificially or by any chemical. Its pure limpidity and brilliant color are due solely to the perfection of the olives from which it is pressed and to the expertness of the pressing.

No purer, finer olive oil is produced in any of the oil-producing states of Europe than La Toscana.

Why an Independent Starch is Better than a Trust Starch

An independent starch is almost sure to be better than a trust starch because the trust is apt to feel that it has the market and needn't be so particular.

The independent manufacturer hasn't the market and there is only one way he can get even a share of it—by selling a better starch than his competitor.

That one reason it is that has given Murdoch's Laundry and Corn Starches such splendidly fine quality—they have simply had to be good in order to sell.

Both are the very leaders of their class. Just look at them in comparison with other starches.

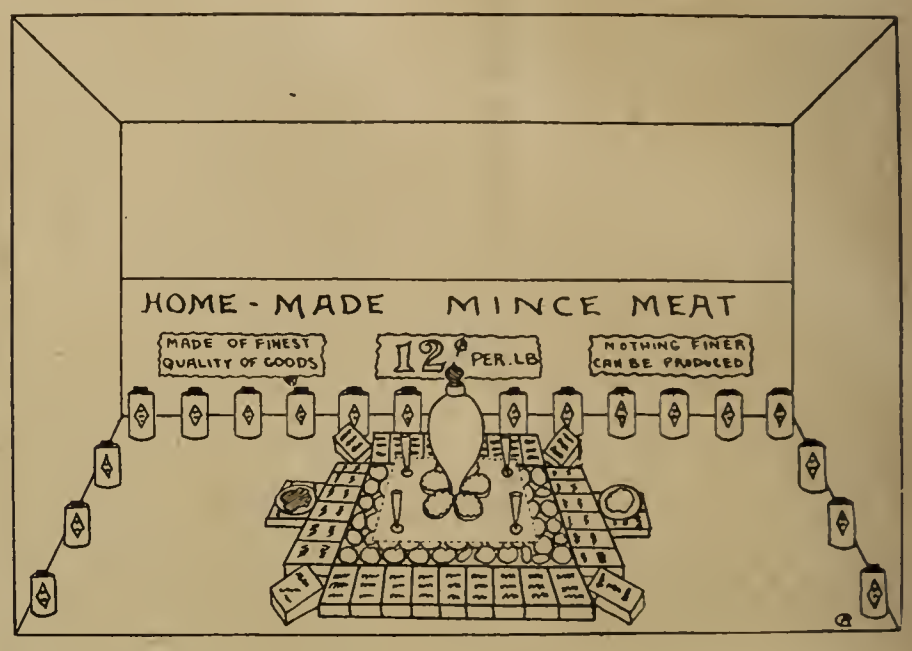
Window Dressing for Grocers

In this department from now on will appear each week suggestive articles regarding the proper use of the retail grocer's window. An endeavor will be made to deal with the subject practically, in other words, to show grocers how they can turn their windows into a money-making feature of their business. Subscribers are invited to make free use of the department by submitting both queries or suggestions.

A Mincemeat Display.

Here is a suggestion for a mince-meat window.



The idea is to show the material of which your mince-meat is made.

First form a hollow square in the centre of your window with cartons of raisins, currants, etc. Next place five tumblers upside down within the square, on which lay a pane of glass.

A New Year's Dried Fruit Window.

First of all cover the floor of the window with nice clean white paper.

Place two boxes of fruit in the centre of the window, one on top of the other, standing on ends, then two lengthwise on top of these, then one on end on top of those, the whole forming a cross. If the two that are crosswise do not want to stay in place nail a strip of wood on the back of them, holding them together. Each box in the cross should be different kind of fruit, with the lids of the box off and top paper also, showing the fruit as it lays in the box

Fill in the square with apples, oranges and lemons. On each corner of the glass place a wine-glass of wine and in the centre have a large vase filled with cider.

Around the bottom of the vase make a circle of glass dishes filled with spices, citron, etc.

Place a dish of meat and a dish of suet on the cartons of dried fruit, one on either side.

Place a row of glass jars around the back and sides of the window. It is not necessary that these should be filled with mince-meat as you can wrap the jars with paper, and if you have labels put them on the outside.

The sign on the back of the window is on paper tacked on a frame made to fit the window.

For a store that does not sell mince-meat they can still use this window by making the sign read: "Material for making your own mince-meat."

E. W. Alexander.

Oxford, Pa.

Place as many glass dishes as you have fruit on display about the front of the window, fill them with water, then place a few of the different kind of fruit in the water, which after a few days will swell to their natural size. The water will also serve to keep moisture in the window, which will keep the fruit from drying out.

Then place a few pounds of the various kinds of fruit on piles around the window.

Place neat price cards on each pile, also the name of the fruit, which will do away with placing a card on each box, as they would mar the beauty of the cross.

Along the back of the window tilt open boxes of fruit against the partition. The idea is to have

Karo
CORN SYRUP

Karo Corn Syrup is no longer an experiment. It is a rich syrup made straight from corn, much smoother than sugar syrup, and will be preferred to sugar syrup by nine out of ten persons.

as much fruit in the window as you possibly can.

If you do not wish to open your full boxes, take uniform size boxes and make false bottoms in them, and only place a layer or two of fruit in them, but it is better to use a full box, as the fruit shows up nicer and at the same time you will not be able to pack a few layers in the same way as they come from the packers.

Federal Food Board Wants Another Change in Method of Stating Guarantee.

Now Says That the Words It Itself Suggested Are Being Misunderstood by Consumers. Want Only "Serial No. ——" Placed Upon Package.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Washington, D C.,

January 2, 1908.

The Federal Food and Drug Board is about to undertake a monumental task—that of inducing the owners of serial number guarantees under the new Federal food law to cease using on their labels such a statement as this: "Guaranteed under the Food and Drug Act of June 30, 1906. Serial number 0000." The Board claims that this deceives the public into believing that the Government is behind the guarantee, and it will therefore endeavor to have the statement modified, though it is perfectly true.

To this end the Board has sent an important letter to each of the principal trade organizations interested in the administration of the Food and Drugs Act. There is no complaint of the action of the trade in using those words, they having been adopted from the regulations of the Board itself, but experience has shown that they are likely to be misleading to consumers who are not well informed as to the signification of the impression.

Most persons, it is believed, understand the words to mean that the article on which they appear is guaranteed by the United States Government to be good or pure or made as represented, when what is meant is merely that the original manufacturer warrants the retailer that he will assume all liability for prosecution that may be based upon alleged non-conformity with the provisions of the Food and Drugs Act. It is desired by the Board to omit from the labels the words "guaranteed under the Food and Drugs Act," leaving merely the words "serial No. —." The Board, however, is not inclined to take this step until it has been ascertained what would be the effect upon the trade and how much loss of labels, etc., would result therefrom.

No answers have yet been received to the letter and it is supposed that careful investigation is being made by the associations involved.

FOR RENT.

FOR RENT—Large General Store (owned by the undersigned estate) in Quarryville, Lancaster County. Pa. This Borough has a population of about 800. Is the terminus of two steam railroads, a trolley line and two new state turnpikes. It is the only town of any considerable size in the ten lower townships of Lancaster County, and commands a large proportion of their patronage. It has two banks, and does more business in a week than most towns of its size in a month. In fact, during the year of 1907, it is carefully estimated to have exceeded $800,000, not including the money paid out in the borough for tobacco which will amount to about $150,000 yearly. The borough has, besides this store, one large general store, carrying every line, and one smaller general store, one small grocery and a large hardware store. This store has enjoyed a large patronage for half a century. The location is the best in the borough, and in the midst of the town's business activity, within 200 feet of the depot of the Lancaster & Quarryville Railroad, the Lancaster, Oxford & Southern Railroad, the freight station and the terminus of the trolley line. The building is large, well-lighted, and is undergoing repairs; it has a fine cellar. It will be rented on good terms. The opportunity for an energetic man to establish a fine business in one of the best towns of its size is here afforded. A renter will not be handicapped with a stock of old goods, as the building is entirely empty and ready for immediate occupancy. For any further information address George W. Hensel's Estate, Quarryville, Lancaster Co., Pa. tf

This is Worth While

You can buy Caricol Tea from us at a lower price than you can get a product of equal quality anywhere else. It has been blended by one who has spent a lifetime learning how to please the popular taste, and the result is a próduct which you can sell at 160 per cent. profit and please almost every one who buys—please them so well that they will keep coming back for more.

Thomas Martindale & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

PEANUTS—FIVE A BAG

Everywhere you go you hear that cry. Don't you think you should have some of the trade that the peddler has? If you knew that with an you could clear 300 per cent., would you not put one in when you learn that any boy can run it, and that there's nothing to get out of order, and that it will pay for itself in one month's time? We think you will, and we will be pleased to furnish further particulars and prices on request.

Rae's Lucca Olive Oil

An Olive Oil of the purest quality—pressed only from perfect olives and carefully preserved from contact with anything that would hurt its exquisite flavor; beautiful to the eye and agreeable to the taste.

Do you keep it in stock?

H. KELLOGG & SONS, PHILADELPHIA
AGENTS FOR SAMUEL RAE & CO., LEGHORN, ITALY

What's the Difference?

The answer—"the bottom is as good as the top." You know what this means in Evaporated Apples. It means that your customers will keep buying that kind, and we know you will keep buying that kind to supply your customers. APELPI on a package of evaporated apples is a positive guarantee that the fruit is the finest that can be had, and its preparation can't be excelled.

WHERE the GLASS JAR COMES IN

The glass jar in which Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa—and that only—is packed offers the entering wedge to a sale, because it is unusual.

No woman ever saw cocoa packed in glass before; the sight is novel; she asks about it, and if you help a little, she buys.

Bought once, Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa will always be bought again, for it has a flavor which has never been successfully imitated. Our exclusive making process removes the bad, develops the good, and the result is the smoothest, most delicious drinking cocoa on the market.

Croft & Allen Co.
PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.

L & S Pickles

L. & S. Pickles are only one of many brands of sweet pickles on the market—why should you push them instead of the others?

A natural question, and here's the answer:

L. & S. Pickles are preserved with granulated sugar. Many, many brands—it wouldn't be fair to specify—are sweetened with saccharine, a harmful chemical substance made from coal tar! Besides the harmfulness, saccharine only sweetens on the outside anyway; sugar goes clear to the heart of the pickle and preserves it through and through.

That's why you should choose L. & S. Pickles.

Your Store Should Be Brighter Than Day

Your store ought to be lighter at night than in the day because at night the light is all inside, in daytime it is all outside.

Is it?

A store that at night is only "as light as day" would probably show up rather darkly. Stores that are brilliant and cheery are literally brighter than day.

A few electric lights properly disposed, will make your store inviting and attractive—the lack of them will make a cold and gloomy place that repels everybody.

Take it up with us.

The GREAT Ramly

Is the one spelled R-A-M-L-Y, the finest Turkish cigarette ever made to sell for 10 cents. So good, other cigarettes are made to look like it, so they will sell on the Ramly's reputation.

If you want to give your customers an ideal smoke, sell them the Ramly. You won't have to tell them about it the second time—they'll ask for it.

OUR PRODUCTS RETAIN THE HARVEST'S RIPE FLAVOR

Just the Fresh Fruit and Vegetables

There are all kinds of Canned Goods—and all kinds of claims are made for them, but how many can substantiate their claim?

In the OLNEY brand only the fresh fruit and vegetables that are grown at the door of the factory are used.

All the rich, ripe flavor and delicacy is retained—no loss of either caused by traveling a long distance—nothing added or taken away by preservatives or coloring matter. That is how OLNEY goods come to you.

They have always been pure, so the pure food laws did not affect us. Let us show you what canned goods should be.

THE CORN WITHOUT HULLS

The Kernel of the Corn Alone

The only Canned Corn on the market which contains no hulls is the Winorr brand. By a special device we extract the kernel and throw away the tough hulls, leaving a most nutritious and delicious corn product that your trade will thank you for introducing to them. Every grocer should be selling the Winorr brand, under which we also pack Sauer Kraut, Dry Mince Meat in cartons, and the finest Salad Dressing on the market.

See What You Can Do With This

This W. & D. Special Combination Fixture temptingly displays bananas on the top tree, which revolves, and pickles in the tanks below. A space-saver, a constant salesman, an ornament. Oak or cherry, handsomely finished with nickel bolts and ball-bearing casters. Uses only two square feet of floor space.

Interesting price; write for it to-day.

Look At It and Taste It

The minute you see Nicelle Olive Oil you feel sure it's a high-grade article. The package is unique and exclusive—you can't associate poor goods with it.

Taste Nicelle Oil and you know it's high grade. Nowhere else have you met that rich smoothness, that delicate yet penetrating olive flavor.

Women have told us repeatedly that their salad dressing came quicker and better with Nicelle Oil than with any other brand they ever tried.

Give it a chance for your own good.

How to Answer Their Questions

Put a box of I-V Washing Tablets on your counter. They will be such a novelty that every woman who comes in will ask what they are and what they will do. Tell them this:—

1—They contain no acid of any sort.
2—They wash clothes without rubbing.
3—They make clothes beautifully white;
4—They can be used in hard water;
5—They take stains from table linen without any rubbing whatever.

Any one of these points would sell a package—just see the women's eyes glisten when you name them all.

WALKER STORE FIXTURES
—Attract Good Trade—

There is so much to be said to the merchant about to buy new fixtures that we prefer to send our catalogue, which will set him wise on many points that he should know. Our designs and our workmanship are unsurpassed. Our customers write that they are more than pleased with the appearance of their stores.

WE KNOW HOW TO DESIGN ARTISTIC INTERIORS

We are ready at all times to offer suggestions covering any detail. And our catalogue is sufficiently explicit to make it both interesting and instructive. Send for it.

No Friends Among the Wheelwrights

Wheelwrights don't think much of the "J. M." delivery wagon; it doesn't make enough money for them. No wagon pays fewer visits to the repair shop, or makes its visits shorter.

The most celebrated delivery wagon made—the best wagon ever built for the grocery trade. Strong as iron, yet easy-running; finest steel tires, and wheels from second-growth hickory.

We Investigate Each Account Separately

It you give credit you have bad accounts. If you have bad accounts you need us. You need us because we have made the COLLECTION BUSINESS a study and have brought it as near to perfection as possible. With us you do not depend on stereotyped letters; we investigate each and every account and then put on the pressure that is best adapted to each individual case. It is the only sensible way of doing and the results we get are astounding. May be you are skeptical? If you are, write us—we will satisfy you, both as to our honesty and ability.

Baked Beans Ought To Be Baked

Most "baked" bean manufacturers are much exercised over the status of their goods under the National food law. Why? Because their beans aren't baked at all—they are merely boiled or steamed. It's a question whether they can be sold as baked beans.

Actual baking makes a big difference not only in the flavor but in everything else. Boiling or steaming swells the bean and makes it mushy. Baking reduces the size and make it not mushy but mealy. Anybody can see and taste the difference instantly.

The tomato sauce used on L. & S. Baked Beans is genuine tomato sauce made from the ripe tomatoes; not the catsup that is often used.

Five reasons why it is to YOUR interest to push only the Exton.

1. It is the finest oyster cracker ever made.

2. It is so often imitated it is being continually endorsed by its competition.

3. It goes a long way toward making a poor oyster stew good and it makes a good stew perfect.

4. You can't find a consumer anywhere who has used the "Exton" oyster cracker who will tell you any other oyster cracker is as good.

5. The above statements are proven conclusively by the fact that the Exton cracker has been on the market 60 years

Advantages Gained by Universal Coupon Users

Malta-Vita Pure Food Company of Battle Creek, Mich., to adopt them

Company will exchange all old stock to dealers who use the "Universal" Coupon

The manufacture of the famous cereal, Malta-Vita, has recently been placed under entirely new management, and this popular breakfast food is now being made equal to the food turned out years ago, so that dealers throughout the country can with perfect confidence recommend this delightful, tasty breakfast food to their patrons.

The Company recognize the value the Universal Coupon will be in increasing trade for Malta-Vita, but they desire to have dealers who are saving Universal Coupons and who now have old stock on hand to correspond with them, and arrange to have this stock exchanged free for fresh goods, because they do not want to handicap future sales by permitting dealers to "work off" their old stock on a trade they want to keep.

The Company is also putting out an excellent Corn Flake; it is as much of a leader with Corn Flake field as their Wheat Flake has been in the Wheat Flake field.

Dealers interested should write at once to the Malta-Vita Pure Food Company, Battle Creek, Mich., so as to obtain the advantages now offered by this Company. Merely state the quantity of old stock on hand and it will be immediately changed for new, containing Universal Coupons.

FIT MATES FOR THE BEST BREAD MADE

After getting all the business on Freihofer's Bread we could possibly take care of, we sighed for other worlds to conquer, and started to make Macaroni, Spaghetti, Noodles and Pastels.

These goods are fit mates for Freihofer's Bread, and most grocers know what that is. We have done little or no advertising to consumers for them, preferring to spend that money with the grocer to make him friendly to us and really anxious to sell our goods.

So that every case contains Universal Coupons, which will buy any necessity or luxury a grocer can want.

If 1000 Retailers in Philadelphia Recommended Us, Would YOU Believe in Us?

One of the hardest propositions which confront the retailer is to turn their bad debts into cash. Lots of them have tried different collection agencies, paid retaining or subscription fees and got no results; so it is hard to convince them that any one can help to bring the beats to book.

We show you how to collect your own accounts; nobody handles your money but you. We can give you the names of a thousand merchants in Philadelphia whom we have shown how to get money due them which had been charged off long before they heard of us.

It's a Hard Job, but We've Done It

You know how hard it is to please all your customers with coffee. It is natural for you to find it harder than we do, because you have a lot of things to do and we do nothing else. Private Estate Coffee is the result of many years' experimenting to please the popular taste, and it does it so well that we don't know of a grocer who has induced a customer to try it who isn't still using it. This is one important reason for your making a leader of it, and another is that we share our profits with you by giving you Universal Coupons with every case.

The Story of a Grocer's Mail Order Scrapple Business

How E. W. Alexander of Oxford, Pa., has Built Up a Trade For Farm Products Through the Monthly Magazines. Where He Gets His Material. His Prices. The Plan's Success.

In the want columns of "Everybody's Magazine" for the last few months has appeared the following interesting advertisement:—

ALEXANDER'S FAMOUS PORK SCRAPPLE—cut into slices and toasted to a crisp brown, makes a most nutritious and appetizing breakfast dish. Made of the choicest meat, and the purest Indian meal and buckwheat flour. So that you may try this wholesome food, we will send you a trial order of five pounds for only $1.00, express prepaid east of Denver, Col. Send for my book on scrapple and other pork products. E. W. Alexander, P. O. Box K, Oxford, Chester Co., Pa.

Mr. Alexander, the advertiser named above, is a subscriber to the "Grocery World" and a frequent contributor to its columns. He was asked for some details of his mail-order scrapple scheme, how he came to think of it, and whether it had been successful. In reply he sends a batch of literature from which it appears that he has the plan just as well organized as any other mail-order plan the writer has seen; that is as to the business-like character and fine appearance of his literature.

The inception of the plan is revealed by the following extract from a booklet used constantly by Mr. Alexander and called "Scrapple: Being a Message of Chester County Cheer Concerning Old-Fashioned Farm Products For Fall and Winter":—

FOREWORD.

Undoubtedly the greatest surprise in all our fifty years' experience preparing "Old Home Foods" for our neighbors of South Chester County, Pennsylvania, was the discovery that seven-eighths of the inhabitants of the United States never tasted "Scrapple." For half a century we have been making this and other pork products in the old-fashioned way, never dreaming that in this great country are seventy millions of people who have never even heard of "Scrapple" and whose only acquaintance with the toothsome delicacies that can be made from "Mr. Porker" was gained by way of the notorious packing houses of the middle West.

It was difficult for us to believe this at first, for down here in Southern Pennsylvania, "Scrapple" is the favorite breakfast dish of every household. Literally every one likes and eats "Scrapple" and its presence in the family larder is taken as a matter of course. High and low, rich and poor, all consider "Scrapple" an indispensable adjunct to the daily menu.

When we came to the full realization that our neighbors, for years, had been enjoying a delicacy about which the rest of this great nation knew absolutely nothing, we at once inaugurated an advertising campaign to spread the fame of "Scrapple" throughout the land. Our success was magical. Last year, Alexander's Chester County Scrapple went into every State in the Union, to Canada, to Mexico—even abroad to a customer in Athens, Greece. It is our belief that perhaps you may know some of the seventy million who have not eaten "Scrapple," and to them we suggest that you show this little booklet.

How the scrapple is made is treated in the same booklet as follows:—

GET THE BEST SCRAPPLE.

As in everything else, there are many grades. We have been making "Scrapple" for over fifty years. We made it on our own farm at first, for home use, and then for some of our townspeople who found out that we could make it much better than they. As the years went by, our "Scrapple" became more widely known, until to-day Alexander's Scrapple is a household name within a radius of fifty miles of Oxford, Pa.

The increased business has demanded proportionately increased facilities, but never once have we departed from the original recipe or the original method of painstaking preparation. Our "Scrapple" is now just what it was half a century ago, a product of the "old home farm."

There is also some very good matter exploiting Honey-Cured Hams and Bacon and Lard.

Packed in with the booklet goes an order blank, from which are taken the following prices:—

Scrapple, 20 cents pound; lard, in 5, 10 and 20-pound tin pails, 16 cents pound; hams, about 12-pound average, 22 cents pound; air-dried beef knuckles, 5 to 7 pounds each, 30 cents pound; bacon, in strips, 3 to 6 pounds each, 30 cents pound; sliced bacon, wafer sliced, 30 cents pound; little link sausage, 25 cents pound.

Please Note.—All shipments made by express prepaid. On orders under $3.00 to one address, we charge 35 cents to you in addition to quoted prices, express charges being higher on small shipments.

Another feature is a leaflet telling "How to Cook Alexander's Chester County Scrapple and Sausage."

How the plan succeeds may be seen from the following, which is taken from an advertisement used by Mr. Alexander in his local Oxford paper:—

The following is a sample day's shipment of Alexander's Pennsylvania Scrapple, orders received in the morning's mail and shipped the same day by express, Monday, December 16:—

Lieut J. H. Griffith, Camp Columbia, Cuba; Mr. George Small, York, Pa; Mr. Edwin S. Walker, Palmyra, N. Y.; Mr. E. Taylor, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Miss A. V. Gorum, Shelton, Conn.; Mr. H. E. Turner, Montclair, N. J.; Dr. Farrington, Washington, D. C.; Mr. W. P. Montgomery, Montezuma, Ind.; Mrs. J. H. Wade, Cleveland, Ohio; Galen Hall Hotel, Atlantic City, N. J.; Mr. Elbert F. McFadden, Kingston, N. Y.; Mr. J. D. Pfrommer, Kingston, N. Y.; Mr. E. E. Rutter, Mt. Airy, Pa.; Mr. L. H. Rettburg, Baltimore, Md.; Mr. Fred Rowe, Prescott, Canada; Mr. J. H. Joice, Chicago, Ill.; Mr. Arthur O'Dell, Cleveland, Ohio; Mr. C. C. Hoyen, Cleveland, Ohio; Mr. J. W. Gale, Cleveland, Ohio; Mr. Chas. R. McConkey, Peach Bottom, Pa.; Mr. Stewart Patterson, Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. L. M. Churchhill, Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. J. C. Freeman, Richmond, Va.

Alexander's Pennsylvania Scrapple is the only Scrapple in the world that is used in every State in the Union, as well as foreign countries. Send for our booklet—"Scrapple"—It is free.

New Oleo Bill Introduced.

Backers are Pennsylvania Butter People. Bill Eliminates Vicious Word "Knowingly" and Makes Several Other Reforms. Oleo Interests Expected to Go After Reduced Tax.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Washington, D. C.,
Jan. 10, 1908.

Senator Boies Penrose, at the behest of the Pennsylvania State Grange, introduced a new oleomargarine bill in the Senate on Tuesday. It is intended to cure the defects in the present law, which have prevented successful prosecution in all but a very few cases. A summary of the bill is as follows:—

That butter, with or without coloring matter, shall not be used in the manufacture of oleomargarine.

That any violation of the oleomargarine laws, whether knowingly or otherwise, shall be a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of from $100 to $500 for each offense, or imprisonment not exceeding one year.

That manufacturers shall designate the location of their places of business under penalty of a fine of from $100 to $500, or imprisonment not exceeding one year.

That prosecutions begun for failure to pay the special tax imposed on the manufacturers of oleomargarine shall not be compromised or adjusted by any officer of the Internal Revenue Department but shall be brought into court having jurisdiction in such cases and there disposed of.

That oleomargarine shall be packed in paper packages of 1, 3, and 5 pounds, they in turn in cases of 10, 20, 30 and 50 pounds, such cases to be properly marked and stamped.

That manufacturers in sending out stock shall enter records thereof by serial numbers of stamps on each package.

The most important reform made by the above bill is that sellers of oleomargarine will be liable to the penalty whether they sell "knowingly" or not. Actions under the present laws have been almost invariably defeated because of the Government's inability to prove that the seller knew he was selling oleo.

There is some fear expressed that the oleomargarine interests, now that the matter is reopened, may succeed in having the tax of 10 cents on colored oleomargarine reduced.

Immense Carry-over May Make Opening Jar Prices High.

Manufacturers, Jobbers, and Retailers All Have Jars From Last Year, Thus Removing the Chance For Low Opening Prices.

At this writing no prices have been named for the 1908 season on Mason jars, and it is believed that none will be made before March. The rumor has already gained ground that when the price comes it will be materially higher than usual. For some time past the concerns controlling the Mason jar business have put out, in January, a price something like $3.75 for quarts, advancing it each month until when the jar season was reached the price would be around $5.

It is expected in some quarters that the 1908 price may be $5, or even higher. One reason is that the carry-over from last year was tremendous, but the main one is that the prices put out in previous years have not paid a profit, according to the makers. All the large manufacturers have many thousand gross on hand. Wholesale grocers have from one to five carloads on hand, and many retailers have jars on hand also. The 1907 business in jars was a frost, owing to the failure of most fruit crops, notably peaches and cherries.

The large concerns do not expect to do much early business in Mason jars this year.

There Is Still Money In The Grocery Business

But Not For People Who Don't Know How To Estimate Profits. Secretary Green Shows Up Good and Bad Propositions. Salt Lake City, (Utah) Grocers Win Their Fight. Statement From the Chief Actor.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Cleveland, Ohio, Jan. 9, 1908.

How often have we heard it said that there is no money in the grocery business? This is a false position. It is just as lucrative a business to-day as it ever was. Looking back over a period of twenty-five years, we find that goods on the average sold for more than they do to-day, with the wages of the mechanic one-third more at the present time. True, the expense of doing business has increased over former years. The public demands better store equipment, better service. Telephone communication, and a great many other expenses are attached to doing business. Add to this the expense of business, and then a fair profit.

A silver-tongued drummer walks into the store and tells the proprietor that he can pay $1 a dozen for goods, sell them for 10 cents and make 25 per cent. profit. This is known to be the most misleading statement ever uttered. Goods costing $1 a dozen, with an added 15 to 20 per cent. fixed charge, makes the goods cost $1.15 to $1.20, and instead of making 25 per cent., the merchant is probably making not more than from 2 to 3 per cent.

Is it any wonder that so many merchants fail? It is but a few days ago since a proposition of that kind was put to me. A drummer said that merchants are well off today, when they realize 25 per cent. on goods that cost $1, selling them at $1.20.

The Grand Jury in Salt Lake City, after a thorough investigation lasting over three months, into the methods of the Salt Lake City Association have vindicated, entirely, the members of any wrongdoing or wrong intent.

This is a great satisfaction to the members of the State Association of Utah, and should be much encouragement to the membership all over the United States.

There has been a tendency for some time, taken advantage of by certain individuals, to place the grocers' association in an unfavorable position. District attorneys and State solicitors have suddenly come to the conclusion that it is their duty to bring into disrepute the association, and thereby make political capital out of it for themselves.

The retail merchants of Utah, as in other States, have proved themselves, after a most thorough investigation, to be law abiding citizens and seeking only to protect themselves and their business, to educate themselves along better business lines.

For several years the prices of commodities have steadily advanced, while the retail selling price has practically remained at the same figure. Expenses have slowly but steadily increased. Better service, better store equipment, telephone and other improvements, all of which has taken away the profits which formerly belonged to the earnings of the tradesmen.

How few men realize that a package or can of goods costing 90 cents and $1, and retailing for 10 cents, when the usual percentage of doing business is added to the cost of these goods brings the total cost up to $1.10 to $1.20.

How can it be possible under these conditions to sell those goods for 10 cents and yet expect to keep a place in the mercantile world?

Too much cannot be said in praise of the Salt Lake City Association in their fight to uphold the State Association and the work there, and prove to the consuming public the righteousness of their course.

A letter from J. M. Marriott, the one man above all others who has carried the burden of this affair, refers to their case before the Grand Jury as follows:—

> It has been a greater task than I anticipated. It would be useless to tell you all the steps I took and the influence I brought to bear, and the time and money it has cost me. With the united press against us then as it is still at the present time, with several lawyers anticipating a fat fee, with the consumers honestly believing that they had been and Bad Weather Cuts Down Rice Crop.

The final Government estimate of the production of rice (rough), shows a reduction of about 2,500,000 bushels from the figures of the preliminary estimates made up the latter part of October. This reduction was caused by damaging weather conditions prevailing in Louisiana and Texas since the preliminary report was prepared, which reduced the yield per acre in Louisiana from 31 to 28 bushels and in Texas from 36 to 32 bushels.

Federal Food Board Seeks To Still Further Restrict Manufacturers

Considering A Rule Forbidding the Use on Food Products of Words the Agricultural Department Itself Suggested In the Beginning. Says Consumers Draw False Conclusions From It. Asks and Receives "Grocery World's" Opinion Before the Change.

The "Grocery World" has received the following communication from the United States Department of Agriculture, requesting an opinion as to the advisability of continuing to permit manufacturers of food products to place upon their labels the statement, "Guaranteed Under the Food and Drugs Act, June 30, 1906." The writer has sent the reply which appears below:

December 23, 1907.

"Grocery World," 927 Arch St.,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Gentlemen:—The Board of Food and Drug Inspection has had under consideration for some time the advantages and disadvantages which are the outcome of the use of the legend "Guaranteed under the Food and Drugs Act, June 30, 1906."

Is there any advantage which accrues through the use of the serial number together with the guaranty legend which would not be accomplished by the use of the serial number alone? From many sources the Board has heard complaints of the injurious effects on their business through the use of the legend, which, to the large mass of consumers, has, doubtless, come to mean that either the Government guarantees the purity of the product to which this legend is attached, or else that the product is guaranteed to be and necessarily is, pure irrespetive of any idea of the Government being back of such guaranty. Of course, both these conceptions are false and calculated to do harm to the consumer and, the Board thinks, to all reputable dealers and manufacturers.

The Board desires a free expression of opinion from you on this question, your personal opinion as well as one which will represent what you believe to be the opinion of the trade. Do you believe that the retention of the legend is desirable, or are you convinced that its ultimate removal from all labels is desirable?

Due to the fact that most manufacturers have a large stock of labels on hand bearing the legend "Guaranteed under the Food and Drugs Act, June 30, 1906," do you think it practicable to set a date after which this legend must not be used? If so, what date would you suggest?

It may be said that the phrase, "Serial No.————" on a label will, to all intents and purposes, fill all requirements under Regulation 9 of Circular 21, Office of the Secretary, showing that a general guaranty has been deposited with the Department of Agriculture, thus relieving dealers of prosecution under conditions laid down in Section 9 of the Food and Drugs Act.

Trusting that you will express your views fully on this subject, I am

Respectfully,
H. W. WILEY,
Chairman Board of Food and Drug Inspection.

THE REPLY.

Dr H. W. Wiley, Chairman,
Federal Food Enforcement Board,
Washington, D C.

Dear Sir:—We are in receipt of your letter of the 23d ult., requesting an opinion upon the advisability of continuing to permit packers of food products to place upon their labels the words: "Guaranteed under the Food and Drugs Act, June 30, 1906." You cite certain reasons against such continuance, in substance the false idea of consumers that the Government itself guarantees the product, and the equally false idea that the presence of the above phrase upon the package necessarily implies purity.

In our judgment, many consumers do conclude upon reading the statement, "Guaranteed under the Food and Drugs Act, June 30, 1906," that the United States Government is in some way behind the warranty.

WRITE FOR "THE CASH GROCER," CONTAINING OUR QUOTATION ON A FULL LINE OF GROCERIES

BARBER & PERKINS, Wholesale Cash Grocers 29, 31, 33 N. Water Street, 28 N. Delaware Avenue Phila., Pa.

This is a pure falsity, of course, and yet it is not at all clear how the use of the above phrase can legally be interfered with. A packer who gives with his product a guarantee in any form, whether a Serial number guarantee, or an invoice guarantee, is clearly guaranteeing his goods "under the Food and Drugs Act of June 30, 1906." Since he is stating only the simple truth, therefore, how can he be stopped?

It is true in our judgment that the use of the words "Serial No. ——" upon the package would serve as well as the longer phrase under discussion, so far as the passage of the goods through the trade is concerned. To the consumer, the ultimate subject of the guarantee, however the words "Serial No. ——" are practically without meaning, while the phrase which you object to expresses its meaning clearly.

Very respectfully yours,
GROCERY WORLD PUBLICATION COMPANY.

Heart-to-Heart Talks With Grocery Clerks

"Mutual Aid Sheets" Which a Large Eastern Retail Grocer Tucks in Each Clerk's Weekly Pay Envelope. Some Advice From the Head of the House on Selling Goods and Other Subjects.

[The "Grocery World" has come into possession of a series of "Mutual Aid Sheets," which are weekly little talks issued regularly to its clerks by one of the large retail grocery stores of the East. The talks are typewritten and a copy is enclosed in each clerk's pay envelope. They are so soundly practical and so useful generally that it is this journal's purpose to publish them weekly or bi-weekly for the edification of other clerks as well as other grocers who have clerks.—ED.]

PUSH PRUNES.

The stock of prunes is heavy. We're loaded to the neck on all sizes. You may sell the 40-50s in 25s at $2.13 a box. You may sell the 50-60s at $1.95 in 25-pound boxes. The 60-70s are the seller. Will put the price back to three pounds for 25 cents, for a while at least. Since the advance of 3 cents on three pounds was made on these, you've had some kicks. That we couldn't avoid. Resorting to the old figures for the time being is merely on account of heavy stock. Market conditions don't warrant it. So dig into the prunes.

LOOSE OLIVES.

Get familiar with the olive ad. Get it down so fine that you know as much about olives as the ad. man. One hundred and twenty olives to the kilo. Price, 50 cents a quart. What's a kilo? Two and one-fifth pounds or thereabouts. Sold loose only by us. Good thing to brag about. Talk loose olives. Emphasize that word "loose" and that "quart" idea. There's a whole lot in that to some people.

EGGS.

Don't guarantee an egg until you hear from use. These that you're selling are selected storage stock recandled. That's all. They're mighty fine eggs and we're going to turn a lot of them into money this week. There'll be some egg enthusiasm Friday and Saturday. The ad. will read: "None delivered at the cut price" and "No telephone orders received."

BUTTER.

A butter day will be held Thursday. Butter all over. Dummy tubs will be in every corner with a price on. Figure on a couple tubs being dumped out on the grocery counter. A couple of more in the vestibule covered with wax paper.

Let us see how your sales pan out that day. The price will be a winner.

IN GENERAL.

It's a good time to sell a kit of mackerel for $1.30.

Get the farmers talking about that New Orleans molasses at 65 cents a gallon.

Potatoes are only 40 cents a basket.

Legs of lamb will be advertised in Sunday's paper at 15 cents. Make shredded wheat 12 cents. Make marrow beans 9 cents.

DULL TIMES.

Don't look for dull times. There should be no such a thing as dull days in a store like ours. The afterclap, as you call it, don't amount to a row of pins if we keep on sledding. The thing to do is to study the daily needs—the daily conditions.

Look for a good day's business every bright morning of every business day. Believe that your effort and our effort combined is going to make it a good day. But don't talk dull days—don't ever anticipate them.

Catch the Sharp Appetites

Your customers will come home from their vacations with freshly sharpened appetites—more than ever receptive to good food and drink.

Give them Hotel Astor Coffee now and it will meet with an instant response. Hotel Astor succeeds always, but more quickly than ever just now when appetites aren't jaded.

Consistency.

What a beautiful illustration of consistency is given by some of the leading lights of the Wholesale Grocers' Association of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware, which organization, if it has its way, will compel manufacturers to cut off all large retail buyers, no matter how largely they buy.

Prominently affiliated with the jobbers' organization are the following concerns:—

William Montgomery & Co.
Jonathan Graham & Sons Co.
Henry Graham & Co.
McCahan, Cooper & Co.
Wm. J. Graham & Co.
Wilson & Richards.
Bailie Brothers.

Of these William Montgomery, ostensibly a jobber and one of the principal exhorters in the jobbers' powwows, maintains three retail stores. Yet what an outrage to intimate that his position, so far as his retail stores is concerned, is in no respect different from that of the Acme Tea Co. and that if the latter should be cut off Mr. Montgomery should also. Bailie Brothers either now or very recently maintained a retail department. Of the balance, every concern has come up from a retail business and for years sold both at wholesale and retail. All bought during that time, however, as jobbers direct from the manufacturer. Would these firms have reached their present proud positions had the manufacturer enforced against them, because they were retailers, the rule which they now ask manufacturers to enforce against the Retail Grocers' Association?

Such selfishness is disgusting!

"To Compel Us to Advertise."

In the letter reproduced elsewhere, which the Quaker Oats Co. has sent to wholesale grocers everywhere, the concern insinuates that an unnamed trade paper has criticised it because it was "apparently anxious to convince us of the wisdom of utilizing its columns for advertising." The "Grocery World" is not involved, since the paper referred to is the New York "Journal of Commerce."

The "Grocery World" is sufficiently interested to suggest that that moth-eaten old slur, with which mercantile concerns always greet criticism from a newspaper: "it's a scheme to get square because we wouldn't advertise," be shelved and a newer substitute provided.

The above defense, we repeat, is almost universally used, not because it is true except in isolated cases, but because it is the first thing handy—a mean, small charge which, like a charge of bastardy, always leaves the accused at a disadvantage.

When concerns like the Quaker Oats Co. admit that a newspaper criticism, even though mistaken, may be sincere and clean-motived, they may find less in the criticism to complain of. For given a criticism that ought to be made, there are two ways of making it—gently and acrimoniously. Newspapers are human in almost all qualities. Like humans they treat enemies one way and friends another.

Shortsightedness.

Occasionally even the largest concerns—concerns with the best brains on the market in their hire—will do exceedingly short-sighted things. Go down to the southeast corner of Eighth and Chestnut streets, Philadelphia, and you can see daily in the windows of the National Cash Register Co., one of the shortest-sighted of the things in mind.

The window displays of the National Cash Register Co. are always clever and a crowd can be seen around them at many hours of the day. The present display represents the interior of two tiny stores, one a grocery, the other a pharmacy. In each is a counter backed by shelves of goods for sale, and upon each counter is a National Cash Register. All day long two men stand in the little stores to demonstrate the advantage of the National register in all its phases. Painstakingly they put the instrument through its paces, showing the making of change, of charge accounts, of cash transactions and so on.

Only merchants could yield results from such an advertisement, and yet who compose the audiences for these demonstrations? Clerks going to and from their work, colored messengers, errand people and, possibly, once in a great while, a merchant. Any observing person who sees these crowds can tell at once that they are thus composed.

All of which means, if true, that one of the largest and shrewdest concerns in the land is spending considerable money every day in pouring water on ducks' backs; in other words, in demonstrating its goods to people who couldn't need them in a thousand years.

Mr. Callanan on Glucose.

In the last issue of the "Grocery World," the New York correspondent presented an interview with L. J. Callanan, the well-known New York retail grocer, in which the latter expressed the opinion that the proper name for what is now known as "glucose," is not corn syrup, but glucose. Mr. Callanan is reported as speaking as follows:

> I have never known an article to meet with success which has been put on the market under false pretences. Look at oleomargarine. To-day after years of fighting, it is still under the ban. If it had been introduced as oleomargarine, sold as oleomargarin, without being colored, it would be a staple article in this country to-day.
> It is idle to say that if an article has merit it will not sell under its own name. If its merits are properly placed before the people it will sell, but the minute a doubt is cast upon an article and its name changed in order to hide the name of the material from which it is made, its doom is sealed. It may run for a short time; expensive and lying advertising may cause a good temporary demand for it, but it will be a continual fight, with the result that in the end it will be forced out of the market.

The kernel of this argument is that the only proper name for the saccharine product of corn is glucose, that corn syrup is not its name and that the attempt to make it its name is simply an attempt to masquerade the product behind something which will conceal its real character.

All of which is plausible enough until it is remembered that the product now called glucose is a syrup made from corn and is therefore in every sense corn syrup. To call it corn syrup is therefore to call it nothing but what it truly is, and the argument that it is false pretense to thus call it therefore falls to the ground with all the deductions that the esteemed Mr. Callanan draws from it.

For years glucose was considered an adulterant, and the name was publicly used everywhere as synonomous with spurious substitution. Later the fact was established that it was wholly healthful and legitimate, but the stigma remained and it is the perfect right of the manufacturers to get rid of it by changing the name. Not by changing it to something comprehending deceit, but to something just as much its name as glucose.

Canada	718,333	512,583
Total U. S. & Canada	10,655,835	13,980,059

Thus the United States pack in the United States increased 3,529,974 cases, while the Canadian pack decreased 205,750 cases.

The corn pack shows a sharp falling off from 1906. The figures are as follows:—

	1906 Cases.	1907 Cases.
Total U. S. ..	8,739,908	6,675,908
Canada	450,000	350,000
Total U. S. & Canada	9,189,908	7,025,908

Thus the United States corn pack decreased 2,064,000 cases, and the Canadian pack 100,000 cases.

The 1907 pea pack aggregated 6,805,961 cases, against 4,927,767 cases in 1906.

Some Points On Bargain Sales.

How To Make Special Sales Bring Results At the Dullest Time of Year. What Grocers Say Who Have Used 5 and 10 cent Counters.

[The following suggestions are compiled from actual experience in holding special sales of 5 and 10-cent articles. They were compiled by Butler Brothers.]

"I have a grocery store and also carry a general line of other goods," writes a Kentucky merchant of a circular advertising his 5 and 10 cent counters. "Am in a small town of 500 people and am ten miles from three county seats, but this circular surely got the business. I mailed them within eight miles of the town and it would surprise you to know of the many strangers who have come to me by reading this advertisement."

"The 5 and 10 cent bargain counter is the best advertising thing a grocer can put in, it brings in new trade every day if it is run as it should be," is the verdict of a hustling Minnesota firm. The goods for these are displayed on tables in the back part of the store, thus compelling the people to go to the full length of the store to buy. Seven out of ten on an average see something else that they will buy.

Have a lot of cards printed like this:—

I was influenced to patronize your bargain department by .....
Name .....
Address .....

TEDDY BEAR CONTEST.
JOHN JONES CO., Smithville.

Give every little girl in town all she wants and ask her to write her name on each and give it to a lady friend. When twenty ladies have made purchases through the efforts of the little girl whose name appears on the card, and have left the card with you, present her with a Teddy Bear. Give a Teddy when the little girl induces ten who have never patronized you to purchase at your bargain department. It may be advisable to offer a grand prize of an unusually fine bear to the child securing the most cards.

Hand every visitor to your store during your 5 and 10 cent sales a neat card bearing your name and address and on the back a list of representative articles offered at the sale. Then you might add a foot-note, "Check the items you need and bring the list with you." A circular along the same lines sent to your mailing list should prove effective.

Give to every lady visiting your bargain department a card bearing the following questions:—

1. Why do you trade here, or why don't you?
2. What do we charge you too much for?
3. What are our best bargains?
4. What ought we to do different?
5. What would you do different?
6. What can you buy best here?
7. What can you buy to better advantage elsewhere?

Give every lady answering the questions her choice of any 10 cent article and a substantial prize to the one handing in the most satisfactory replies.

Give your 5 and 10 cent sales individuality and variety by holding special sales on different days. Give one over to glassware and another to hardware, a third to tinware, a fourth to china, and so on through the list. There is hardly a better way to maintain interest and at the same time prove to your customers the wide range covered by these goods.

One firm advertises its 5 and 10 cent department by an ordinary shipping tag, with the following inscription:—

"TAG—YOU'RE IT

The New York Letter

The Wholesale Grocers' Meeting. Retailers Hold Smoker. The Scheme of the United Grocery Stores. Reforms Asked In Weights and Measures Laws. Sugar Trust To Use Publicity.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

New York, Jan. 10, 1908.

Members of the New York State Wholesale Grocers' Association assembled Wednesday in the Hotel Manhattan, where they held their annual meeting, which was followed by an elaborate banquet in the evening. The officers were much pleased with the proceedings and with the success of the entertainment feature of the occasion. The proceedings of the business meeting were not made public, except as to the election of officers. The other matters, it is likely, included the ever-present questions of legislation, exclusive contracts with manufacturers in behalf of jobbers so as to maintain their position as middlemen, discounts and similar topics.

The speech which has caused the most after-talk was delivered as a response to a toast at the banquet by F. B. Milliken, the president of the Wholesale Grocers' Association of Portland Me. In two things he is criticised by retailers, who say that, whatever conditions may be in Portland, he certainly can know nothing of affairs in New York or he would not have talked as he did. He censured manufacturers for seeking the trade of both jobbers and retailers, and compared manufacturers who did this to a cheap class of politicians. The answer to this is, that he cannot know how many of the New York jobbers are themselves manufacturers competing with other manufacturers, so that the latter must go to the retailers or be squeezed out.

The other apparent slip of the speaker was in making it appear that the jobbers do not sell to consumers. It is recalled that at the convention of retailers in Niagara Falls, L. J. Callanan, a retailer who has 60 years of experience to back up what he says, declared that there is no jobber in New York who does not sell to consumers to some extent. The assertion has not been controverted by any jobber of New York.

President F. W. Hannahs, in his address, reviewed the work of the year. He expressed special gratification at the way in which the State Association had assisted in building up the local or city associations. In Buffalo all the jobbers are now affiliated, and in New York all except two.

Secretary A. H. Beckmann submitted a detailed report on the progress and achievements of the association.

The popularity of the president was shown by the fact that although he is in business in New Jersey he was re-elected president of the New York Association for a second term. Of course, Newark is considered in the New York district, for organization purposes, but it takes a strong Jerseyite, as a rule, to get away with the highest honors in a case of this kind, and Mr. Hannahs did it without even trying.

The full list of new officers follows:—

President, F. W. Hannahs, of Wilkinson, Gaddis & Co., Newark, N. J.; first vice-president, George Gennerich, of Gennerich & Von Bremen, New York City; second vice-president, C. F. Wheadon, of Barton & Wheadon, Elmira; third vice-president, O. B. Rowe, of J. O. and G. N. Rowe, Oneonta; treasurer, Edwin B Hosier, of Rafferty & Hosier, New York City.

One of the speakers at the banquet was William Judson, the president of the National Association of Wholesale Grocers, who spoke on the benefits of that organization. Other speakers included Robert G. Bursk, the president, and A. M. Graves, the secretary, of the Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware Association; Fred. R. Drake, Easton, Pa.; F. C. Bushnell, New Haven; G. Waldo Smith, New York; W. Y. Wadleigh, Boston, who spoke on the evil of subsidizing salesmen; E. O. Keeler, the president of the Southern New England Association.

At an enjoyable smoker, the new officers of the New York Retail Grocers' Union were installed Monday evening. The new officers are: Fred. Otten, president; George Stadtlander, first vice-president; H. C. Kloefkorn, recording secretary; Henry Droge, financial secretary; Geo. H. Overbeck, treasurer.

There were several hundred guests and members in attendance, and among them a good many from sister organizations in the several boroughs. The entertainment committee provided several clever vaudeville sketches presented by professional talent on a stage at one end of the hall.

W. H. Steinkamp, counsel of the association, was the installing officer and spoke on the history and achievements of the organization. He warned the members that because the most pressing of the old evils affecting the trade had been removed, some may get carless in their allegiance to the union. He said this would call for all the more work on the part of loyal members so as to keep the organization up to the standard. He assured his hearers that only by constant effort, as an organization, can they maintain the advantages already obtained and also solve the other problems as they arise. He was enthusiastically cheered.

The preliminary hearing in the Government's suit against the American Tobacco Co. was resumed Monday before United States Commissioner Shields as special examiner. Karl Jungbluth, president of the McAndrews & Forbes Licorice Co., testified that he had been in the licorice business since 1872. The American Tobacco Co., he said, owns $785,000 of the McAndrews & Forbes capital stock, and 70 per cent. of the common stock. The indebtedness of the licorice company to the trust varies from $400,000 to $1,500,000. Contracts to run until 1915 exist between the licorice company, the trust and other subsidiary concerns. The witness said that some of the trust officials give advice and direction to the officials of the McAndrews & Forbes Co., and that where directions could not be reconciled those of the trust were usually followed.

The incorporation of the United Grocery Stores was recently announced in these letters. The nature of the enterprise was not known at the time. It is now learned that it is a combination for the purpose of effecting economies in advertising. It is recognized that while the buying exchanges of the retailers enable them to compete with the department stores and chain stores in the matter of economical buying, yet the latter have enjoyed advantages in advertising by taking large quantities of space. The new corporation is to advertise prominently certain lines of articles which are to be had at the prices announced at the various stores of the combination, the names and locations of all being given in each advertisement.

It is supposed that ultimately the plan will be followed in the several boroughs. The start is made in Brooklyn, where the participants in the co-operative scheme of advertising are: 121 Atlantic avenue, James Thompson; 1383 Atlantic avenue, Henry Heins; 1473 Bedford avenue, William Behnken; 16 Clinton street, David M. Bothwell; 330 Clifton place, C. H. Rolka; 262 Flatbush avenue, Gustav Hoops; 973 Flatbush avenue, J. T. McKinney; 710 Fulton street, Underhill Bros.; 727 Fulton street, J. Doscher; 156 Henry street, J. R. H. Flege; 118 Kingston avenue, H. C. Wibben; 133 Lafayette avenue, Herman Haase; 723 Nostrand avenue, C. Beckman; 1287 Pacific street, J. Husing & Son; 222 Reid avenue, Louis Blenderman; 780 Washington avenue, Casper Roth.

The individual management of each store is not to be disturbed. It is said that only the higher grades of articles are to be "featured" in the "ads." A report that the corporation would do some of the buying is denied. Several of the members already belong to other buying exchanges and have no intention, as far as is known, of making any change.

For twenty-five years the office of Superintendent of Weights and Measures for the State of New York has been an office in name only, according to a report filed this week at Albany by F. Reichmann, who was appointed a year ago to that position, and whose annual report is the first document of the kind filed, as prior incumbents have not submitted reports.

He asks that the Legislature provide sufficient funds and authority to carry on the work more systematically. The following recommendations are emphasized:—

That the necessary definite laws be passed explicitly stating the duty of State officers of weights and measures, and county, city and town sealers, and that all sealers be made prosecuting officers with power to search and arrest in cases of violation of the law relating to weights and measures.

That all fees for testing and sealing of weights and measures be abolished and all sealers paid by salary, and that they be placed on a civil service basis.

That more stringent laws be passed against short weighing and short measuring.

That explicit laws be passed relative to the manner of sale of certain commodities.

Several bills designed to carry out these recommendations have been introduced in the State Legislature.

It is given out that a change in policy was decided upon Wednesday at the annual meeting held in Jersey City by the American Sugar Refining Co., as a result of which the affairs of the company are to be given greater publicity and full information is to be furnished stockholders in a statement which the directors will prepare. This reversal of policy seems to be the result of the efforts of Claus A. Spreckels, who went to the meeting prepared to make a fight for publicity, but there was no fight, as President W. B. Thomas announced at the opening of the meeting that the directors were prepared to make all the desired concessions.

In making the announcement the president said that the changed conditions, especially in the attitude of the public toward corporations, was one of the reasons.

Olives Will Be Lower This Year.

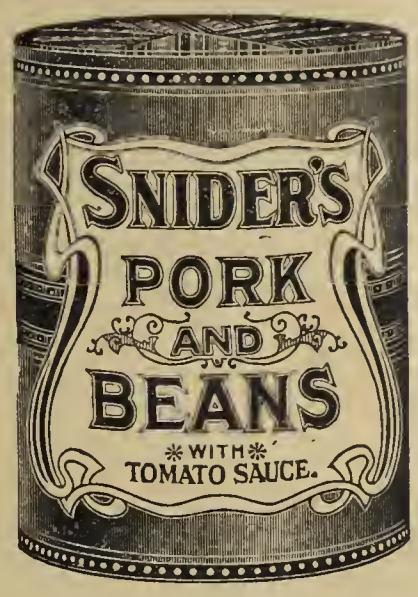
Crop In Spain Normal This Year and Practically All Packers Will Reduce Present Very High Prices.

On account of the fact that the crop of olives in Spain will this year be about normal, practically all packers will name lower prices for 1908 than have ruled for some time. The new price lists are not out yet, but will be in a very few days. Last year's olive crop, it will be remembered, was extremely short.

While as stated, the new price list may not be quoted in its entirety, some idea of the decline may be seen from the fact that a certain popular 25-cent bottle of olives, which last year commanded $2 wholesale, will this year be offered at $1.75.

The 10-cent package will this year begin to assume its old position. Even with olives as high as they have been, there has still been a 10-cent package, but it has been manzanillos. This year the packers will be able to use small queen olives, or increase the size of the bottles.

New Bill Controlling Food Guarantee.



Measure Introduced in National House Forbidding Use of Words Now Employed. Manufacturers Can Use "U. S. Standard" on Their Labels, However.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Washington, D. C.,
Jan. 10, 1908.

In line with the plan of the Food and Drug Enforcement Board touched upon last week, to prevent manufacturers from using on their labels "Guaranteed Under the Food and Drugs Act, June 30, 1906," Representative Mann, of Illinois, yesterday introduced a bill supplementary to the Food and Drugs Act, permitting manufacturers of foodstuffs or drugs which fill the requirements of Government standards, to place thereon labels bearing the words "United States standard"; also forbidding the utilization of any other Government guaranty label except in the following form: "Guaranteed by the manufacturers (or by us) to comply with the Food and Drugs Act of June 30, 1906." WE believe grocers have more influence with their customers than any manufacturer could possibly have through advertising, no matter how good it might be. We advertise Snider's Pork and Beans with Tomato Sauce extensively, in most of the big national mediums, to help the demand for this product, but we particularly want the grocer to know how good it is—because we are certain if he does that, no matter WHOSE Pork and Beans his customers ask for, he will tell them to take because he will want them to be grateful to him—

AND THEY WILL.

THE GROCERY MARKETS

Tea.

The tea market is quiet, but very steady. The demand is seasonably small, but most holders seem to be looking forward to a good demand very shortly. Prices remain unchanged and steady. It is quite probable that if a good active demand developed for low grades prices would advance.

Coffee.

The week's coffee market has been uneventful. Rio and Santos have fluctuated slightly both up and down, and close the week showing no material change. The demand is light. Mild coffees are firm and in good demand. Java and Mocha steady, demand fair.

Sugar.

The sugar market is unchanged for the week. The raw situation is temporarily strong by reason of scarcity. Spot raws show no change for the week, but some sales have been made for February shipment at 1-16 cent advance. The firmness will probably continue only a month or six weeks, as by that time there will be plenty of raws; enough, perhaps, to cause a slight decline in both raw and refined. The demand for refined sugar is fair and seems likely to show some increase within the next few weeks. Several of the large Western beet sugar refineries have closed and have given out that there will be no beet sugar for sale east of Pittsburg. That gives the Eastern refineries an enlarged territory, and will naturally increase the output.

Syrup and Molasses.

The only line which is attracting much attention is molasses, fine grades of which are hard to get and very firm. These grades are wanted. Glucose is unchanged for the week, and so is compound syrup, which is in fair demand. Sugar syrup is unchanged and fairly active on a ruling basis.

Fish.

The fish market is quiet, but strong. Mackerel are in some little demand, but nothing like what they probably will be later. Prices are firmly held. Cod, hake and haddock are unchanged and in moderate demand. No advance has yet occurred in domestic sardines, though the supply is very low and an eventual advance seems almost sure. Imported sardines, meaning more particularly French, are extremely scarce and very high. The demand for Norwegian sardines shows an increase by reason of the French situation, and the chance is that the end of the season will see the Norwegian product more firmly established than it has ever been before. Salmon is unchanged and in fair demand.

Canned Goods.

Very few future canned goods prices have been named as yet, as packers have been waiting until can prices for 1908 were made. It is now announced that they will be somewhat lower than last year. This will probably $1 per 1,000. This will probably have no effect on canned goods prices. Tomatoes are unchanged on the basis which has been ruling for several weeks, and the demand shows some improvement. Corn is dull and unchanged. There is a good demand for future peas, prices on which have now been named from almost every quarter. All packers are on a higher basis than last year, in some cases low grades being 10 cents per dozen. High grades show little difference. The cause is the fact that pea seed, owing to the short crop last year, is this year $6 per bushel, instead of about $2, the usual price. Peaches are scarce, high and unchanged. Apples are still a little weak and dull. The California line is unchanged and quiet. Baltimore canned goods are dull on the ruling basis. The year's record of prices, published elsewhere, shows a wide fluctuation in nearly every line.

Dried Fruits.

Prunes are about unchanged and in some demand. Peaches are still dull, though one or two cheap lots which have come out have been readily taken. Apricots are dull and unchanged. Currants are in fair request at unchanged prices. Raisins are a trifle higher, speaking particularly of seeded, and the demand is good. Loose raisins are unchanged. Citron is a shade lower, but the demand is very light. Figs and dates are unchanged and only moderately active. Apples are easy and quiet.

Beans and Peas.

Pea beans are unchanged on last week's basis and in fair de-

Window-Dressing Articles Wanted

For several months the "Grocery World" has been looking for the right man to take charge of its "Window-Dressing Department" and contribute a good, suggestive weekly article. We have tried several, but none was exactly what was wanted.

We will now attempt to get these articles from our subscribers, probably every one of whom has some technical knowledge of window-dressing. What we want is articles clearly describing window displays that can be made by the average retailer; not necessarily new or original—in fact, those which have been used successfully are perhaps preferable to all others.

For all acceptable articles, the "Grocery World" will pay an average price of $5 each. All matter sent in under this arrangement should be addressed to the "Window-Dressing Department." If drawings are also sent they should be made throughout in black ink (not pencil).

mand. Marrows are perhaps a shade easier and moderately active. California limas are unchanged and wanted to some extent. Green and Scotch peas are about 5 cents per bushel higher and in good demand. Other grades of dried peas are unchanged.

Butter.

The butter market is very firm, though unchanged for the week. The receipts of fresh new creamery are very light, as the bulk of the butter arriving shows frost and other defects. The percentage of extras is thus very light and the market is very healthy for all grades. Considerable butter is being taken out of the refrigerators, and storage stocks are reducing satisfactorily. If there is any change in the market during the week it will probably be a slight advance.

Eggs.

The receipts of fresh-laid eggs are increasing and the market shows a decline of 1 cent per dozen for the week. Prices for the coming week depend on the receipts of fresh. At the present writing it doesn't look like enough of an increase to interfere with prices. A larger supply of fresh eggs is about due, however, and if there is any change it will be a slight decline. Refrigerator eggs are about exhausted at last, and the price has advanced 2 cents per dozen within the week. No holder of refrigerator eggs made any money on them this year.

Cheese.

The cheese market is unchanged. There has been a better inquiry during the past week, though not enough to make any difference in the conditions of the market. Stocks of cheese are lighter than they have been at this time for years. The price is ruling 10 to 15 per cent. higher than usual. No change is looked for during the coming week.

Provisions.

The trade in smoked meats continues dull. At present, however, the market is steady. Pure lard is dull and about ½ cent lower for the week. Compound lard shows a decline of ¼ cent. The weakness on the part of smoked meats and lard is due to the dull trade, coupled with the large supply of hogs. Barrel pork, dried beef and canned meats are dull and unchanged.

Green Fruit.

Bellflower, $3.25 to $4 per barrel; Spy, $3.50 to $4.25 per barrel; Spitz, $4.25 to $5 per barrel; Pippins, $3.25 to $4 per barrel; Greenings, $3.50 to $4.50 per barrel; Hulbersons, $3.50 to $4 per barrel; Baldwins, $2.50 to $4.50 per barrel; Kings, $4.50 to $5 per barrel; Pound Sweets, $3.25 to $3.50 per barrel, demand fair; bananas, jumbo, $1.75 to $2.25; firsts, $1.25 to $1.50; 8-hands, $1 to $1.25; 7-hands, 65 to 90 cents; 6-hands, 40 to 60 cents, demand poor; lemons, $2.75 to $3.50 per box, demand fair; California oranges, $2.75 to $3 per box; Florida, $2.25 to $2.50 per box, demand slow; grapefruit, Florida, $3 to $5.50 per box; tangerines, $3 to $4 per box, demand fair.

Produce.

Jersey potatoes, 45 to 50 cents per basket; York State, 75 to 78 cents per bushel; Pennsylvania, 78 to 80 cents per bushel, demand fair to good; sweet potatoes, primes, 90 cents to $1 per basket; culls, 65 to 75 cents per basket, demand fair to good; yellow globe onions, $1.65 to $1.75 per 2-bushel bags, 40 to 45 cents per basket, demand fair; horseradish, $4 to $4.50 per barrel, demand fair; domestic cabbage, $6 to $9 per ton; Danish, $9 to $12 per ton; savoy, 60 cents per barrel, demand fair; white turnips, 25 cents per basket; yellow, 40 cents, demand fair; watercress, 3 cents per bunch, demand fair; parsnips, $1.25 per barrel, demand poor; carrots, $1.50 to $1.75 per barrel, 40 to 45 cents per basket, demand fair; oyster plants, $3 to $3.50 per barrel, demand fair; beets, $1.50 to $2.50 per barrel, demand fair; Pennsylvania celery, 8 to 12 cents per bunch, demand fair.

Nuts.

Almonds, 17 to 18 cents per pound; Brazil, 10 cents per pound; filberts, 10¼ cents per pound; pecans, 9¾ cents per pound; walnuts, 12½ to 14 cents per pound; mixed nuts, 11 cents per pound, demand poor; peanuts, choice, green, 4 cents per pound; fancy, 5 cents per pound; jumbo, 6¼ cents per pound; roasted, choice, $1 per bushel; fancy, $1.25 per bushel; jumbo, $1.50 per bushel, demand fair.

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORTS.

Baltimore Canned Goods.

No. 1.

Nothing of more than passing interest developed during this week in the Baltimore canned goods market, the attention of both the buyers and the sellers being devoted more to stock-taking and the closing up, as far as possible, of the old business of 1907. Everyone seems to take a cheerful view of the outlook for business, not only in the line of canned goods, but in nearly all other lines of merchandise, and certainly the manufacturers in this section are optimistic almost to a man. The clearing of the financial skies and the disappearance of the premium on gold has taken a great deal of the stiffness and dyspepsia out of even the most grouchy and pessimistic bank president, wherever he is located, and the funeral director is getting the marble heart. Barring further unpleasant developments in banking circles, or again turning on the light, and all that sort of thing, the canned goods market is in first-cass shape for the balance of the current season, and there are yet remaining six or seven of the best months of the whole year in which to do business in the 1907 pack. As it is impossible to add to the quantity of the stocks of Maryland canned goods in existence, it follows naturally that those stocks are being reduced and no section of the country reports any curtailment in the consumption of canned goods. They don't go out of fashion, and the people must eat them because they are at once the cheapest and the healthiest sort of food for the masses. The continued steady buying for immediate shipment in small quantities, embracing every staple article in the list, is the best and safest barometer of the state of trade because it indicates, without doubt, that the jobbers are making their purchases only as they actually need the goods, and the fact that they do need them is the main point. There is a firm undertone to the tomato market, and the steady buying of them in carload lots by nearly all sections, excepting the South, gives the holders much encouragement. Besides tomatoes, the articles most in demand are cove oysters, sweet potatoes, string beans, baked beans, spinach and peas.

There has been very little business done in tomatoes this week. A few lots are being sold and where sales are being made it is on the basis of open quotations. Packers are showing absolutely no anxiety about selling goods. They seem to think that nothing is to be gained by cutting prices, as there has evidently not been much disposition to take hold during this dull spell. It is very doubtful if a cut in price would result in an improved demand.

The publication of the statistics covering this season's tomato pack indicates a heavy, though not an unexpectedly heavy pack, and it is not likely that these statistics will unfavorably affect the market. The fact is, packers have cleaned out all but a comparatively small percentage of this season's pack, and allowing for all unfavorable elements which have recently arisen, it is more than likely that the stock of tomatoes still left in the hands of packers will begin moving out at some not very distant date and will probably be cleaned out long before next season.

MARKET NOTES.

The Florida orange market is flat. Both at Philadelphia and New York the receipts are much in excess of the demand, and prices are therefore about $1 per box cheaper than a few weeks ago. From $1.50 to $3 is now the range. The demand is fair.

Tomatoes from Havana are about the market, bringing only $1.50 per crate. Florida tomatoes range from $2.50 to $3.50 and the demand is light. Hothouse tomatoes average 20 cents per pound, and seem not to be wanted.

Florida beans range from $2 to $3 per crate. The demand is fair, though the quality is mostly poor.

The cranberry market is still a little sick. The best fruit can be bought for $2.25 per crate, and the average ranges from $1.25 to $1.50. The demand is only fair.

Useful Facts About Groceries

The department which will henceforth be conducted under the above head is best explained by the letter which appears below, and which was recently sent to the 'Grocery World." In the hope that a little such matter may be of interest and value to "Grocery World" readers, a short educational article along the lines indicated will appear under this head from time to time.

Vermontville, N. Y.

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—I have long wanted a book which would be a sort of encyclopædia, one that would take a certain article, describe it, tell where it grew, how it was prepared for market, what season of the year it was marketed, how it should be stored, whether in a cold or warm place.

Such a book was published once, but as near as I can find out it is out of print now.

I was thinking if the "Grocery World" could devote, say, half a column a week to a work of this kind we would have, in a little while, the long-looked-for work.

But I won't ask for too much, for we are getting good things all the time.

Very truly yours, N. H. BRECKENRIDGE.

Moselle Wines.

A highly esteemed variety of clear, wholesome, dry wines of pleasant musk-like, or elder-flower flavor. Produced in Lorraine on the banks of the river Moselle.

These wines have a general resemblance of flavor with hocks and Rhine wines, and are often sold as such, but they will not keep so long, and do not taste quite so acid. They possess about 6 per cent. of absolute alcohol.

They are nearly all made from unripe grapes, and professedly almost equal to champagne.

Of still Moselles, there are Scharzberger, etc., Winninger and Zeltinger are cheaper qualities.

Mulligatawny Soup.

This is the name of a celebrated East Indian curry soup, usually prepared from ordinary "stock," meat or fowl, to which a liberal quantity of curry powder is added, also a little bacon, carrots, turnips, herbs, lemon juice, salt and cayenne.

Muscadine Wines.

These are appellations given a variety of strong and sweet wines made from muscat grapes.

The best of these wines produced in France are those of Rivesaltes and Lunel, then Frontinac and Montbabin.

Of Italian the best are the Syracusan, Moscata, Giro; and the muscat of Alghieri and Oleastra in Sardinia.

A South American muscatel wine, made in Chili, is also considered an excellent product.

Muscatel Raisins.

These are considered the finest quality of raisins produced, and derive their name from the species of grape used, which has a strong odor or flavor of musk.

The finest muscatels come from Malaga and are usually left to mature, shrink and dry on the stalk, which is partially cut through, after the branches have been detached from the vine and the leaves removd, so as to leave the grapes exposed to the sun.

To help this the grapes are carefully turned from time to time, and covered at night with matting to preserve their bloom. To give them a glossy appearance, and render the skins soft and flexible, it is customary to dip the grapes in a lye of wood ashes and barilla, with olive oil and a little salt, and then to redry them. This alkali also removes the waxy covering which retards the drying.

There are practically no Florida cucumbers on the market. Hothouse cues range from $1 to $1.25 per dozen and the demand is slow.

Florida grapefruit are a little off. The range is now $3 to $5 per box and the demand is good.

Florida tangerines range from $3 to $4.50 and the demand is good.

Florida eggplants of good quality are coming forward and averaging $2 per half-barrel crate. The quality is good.

Florida peppers range from $1.50 to $1.75 per crate and are selling very fairly.

Spanish onions of very large size, but very mild in flavor, are in good demand at $2.50 per barrel crate.

Strawberries are coming North from Florida regularly and range from 50 to 75 cents per quart.

The first Michigan rhubarb is on the market and ranges from 90 cents to $1 per bunch. The demand is light.

The Charges Against the Colorado Grocers.

To give some idea of the trend of the anti-trust action against the Colorado Retail Grocers' Association, an affidavit was filed by J. E. Roach, a coffee and spice dealer. Roach says that he never belonged to the association and so that when he received from it in 1905 a card fixing the retail price of sugar at 16 pounds for $1 he paid no attention to it. Soon after he ordered goods from the J. S. Brown Mercantile Co., he claims, the Morey Mercantile Co., the Nave-McCord Mercantile Co., Spratlen & Anderson and the Struby Estabrook Co. He was informed that they would not fill his order or sell him any more goods. Spratlen & Anderson, he alleges, apologized for their action, but declared that it was a matter of self-protection for them. Mr. Roach further avers that Spratlen & Anderson told him that they were allowed 10 cents on each sack of sugar they sold in compliance with the orders of the association, and within a certain period would be allowed an additional 10 cents per sack commission; but, if they violated the combine's rules, they would lose their entire 20 cents profit.

PRICES FOR FRIDAY and SATURDAY, NOV. 8 and 9

SUCCESS

does not depend upon any one—but upon the combined SMALL profits from all of our sales. This is the secret of our small prices. The exclusively one line store must charge more, for it has but one source of revenue.

PORK.

Our shipment of Pork for this week consists of the nicest country pigs to be had. They are small pigs, and the meat is very tender and juicy.

FRESH HAMS.

These hams weigh from 10 to 14 lbs. each. For an economical purchase as well as getting a delicious piece of meat, they are unsurpassed. 12 1-2¢ per lb.

FRESH SHOULDERS.

Have you ever ordered one of our small, fresh shoulders? If not, do so now, as this week they are fine. Weighing 4 to 6 lbs., 10¢ per lb.

SIDE PORK.

Cut from small pigs, this side pork is cut in small strips, nicely streaked with fat and lean. 12 1-2¢ per lb.

SAUSAGE.

Fresh made every day, 3 lbs., 25¢.

HAMBURG.

The first purchase of this hamburg is never the last. 3 lbs., 25¢.

CABBAGE

Our supply of large, solid, good heads of cabbage is the kind to buy now to store for winter's use. $4.25 per hundred.

FIG BARS

Fresh, new goods. Made from choicest materials, filled with best figs. Special, 3 lbs., 25¢.

LAMB.

To use an old phrase—you can fool the people but once, but they won't be "having any" a second time.

Whenever we make a special price on goods these sales are taken advantage of, and our customers have confidence in these prices and know the goods are never at a sacrifice to quality.. For Saturday Lamb will be sold at a decrease in price.

	Per lb.
Fore Quarters	12½¢
Hind Quarters	16¢
Legs of Lamb	20¢
Loins of Lamb	18¢
Lamb Chops	18¢

Huck Towels, best quality, hemstitched border, size 18x37, 25¢ each.
Hand Towels at all prices, 10¢, 15¢, 2 for 25¢.

I don't like the way the advertisement is set at all. Where it is not possible to separate paragraphs and columns by blank space, they ought to be separated by rules. Further than that, there doesn't seem to have been any system used here in the division of the space. Some paragraphs run the full width of the advertisement, others run half the width and still others only a quarter. I don't think that a good plan at all. Make the columns uniform. In an advertisement this size they could either be one-third the width, that is three columns to the advertisement, or they could be half the width, or two columns to the advertisement, preferably three columns. Rules should divide the columns and long dashes divide the paragraphs. That would make such an improvement in the appearance of this advertisement that you wouldn't know it.

It always goes against the grain with me to see an advertiser's name at the head of his advertisement. That is, at the head in the way it is here. It is all right, in order to designate the advertisement, to have the name Sponnoble in small black type in the middle of the top line, but then it becomes in no sense the heading, as it is now. The large name, address, telephone number, etc., should go at the bottom. As to the head, "Prices for Friday and Saturday. November 8th and 9th," Mr. Sponnoble may have found that such a heading succeeds better with him than a snappier heading, but on general principles, I should advise a headline of a different character. Something like "Your Sunday Marketing Is Here." The word "Success" makes a very tame head. I should put the name at the bottom, eliminate the little head "Success," and change the head beginning "Prices, etc.," as I have indicated.

The matter in this advertisement is good. It is short, terse, and persuasive, and if the form of the advertisement were changed it would be a good advertisement.

New Bermuda potatoes are lower because of poor demand. The price averages $4 for No. 2s and $6 for No. 1s. The quality is good.

Canned Goods Fluctuations for 1907

"Grocery World" Presents Usual Compilation Showing Opening, Highest, Lowest and Closing Prices of Staple Foods for the Year Just Over. Prices Show that Nearly Every Line Fluctuated Widely During the Past Twelve Months.

The "Grocery World" publishes the usual Compilation of the course of the past past year of staple canned goods prices, furnished by Thomas J. Meehan & Co., the Baltimore canned goods brokers. Messrs. Meehan & Co. accompany their Compilation with the following statement regarding the canned goods situation:

> The canners in this section will carry into the new year a much lighter average stock of canned goods than they have held at any time during the last six or eight years, and it is conceded, we believe, that the jobbers in nearly all sections of the country are, also, carrying at this time smaller stocks of Maryland canned goods than usual. The consumption of canned goods during the year has been larger, perhaps, than in any previous year, and the frequent duplication of small orders for goods for immediate shipment indicates a continuance of same during the winter and spring months. The weather continues very favorable for the shipping of canned goods without danger of freezing on the road, and the combination of all these circumstances forms the basis of the belief that the next six months will witness a revival in a larger way of the buying all along the line.

Whence the Seven Washings

The first starches on the market to-day are Murdoch's Laundry and Corn Starches.

They represent an effort to overcome a powerful competition by depending on quality alone—an effort that has been magnificently successful.

The amount of trouble we go to to make these starches perfect is almost incredible—seven washings are just one illustration.

You have probably never seen quite so good starches as Murdoch's. Get samples and see if we're not right.

Oswego Maize Products Company

OSWEGO NEW YORK

This Tells the Tale

A product which has been on the market fifty-eight years is a product which has stood the hardest of all tests—the test of time. "Knight's Cooking Extracts" is a phrase familiar to man, woman and child, from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the Lakes to the Gulf. It is easy to tell why; no housewife ever had a bottle go back on her and no housewife ever will. Good extracts must be on your shelves. Grocers, if you sell Knight's Extracts we need say nothing more to you; if you don't, we want one order from you—we are sure of more. You are certain of their absolute purity and a good profit.

Window Dressing for Grocers

In this department from now on will appear each week suggestive articles regarding the proper use of the retail grocer's window. An endeavor will be made to deal with the subject practically, in other words, to show grocers how they can turn their windows into a money-making feature of their business. Subscribers are invited to make free use of the department by submitting both queries or suggestions.

A Flour Window.

First clean the window and glass thoroughly. Cover the floor of the window with green crepe paper.

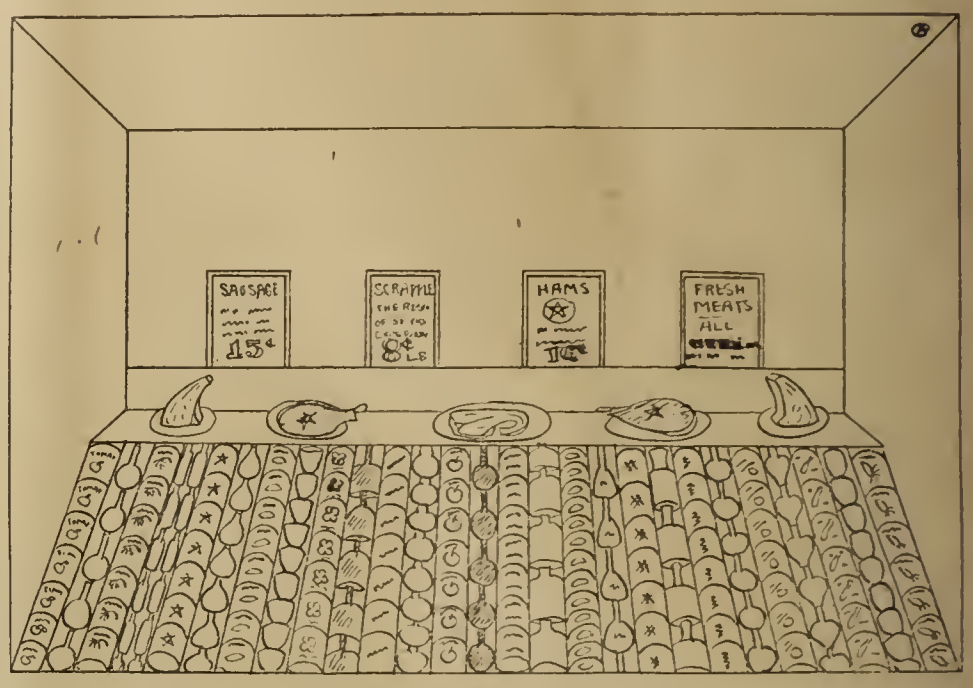
Take a barrel, a flour barrel, if possible, saw the barrel so that you have the bottom and about a foot of the side. Empty a flour bag, split up the back and tack or paste on the end of the barrel. Put the barrel in a corner of the window.

Have a sign in the window as per illustration No. 2.

FERNDALE FLOUR
A FINE WHITE FLOUR

5 lb Bag	20c
12 lb Bag	45c
Barrel	$6.85

If arranged according to directions, it will look fine, and if advertised at the same time you will find it will sell quite a pile of flour.



Pile the bags of flour along the sides of the barrel and in the remainder of the window as per illustration.

A Meat, Canned and Bottled Goods Window.

While this is not an entirely new scheme, it makes a neat and attractive window. The canned and bottled goods are banked on a platform (slanting), and the meat is displayed on a shelf, back and even with the top edge of the platform.

First make your shelf, about 12 inches wide and the length of the window. Fasten this shelf about 22 inches above the floor and about 28 inches back from glass. The slanting platform extends from the front edge of this shelf to the floor of window next to glass.

The platform and shelf are covered with white wrapping paper. Between the rows of canned and bottled goods are plastering lath (covered with paper), to keep goods in position.

Under the meat plates are mats made of green crepe tissue paper, cut the shape of the plate and about 2 inches wider.

Above the shelf are hung several price cards.

So Far, So Good.

William H. Crane, the actor, tells of two impecunious players who, during a period of enforced "liberty," were compelled to dine at cheap table d'hote restaurants on the East Side. One evening, during each course of such a dinner, one of the actors kept saying:—

"Honest, Frank, isn't this a good dinner? Isn't it good? Did you ever eat a better dinner in your life for thirty-five cents?"

Frank was silent until the end of the fifth course, when his friend repeated his formula. Then, with a commendable affectation of enthusiasm, Frank answered:—

"A splendid dinner, old man! A splendid dinner! Let's have another."—January "Lippincott's.

Slices Everything from 6-pound Knuckles to half-ounce Ends.

MAKE OUR HISTORY YOUR GUIDE TO SUCCESS

A few years ago A. W. Johnson, a retail grocer, refurnished his store with tilting bins, new scales, electric coffee mill, molasses pump and a new dried-beef cutter. These equipments were satisfactory labor-saving devices with the single exception of the new dried-beef cutter; this, although a highly advertised, standard machine, was incapable of doing nice work. After carefully investigating the merits of every slicing machine on the market he did not find one that was actually slicing dried beef in a workmanlike, economical manner. Being a thorough, competent mechanic with an inventive turn of mind, backed by many years of experience cutting dried beef, he determined to design and construct an altogether new machine, avoiding or correcting the defects of the others and embodying new, practical devices of simple construction.

The new machine was a success—a world beater—it sliced dried beef to perfection. His customers were delighted with the broad. smooth, perfect slices, deliciously juicy, transparently thin—so much superior to any beef they ever saw—naturally he gained trade, his sales of beef increased week by week until Johnson's dried beef became a household word, and people would use no other kind, while the new machine sliced up every little scrap in thin, salable slices and reduced waste to a minimum.

Send for a sample of this famous sliced beef—the beef that beats the world.

Saving Money.

Sometime awhile back I made a few wise remarks about saving money so long that you lost all relish for spending it.

What I said had a tremendous impression on one person, anyway—the queen of my palatial home. She read that article the day it came out and touched me on the spot. Women have got no right to read trade papers, anyway.

This week I want to say a little more along the same line.

Do you know it's the easiest thing in the world to get to be a miser?

The miser isn't always born; sometimes he's made.

I know a certain grocer who has a store up in New York State near the Pennsylvania line. I don't often get up his way, but when I do I always get in to see him. He's all right.

But he's getting to be a miser as fast as he can. It's a shame, too, for he's too good a man.

Up to a few years ago he was a good spender. Believed in putting his money in his home, in his store, and in clothes for himself and his family. He wasn't any spendthrift, but he made a little money every year and spent it freely.

I guess he spent about all he made, as a matter of fact.

From somebody or other he got the idea that it was a crime not to put some money away every year. That's got to be a sort of obsession with him and he's been doing nothing with it but putting it away ever since.

To-day I consider him, from what I saw when I was in his store last, pretty darned close to a miser.

Why, I saw the change in his store as plain as could be. I wouldn't say it looked run down, but he used to be a great man for new fixtures. Little new convenient things like broom racks, and schemes for displaying goods he always bought, and he never used his big fixtures after they got shabby. His store used to be up to the minute all the time—a bright, enterprising little place that looked like keen business.

When I was there it looked like the ordinary country store. As good as the average? Well, yes, I should say it was. But it used to be way above the average. If it could stay about the average, it would, of course be all right, but it won't, because I'm satisfied from the way he talked that as he keeps on being niggardly, his store's going to keep on running down.

Store fixtures don't improve with use, you know that.

I could see the change in him, too—see it plain. He used to be really a swell dresser, almost as swell as I was, though of course he never had my shape.

And he was a fellow that used to give some thought to his clothes, too, and it showed in the way he looked.

When I saw him the other day he had on a cheap-looking department store suit that I'll bet a dollar didn't cost over $10. I ain't jeering at a $10 suit. I've worn 'em many a time. And if a man can't afford any more, that's all he ought to pay. But if he can afford to pay more, as this particular grocer can, it's a mistake to buy $10 suits.

Why, he was poorer dressed than his own clerks. Looked cheap and insignificant.

I had quite a chat with him. How was he getting on? All right, he said, and in two seconds the conversation was around to how much money he was saving. Why, as soon as he had got around to that his ears cocked up, his eyes got bright and he looked like a different fellow.

You could see it was a monomania.

He was in three building associations, had four or five endowment insurance policies, besides some other investments.

"I've put away some money in the last five years," he said. "I've had to run close to do it, but I've done it, all right. If I were to sell out everything to-day I'd have a tidy little pile."

I tried to talk about some other things, but there was nothing doing. Saving money—saving money—saving money; that was all he knew.

Just as different from what he used to be as if he'd been another man!

"What's your object in keeping your nose down to the grindstone this way?" I said. "What are you going to do with this money you're laying up? Have you got any special object in view?"

"Why, don't every man want money?" he asked in utter astonishment.

"Sure," I replied, "but some of 'em like what it brings more than the money itself. You ain't saving just for the love of saving, are you?"

"Of course not," he said, "I'm doing it because I want a little surplus. And then (you note that this came second) I want to leave my family well fixed."

"Well, the way to do that," I said, "is to carry good insurance. Not endowment insurance, the kind you're carrying, where all the money comes to you if you live, but the old kind. It's a darned sight cheaper and just as good for the family. Then you could spend some of your money and get some good out of it."

He shook his head. No spending for little Willie! Saving was the thing that had come to amuse him a darned sight more than spending.

I didn't ask him what his wife thought of putting every cent away, because it was none of my business. I think I can form an idea, though, if she's anything like mi—some wives.

Do you know I look on that man as being in a dangerous position. When a man gets to put saving money before business and everything else, it's liable to run away with him and break his neck. He don't see his needs and his store's needs clear any more. Instead of saying "will spending this money give me any real comfort or do my business any good?" and if the answer is yes, spending it, he says, "can I possibly get along without this?" and if he can he does.

A man like that'll learn to be without so much after awhile he'll shrivel up and blow away.

THE STROLLER.

Two-Minute Sermons for the Retail Grocer

XXV.—Advertise for Friends.

Your regular customer will read your "ad." if it is made interesting.

A good many retailers write their advertisements like they expected their local papers to go into the hands of a lot of absolute strangers, and they wanted these strangers to have their card, so they just published it in the paper, where it would be handy for the strangers to refer to when they wanted to find out all the lines of goods handled in the town.

For the guidance of such retailers, I would say that the number of strangers reached by the local paper is very small, and the number of old customers reached should be very large. Old customers already know the lines of goods carried in every store in town, and merchants waste their money in advertising when all they do is to repeat this information over and over.

Remember that it is the old customer that you reach in the local paper, and remember that if you want to interest him and cause him to come to your store to buy you must tell him about some particular thing you have for sale, and tell the story in so interesting a manner that he will want the goods right away.

Just make your "ad." talk for you the same as though you were talking direct to the regular customer.

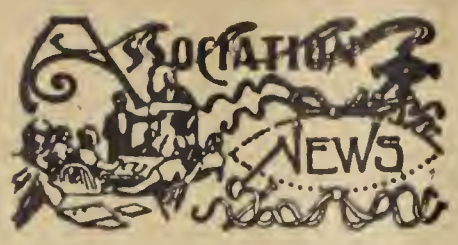
Air-Dried Beef.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Jan. 7, 1908

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—Will you kindly give me the address of the house who advertised "Air-Dried" beef in the "Grocery World" about a year ago. At that time I was not interested, but now I have a machine for slicing dried beef and want to get the best.



Thanking you in advance, I am,

Yours truly,

W. L. VAN AUKEN.

The firm was William Moland's Sons, 120 Market street, Philadelphia.

Mr. H. C. Miller, of Pittsburg, Pa., has secured the patent privileges for the manufacture of a coffee reducing and chaff separating machine in the county of Allegheny; he is about to open a series of coffee stores in the former city where these machines will be installed.

T. A. James, well-known merchandise broker of this city, died after a long illness early last Thursday morning. He had successfully fought off chronic Brights' Disease for about fifteen months, only to succumb at last to pneumonia and die after three days of it. Mr. James was formerly associated with William Bonsor, later with the firm of T. A. James & Co., and finally with James & Washington, his partner being George S. Washington. The business has practically been conducted by Mr. Washington for over a year, Mr. James having been almost wholly incapacitated during the greater part of that time. His death may or may not cause a reorganization of the corporation.

At the rooms of the Philadelphia Retail Grocers' Association last Tuesday afternoon was held a meeting at which the following were present: Messrs. Kaiser, Smedley, Ross and Buckley, representing the association; Mr. Hunter, representing the Acme Tea Co.; Mr. Scanlan, of the Wm. Butler Co.; Messrs. Robinson and Crawford, members of the firm of that name; George Dunlap and James Bell. The object of the meeting was the discussion of ways and means for improving existent conditions.

Sausage Containing Cereals Is Adulterated.

So Says Michigan Court. Defendants Said Custom Had Made Cereals and Water Normal Ingredients, but Court Says Only Normal Ingredients are Chopped Meat and Seasoning.

If a decision just handed down by Circuit Judge Wiest, in the Michigan Court at Lansing, is upheld throughout the country, a considerable change must be made in the method of manufacturing sausage. The court decides that cereals and water are not proper ingredients.

The decision comes at the end of a long fight between Armour & Co. and the Michigan Food Commissioner. The Armour people asked for an injunction restraining the Commissioner from publishing their sausage as adulterated. First one party to the litigation won and then the other. The case has been tried on its merits during the week and the decision was against Armour & Co. in the following language:—

> With the general public of this generation largely reared on farms and in small villages and remembering home-made sausage, there is no occasion to look at a dictionary to define sausage. The common definition is that it is composed of chopped meat seasoned and the definition must prevail as against a manufacturer's process of adding cereals and water.

Armour & Co. defended on the ground that cereals and water had by long custom come to be natural ingredients of sausage. The Michigan decision overturns this and so far as it goes decides that only chopped meat seasoned can go into sausage.

The court recommended, however, that the Food Commissioner refrain from publishing sausage containing cereals as adulterated until the court of last resort had decided the question.

Why Jones Lost Trade.

I stopped in at Jones' store, down on Sixty-third street, last Friday.

"How's business," I asked.

"Not very good," he said, in a tone of voice that sounded like a rainy day in November. "A new store opened up in this block about a year ago, and somehow I seem to be losing ground. I have been here twenty years, have always been fair and square, kept my prices reasonable, made it a point to buy low and sell low; and I had an idea my trade would stick to me."

I have known Jones for some years. He certainly has been square, and I was sorry for him. "There goes one of them now," he said, as a woman went into the store on the other side of the street. "Her trade was worth $25 a week to me."

I wandered across the street into the place of Jones' competitor. Jones' lost patron was ordering a five-pound pail of lard with the Government inspection seal across the top, and a handsome blue and yellow label; and there was also, I noticed, an attractive display of these package goods in the window. The whole place had a spick-and-span, up-to-date look.

"It surely is a pleasure to sell these original package goods," the proprietor was saying to his customer. "Quick, neat and sanitary."

"But," I interrupted, "isn't this pail lard considerably more expensive than the kind that comes in bulk?" "I don't think so," he said, "when you figure out what you are getting. It is the sort of thing the best class of trade want nowadays; they like to have the food of their families protected in every possible way. It goes a long way toward helping to keep my place neat and clean. Some of my customers say they wouldn't be afraid to eat off the floor here. Jones over there says I am getting a double profit on my goods. Well, perhaps, I am, but I have the cream of the trade, as well as a good deal of the skimmed milk, and I'm getting more every day."

"Hadn't you better wake up," I said, later to Jones.

"What do you mean?" he asked.

"Here you are," said I, "running a dingy, old-fogy place that would have been all right twenty-five or even ten years ago, but is just as much out of date now as if it had dropped down out of the Middle Ages. You are digging the lard out of tubs for your trade, instead of handling it in neat, attractive, air-tight pails, with a label that shows people what they are getting."

"But I sell good lard," remonstrated Jones, "and it is cheaper."

"Are you sure it is," said I, "when you count the certainty of cleanliness and purity, on account of the air-tight pail and the insurance the label gives of quality. Perhaps some people don't care, but the particular people are the ones it is worth while to please, because they have the most influence, and are the people who bring new customers. They don't want their food exposed any more than can be helped, to flies, dust and other unsanitary conditions.

"Then think what it means to you—less time and trouble to handle—neat, attractive appearance—no waste, and a certain known profit, as well as the demand that the advertised label gives. Your friend on the other side of the street says it pays, and he is in pretty good position to know."

"Perhaps you are right," Jones reluctantly admitted. "I wanted to be shown, but it doesn't always pay to wait until everyone else has been shown first."

Question: ———D., * * *, Pa.—A man owes my father and me the sum of $124 for merchandise that he bought from us when we were in the store business at ———, Pa., and which we cannot collect. This man has money in the bank and I would like to know if we could attach his bank account.

Thanking you in advance for an early reply, I remain.

Answer.—You can undoubtedly attach this man's bank account, but you must first get judgment against him. Sue him before a justice of the peace (they have jurisdiction over claims up to $300 outside Philadelphia County), and then issue an attachment execution against his bank deposits. This will of course be subject to his rights under the exemption act. If the deposit is not over $300 he can claim it under the exemption law, but you could then issue execution against any other assets of his you could find.

Quaker Oats Co. Answers Jobbers' Criticism.

Says It Has Made No Change in Its Methods. Accuses Trade Paper of Creating Strife in order To Get Advertising.

Apropos of the criticism which has developed among wholesale grocers against the Quaker Oats Co., a collateral corporation to the American Cereal Co., for its apparent efforts to get closer to the retailer than the jobbers think is fair, the Oats Co. has issued the following letter to the jobbing trade all over the country:—

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 31, 1907.

To the Wholesale Grocery Trade:—

A certain trade paper, apparently anxious to convince us of the wisdom of utilizing its columns for advertising, printed an article intimating that a terrible fight was in progress between the jobbers and our company over the policy we were alleged to have recently adopted of going over the heads of the jobbers and selling our products to the retail trade direct. This article in altered form has been copied by a number of trade papers, and it may have reached your eyes.

In the event any explanation on our part is needed, we want to say to you that there is not a word of truth in it. We have not altered our policy a particle. We are marketing our products to-day just as we have done for many years past, and we hope we may be permitted to continue to do so. Nothing is further from our minds than the idea of cutting out the jobber. Such a step has not even been discussed by our management. We stand to-day where we have always stood.

We offer you our holiday greetings.

Your truly,
THE QUAKER OATS CO.
C. C. Coldren,
Assistant Sales Manager.

The trade paper aimed at in the above communication is the New York "Journal of Commerce," which has been particularly active in stirring up the jobbing trade against the Quaker Oats Co.

The jobbing interests do not seem to be entirely convinced by the Quaker Oats Co's letter.

Bog Spavin.

Chas. E. West, Gotebo, Okla., writes November 15, 1907: "I am in receipt of your letter of recent date. I purchased your Absorbine from the druggist and applied it according to directions as given for bog spavin and had grand success. One bottle was enough to do the work.

"I can give high praise for your Absorbine and shall recommend it for bog spavin above all other medicines that I tried, and I tried a good many different kinds. I remain as ever your customer."

Absorbine penetrates to the seat of trouble promptly and effectually, without blistering or removing the hair. Does not require the horse to be laid up. Mild in its action but positive in its results. It will give you satisfaction. $2 a bottle at druggist. Manufactured by W. F. Young, P. D. F., 9 Monmouth street, Springfield, Mass.

Manufacturers who have adopted premium schemes to create a demand for their products, have always given the premiums to consumers. Where manufacturers have offered an incentive to grocers to push their goods, the incentive has always been small. It had to be small, because no individual manufacturer could afford to give a grocer from his individual profits anything more important than a silk hat, an umbrella, etc. But when twenty or more prominent manufacturers, whose products are sold by grocers everywhere, set aside a part of their advertising appropriations to put into a fund to buy something substantial for the merchant, that something represents an article of sufficient value to make it worth the grocer's while to take a real interest in pushing the goods of the manufacturers who take this means of showing their appreciation of the grocer's services. That the importance of this matter may be plain to you, figure out the following: The Knickerbocker Chocolate Co., New York, gives you a quantity of Universal coupons with their Hasty Lunch Chocolate, Bedford and Blue Ribbon Cocoa. No better goods ever came into this market. Add these coupons to the ones you get with the products of the following firms and you will find you can save enough coupons in three months to entitle you to a first-class set of harness, a platform scale or a roll-top desk. In six months you can save enough to get a good runabout, in a year a good piano:

The American Preserve Co., Philadelphia; Wrigley Manufacturing Co., Philadelphia; Franklin Baker Co., Philadelphia; the Porcela Co., Philadelphia; McCanna & Fraser Co., Philadelphia; John Scott & Co., Philadelphia; Weber & Loesch, Philadelphia; Wm. Dreydoppel's Sons, Philadelphia; J. W. Beardsley's Sons, New York; Dixon Crucible Co., Jersey City; Sea Foam Baking Powder Co., New York; Flodon Manufacturing Co., Boston, Mass.; Potter & Wrightington, Boston, Mass.

Within a month a number of other big local houses will join this enterprise. Don't you think this matter is important enough for you to push the goods of these firms? Don't you think the manufacturers who have been been first to recognize the grocer's right of consideration should have the grocer's hearty co-operation?

WANTED—A good salesman for New York State, from Albany west; must know tea, coffee and spice trade. Address Samuel Wilde's Sons Co., 11 Dutch street, New York. tf

FOR RENT.

FOR RENT—Large General Store (owned by the undersigned estate) in Quarryville, Lancaster County. Pa. This Borough has a population of about 800. Is the terminus of two steam railroads, a trolley line and two new state turnpikes. It is the only town of any considerable size in the ten lower townships of Lancaster County, and commands a large proportion of their patronage. It has two banks, and does more business in a week than most towns of its size in a month. In fact, during the year of 1907, it is carefully estimated to have exceeded $800,000, not including the money paid out in the borough for tobacco which will amount to about $150,000 yearly. The borough has, besides this store, one large general store, carrying every line, and one smaller general store, one small grocery and a large hardware store. This store has enjoyed a large patronage for half a century. The location is the best in the borough, and in the midst of the town's business activity, within 200 feet of the depot of the Lancaster & Quarryville Railroad, the Lancaster, Oxford & Southern Railroad, the freight station and the terminus of the trolley line. The building is large, well-lighted, and is undergoing repairs; it has a fine cellar. It will be rented on good terms. The opportunity for an energetic man to establish a fine business in one of the best towns of its size is here afforded. A renter will not be handicapped with a stock of old goods, as the building is entirely empty and ready for immediate occupancy. For any further information address George W. Hensel's Estate, Quarryville, Lancaster Co., Pa. tf

You Should THINK NOW When You Buy Tea

The price is away up, but you can still buy Caricol Tea at a price which enables you to sell it at 160 per cent. profit. This profit is one very important point in Caricol's favor, but there's another still more important—it pleases almost everybody who drinks it so well that they keep buying it.

Thomas Martindale & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

Do You Want to Make $300 More Every Year?

It is a mighty nice thing to be able to increase your profits by such a tidy sum as $300 a year on an investment of less than $20, but that is what you can do if you will put in an Acme Peanut Roaster (equipped for kerosene, gas or gasoline), the simplest and cheapest automatic roaster made. Anybody can operate it. There is nothing to get out of order and little or no expense in running it.

Give your customers a chance to buy freshly roasted peanuts and you will make from $1 to $3 a day. We would like to tell you more about it.

Rae's Lucca Olive Oil

An Olive Oil of the purest quality—pressed only from perfect olives and carefully preserved from contact with anything that would hurt its exquisite flavor; beautiful to the eye and agreeable to the taste.

Do you keep it in stock?

H. KELLOGG & SONS, PHILADELPHIA
AGENTS FOR SAMUEL RAE & CO., LEGHORN, ITALY

WE HAVE THE BEST OF REASONS FOR TALKING ABOUT IT

We make a point of exploiting the fact that you will find "The Bottom as Good as the Top" in Apelpi Evaporated Apples, simply because usually the top is very much better than the bottom. We pride ourselves on this particular brand, have built up a big demand for it on its quality alone—you can do the same thing.

HERE IS YOUR QUESTION ANSWERED

Why put in Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa when you are selling five brands now? Well, because it is different from the rest, for one reason. It is the only cocoa packed in glass. It stands alone, and you know how novelty helps a thing to sell. The grocer who infuses a little novelty into his business is the grocer who succeeds.

Another thing, Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa is better than the rest. That isn't a bluff, honestly. We take out of our cocoa, in the making, a substance which other manufacturers allow in, greatly to the injury of the flavor of their goods.

Now do you know why you should sell it?

Will you mention the "Grocery World" when you write?

40 cents a pound

Packed in ½-lb. jars, 6 and 12-lb. boxes

CROFT & ALLEN CO. Philadelphia PENNSYLVANIA

Do You Know What Ramly Stands For?

We'll tell you—the finest Turkish cigarette ever made to sell for 10 cents. It is the one that is so widely imitated by our competitors.

If you want particular smokers to come to you, put the Ramly in stock.

The Barrel Man's the Only Loser

Ninety-nine out of one hundred women would rather buy goods in packages than goods in bulk. Mainly because they think they're cleaner, and so they are.

So that when you ask your trade to pay a fraction of a cent more per pound for Franklin Carton Sugar you are simply doing something which it's their tendency to do anyway. In 99 per cent. of the cases the fraction of a cent advance will cut no figure at all.

Now, when they buy Franklin Carton Sugar look what they do for you. They save you work and they save you the loss of giving them "good measure."

Franklin Carton Sugar is a splendid thing for everybody.

Clean, sanitary cartons that preserve strength and freshness. Two-pound cartons and 2, 5, 10, 25, 50 and 100-pound cotton bags : : :

Not a Bad Pound in 91 Years

The food laws aimed at nothing quite so straight as they aimed at spices, for nothing in the world was more adulterated before the food laws came.

Wouldn't it comfort you to sell the spices of a concern that never in its 91 years of life sold anything but pure spices—whose goods were never questioned by any food law?

Yes, you say, if they were profitable.

Listen: Our spices in quarter-pound cartons cost you less than 20 cents a pound, yet you can easily get 40 cents for them. Is 100 per cent. profitable enough?

Only Pickles Packed in Tin

So far as we know Hoffman House Pickles are the only ones packed in tin, possibly because we alone have discovered the way to pack them in tin properly.

We use a new method of pickling that eliminates some of the sourness and all the acrid bite. Then we put them in special tins, enamelled inside.

No little gherkin we know of, no matter what it's packed in, can compare with Hoffman House. Delicious, appetizing, and splendid seller.

Watch the Insects Swarm to the Light

Almost every living thing is attracted by light—particularly is this so with the greatest of living things—human beings. The storekeepers who do the biggest business keep their places working for them after business hours. They put goods in their windows at bargain prices, then "turn on the light" so people can see them. One person attracted, who becomes a customer, pays what the light costs, the rest are extra profit. Write us and we will show you how to make your store work for you while you sleep.

Canned Where They Grow

Plenty of canned goods are as pure as ours, but you'll go far to find others as deliciously flavored.

Flavor is just as important as purity.

The flavor of the Olney brand canned goods comes from canning fresh, ripe fruits and vegetables on the spot where they grow, not after they've been carried long distances. The deterioration that takes place in the flavor of stale fruits and vegetables is almost inconceivable.

These taste exactly like the fresh product.

Do you know how cheap Electricity is? Ever think of using it to Grind Coffee? Ask the Manager of the nearest Power House. He will post you on the convenience and economy of Electricity in your business. An will save your clerks' time, your customers' time, and advertise your store. Write for catalogue describing our various Electric Mills, with capacities for granulating from four ounces to nine pounds of coffee per minute.

The illustration shows our double mill No. 08712, with motor for direct current; one mill fitted with grinders for granulating, and the other for pulverizing. Each iron hopper holds six pounds of coffee. There are two speeds, fast and slow, which can be instantly changed from one to the other; at fast speed this mill granulates three pounds of coffee per minute. Fitted with ¾ H. P. motor for direct current, or with ½ H. P. motor for alternating current. The latter for slow speed only. Can be regulated while running for grinding either fine or coarse.

We will gladly give any information desired about these mills.

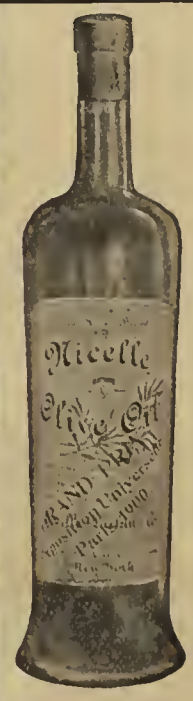
For Pickles Alone

Here is the T. & S. Pickle Cabinet, made revolving or non-revolving, as you like. Has no banana tree and is for pickles exclusively.



A handsome fixture. Solid oak or cherry, ball-bearing casters, with four three-gallon clean glass jars with covers. Dirt and insect proof and occupies only two square feet of floor space. Keeps pickles clean, fresh and inviting. A silent but effective salesman.

The Digestible Part of Corn

In our Winorr Brand of Canned Corn we do away with the indigestible hulls, packing only the kernels of the corn, which we extract by a special device, leaving the hulls on the cob.

There is no other brand like the Winorr brand, and it will readily sell on that account. It is most delicious and entirely digestible, and when once shown will always be in demand.

We also pack a full line of finest quality Berries and Vegetables, moist and condensed Mince Meat, Catsup and Salad Dressing.

We are the largest canners of Sauer Kraut in the United States.

THE PRESSING & ORR COMPANY
NORWALK, OHIO

$3.00 FROM $1.50

James T. Shinn's Liquid Rennet has been on the market so long that it seems hardly necessary to speak of its quality; most people know it as the finest, cleanest rennet made.

Not all grocers know that they can double their money on this specialty, however—an unusual chance with an article so high-grade.

Costs $1.50 per dozen, brings back $3.00.

WALKER STORE FIXTURES
—Attract Good Trade—

There is so much to be said to the merchant about to buy new fixtures that we prefer to send our catalogue, which will set him wise on many points that he should know. Our designs and our workmanship are unsurpassed. Our customers write that they are more than pleased with the appearance of their stores.

WE KNOW HOW TO DESIGN ARTISTIC INTERIORS

We are ready at all times to offer suggestions covering any detail. And our catalogue is sufficiently explicit to make it both interesting and instructive. Send for it.

Advantages Gained by Universal Coupon Users

Malta-Vita Pure Food Company of Battle Creek, Mich., to adopt them

Company will exchange all old stock to dealers who use the "Universal" Coupon

The manufacture of the famous cereal, Malta-Vita, has recently been placed under entirely new management, and this popular breakfast food is now being made equal to the food turned out years ago, so that dealers throughout the country can with perfect confidence recommend this delightful, tasty breakfast food to their patrons.

The Company recognize the value the Universal Coupon will be in increasing trade for Malta-Vita, but they desire to have dealers who are saving Universal Coupons and who now have old stock on hand to correspond with them, and arrange to have this stock exchanged free for fresh goods, because they do not want to handicap future sales by permitting dealers to "work off" their old stock on a trade they want to keep.

The Company is also putting out an excellent Corn Flake; it is as much of a leader with Corn Flake field as their Wheat Flake has been in the Wheat Flake field.

Dealers interested should write at once to the Malta-Vita Pure Food Company, Battle Creek, Mich., so as to obtain the advantages now offered by this Company. Merely state the quantity of old stock on hand and it will be immediately changed for new, containing Universal Coupons.

Pennsylvania Retail Merchants' Association Enters Fight for Retail Buying Organizations

Adopts Strong Resolutions Scoring the Action of the Jobbers' Association and Thus Extends the Fight to the State. Every Interior Jobber's Trade Now Affected. Jobbers' Organization Divided Among Itself. Stores Throw Out Toasted Corn Flakes. One Jobber Ordered Out of Retail Store.

A new and decidedly vital element has been infused into the local conflict between the Wholesale Grocers' Association and the large retail buying combinations as to whether the latter should buy direct from the manufacturer without molestation. This element is the entrance of the Pennsylvania Retail Merchants' Association into the game, with the following resolutions, which were adopted by the Executive Committee during the week:—

Whereas, Certain persons alleged to be wholesale grocers of Pennsylvania, Delaware and New Jersey, have united for the purpose of enforcing the employment of so-called legitimate methods for the distribution of commodities handled by the grocery trade; and

Whereas, The efforts of such a union tend to illegal discrimination, disturbing economical distribution, balking competition and enhancing cost of products to the consumer and destroying the good relations now existing between the manufacturer and the distributer; and

Whereas, The efforts of the said union have been mainly, and in some cases solely, directed against the rights of retail merchants to organize for mutual advancement; be it therefore

Resolved, That the Retail Merchants' Association of Pennsylvania and the several local merchants' associations comprising its membership use every legal and moral method in combating any agreement that may tend to levy an unearned tribute, restrain freedom of commerce or increase the cost to the consumer; and be it further

Resolved, That such wholesale grocers as become identified with such conspiracy or agreement be known to have become unfriendly to the retail grocer and relations be accordingly; be it further

Resolved, That these resolutions be printed and a copy sent to each affiliated association and the trade press.

As intimated, this is exceedingly important, for associated with the Pennsylvania organization are all the retailers' co-operative buying organizations in the State, together with several thousand individual retailers who now buy from jobbers. The Pennsylvania Association gives out no plan of campaign, but there is reason to believe that within the next week a list of the Pennsylvania members of the Wholesale Grocers' Association will be placed in the hands of every member of the State Association, together with a statement emphasizing the fact that the jobbers named have not been friendly to organized retail interests. The effect of this upon the jobbing business of the State remains to be seen.

In Philadelphia it can be conservatively stated that the local members of the Wholesale Grocers' Association have had their eyes opened as never before to the great strength and coherency of the retailers' organization. There has been a concerted movement among the Retail Grocers' Association to turn all possible trade to jobbers not members of the association, of which the principal ones are Halpen, Green & Co., Barber & Perkins, B. F. Janney, Jr., & Co., and Thomas Roberts & Co. It is known that this has cost certain local jobbers a very large amount of trade. In one case a well-known retailer ordered out of his store the salesman of one of the firms in question, and when the head of the jobbing house went out to fix it up, did the same to him.

Evidence has been obtained of a remarkable lack of unanimity of opinion among the members of the Wholesale Grocers' Association toward the present campaign Several members of the association have openly stated during the week that they had no advance information of the mess the organization had stirred up and that they were not in sympathy with it. The entire scheme was cooked up and launched, these members said, by a committee with power to act. Now that the Pennsylvania Retail Merchants' Association has entered the fight, thus affecting the business of every interior jobber, it is expected that protests against the jobbers' action will pour in thick and fast from the State members.

An investigation of the effect which the cutting off of the large retail buying combines has had upon the business of the Toasted Corn Flake Co. and the Shredded Wheat Biscuit people shows that the effect has been very marked. A large percentage of the members of the Retail Grocers' Association have thrown out Toasted Corn Flakes entirely, and those who still sell it do so only when unavoidable. Certain large Germantown stores have sent out men during the week to do missionary work against the brand and in favor of E. C. Corn Flakes, which all are using as a substitute. The stores of the Acme Tea Co., the William Butler Co., Robinson & Crawford, James Bell and George Dunlap are all without exception pursuing the same policy. These alone aggregate about 400 stores, and before the fight started Toasted Corn Flakes was freely sold in all. To-day it is almost impossible to find a package anywhere.

As to Shredded Wheat Biscuit, that, of course, is the association's own fight, it being the only buyer cut off. It is conducting this fight in its own way.

An interesting feature of the conflict is that the Retail Grocers' Association has received from all over the country, during the last two weeks, pledges of support and assistance from manufacturers, some of whom are much larger than the Toasted Corn Flakes Co. and the Natural Food Co.

Figuring the Expense of a Retail Business.

One Retailer Finds it Averages Thirteen and One-quarter Per Cent. Counts Everything in, Even Postage Stamps. Only Way to Know Exactly Where You Stand. Made Twenty-three Per Cent. Net on Money Invested in Worst Year.

Apropos of the many opinions as to how to figure the cost of doing a retail grocery business which have been floating about the trade press lately, an intelligent Northwest retailer contributes the following:—

I have been reading the letters regarding the expense of doing business and find them very interesting, but some of them look as though they were not entirely correct.

I notice that one of them states that they do not keep track of wrapping paper bought and charge same to expense. This item cost me so far this year, for paper, paper bags and twine, $118.57, and I do not think this is such a small item that it should be overlooked.

As for cigars, candy, etc., given away, I did this for the first three years I was in business and for the last three years I have cut it out entirely and am giving premiums for check issued by my cash register. This system I figure does not cost me any more in the end and gives much better satisfaction, and besides, I would be willing to pay the cost of the premiums given away as insurance to show that I am getting the money for the goods sold, as the customer wants the check and the clerk cannot get the check until the amount is registered on the cash register.

One party carries $12,000 stock and fixtures and sales amounted to $22,000, which shows that they carry too much stock, in my estimation, as they are not turning the stock twice in a year.

I think, and, in fact, know that many merchants do not figure nearly all of their actual expense, as I know that there are several in our town who do not know what their expense is, one of them recently saying that he thought his amounted to about 25 per cent., but did not know, as he had never kept track of it in the twelve years that he had been in business.

The same party also figures that if he buys a bill of goods and gets 10 per cent. off and 2 per cent. for cash discount, that he is getting 12 per cent. cash discount. Figuring in this way, I think I could make a fine showing on paper or in my dreams.

While the year is not quite at an end, it is near enough so that I can give a very close estimate of the year's business.

I have the exact expense for eleven months and know very nearly what the expense will be for the rest of December, therefore, can give very nearly exact figures for the entire year, figuring myself a salary of $85 a month and my wife, who puts in about two-thirds of her time in the store, at $30 a month, also figuring rent, light, fuel, insurance, taxes, donations of all kinds, interest on $5,200 invested the first of the year at 6 per cent., cost of premiums, paper and bags, advertising, postage, clerk hire, telephone rent, cost of goods given as premiums, cost of repairs and everything which might be figured as expense, including ice, and all items, no matter how small.

I figure that freight and drayage are not properly speaking an item of expense, as they should be added to the cost of the goods. My freight and drayage amounts to 2 1-12 per cent. so far for this year. I have no delivery expenses, as we do not run a delivery wagon.

My expenses, figuring in everything possible, run this year to 13¼ per cent. on sales. The poorest year I have had shows 23 per cent. net profit on money invested. I turn my stock about six times a year, figuring 1907, and have done much better than this when I carried less fancy goods.

New York Retailers Meet. Latest Cheese Fake. New York Dressed Meat Co. in Trouble. Oil Trust Investigation Resumes. Important Wholesale Changes. Small News of the Trade.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

New York, Jan. 17, 1908.

Unusual interest attached to the annual meeting held Tuesday evening last by the United Retail Grocers' Association of Brooklyn in its hall on Bridge street, because this was the first annual meeting since the organization was incorporated a few months ago, and there was good natured rivalry on the part of aspirants for several of the offices. The reports showed that the society, which celebrated its 25th anniversary not long ago, was never in a more healthy condition than it is at present, and it promises to become even more useful to the members in the immediate future than it has been heretofore, as the result of expanding its field of work in accordance with the plans which led to the incorporation.

Ellwood Hanson, the recording secretary, in his report reviewed the labors of the past year, especially in guarding the legislative interests of the trade. The following facts are from this report: The corporation is capitalized at $75,000, and $38,600 has already been issued to the grocers in stock certificates. There are 386 stockholding members, 15 non-stockholders and 30 honorary members. The past year's receipts from all sources were $10,741.27 and expenditures $7,788.40 leaving a balance of $2,952.87, as compared with $3,645.33 balance from the preceding year. Over $2,000 of the expenditures this year were incurred in incorporating and in celebrating the 25th anniversary. The assets amount to $43,023.47, chiefly real estate.

Henry Lohman and Leo W. Winckleman were the candidates for president, and the former had a majority of six out of a total vote of 130. The new officers and directors are:—

President, Henry Lohman; vice-presidents, F. Gasau and Henry Heins; recording secretary, Ellwood Hanson; financial secretary, Henry C. Christgau.

Directors, B. Bischoff, William Kramer and J. T. McKinney, for three years; Herman Riecke, V. A. Brandes and F. Luppens, for two years; H. Haas, H. Schroeder and P. Becker, for one year.

The installation of these officers will take place Tuesday, February 11th. There will be the usual festivities, for this association believes in having jolly good times.

A quantity of cheese boxes of various kinds and sizes and labeled with the names of foreign brands of cheese arrived a few days ago on an incoming ship and was sent up the State. The Customs authorities collected duties on the empty boxes and the printed labels. The information as to the shipment was given out at the Custom House, but the officials, in accordance with their practice, would not give out particulars as to the identity of the shippers and consignees.

It was said, however, that the representatives of the Pure Food Bureau of the Agricultural Department were tipped as to the shipment in time so that if domestic cheese is offered for sale in these boxes somebody may be prosecuted, by either the Federal or the State authorities. It has been said that American cheese makers can imitate the foreign brands so closely that even the foreign manufacturer cannot tell the difference. The circumstances are said to be similar to those associated with the manufacture of domestic wine, it being claimed in both instances that the domestic manufacturers would gain in the long run by selling the products for just what they are and thus building up the demand for the American article.

A surprise in the shape of a contribution to the history of the oil business came this week in the testimony given by Walter Tarbell in the course of the investigation which the Government is pursuing into the affairs of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey. Mr. Tarbell is the treasurer of the Pure Oil Co. of Philadelphia.

He was called as a witness by the counsel for the Standard. In his testimony he said that his company was a member of the Producers' Protective Association; that this was a secret association of oil producers; that one of its objects was to limit the production and raise the price of crude oil, and that it had succeeded in doing so; that for years this association had competed with the Standard and had prospered and that its business is still expanding. The association, he said, started with a capital of $1,000,000 and had increased this to $10,000,000 after taking in other companies.

Mr. Tarbell is a brother of Ida Tarbell, who wrote the magazine exposures of Standard Oil iniquities.

That it is hard to steer away from the trusts seems to be the lesson in the troubles of the New York Dressed Meat Co., which was organized by retail butchers and marketmen a couple of years ago and has slaughter houses on Eleventh avenue. At the annual meeting held Wednesday there were factions, rows, legal proceedings, fisticuffs and finally the police. The majority faction was charged with employing prize-fighters to eject from the hall the dissatisfied minority. The latter were certainly ejected and with force.

Frederick Joseph, who was acting president until the meeting was held, was formerly identified with the Schwarzschild & Sulzberger Co., and the minority stockholders accuse him of dickering with the trust to such an extent that the independence of the supposed independent company has been lost, at least temporarily.

The faction in possession of the books declared that the meeting was regularly conducted, notwithstanding the unusual features, and that Arthur Bloch had been elected to succeed Mr. Joseph. The $750,000 of stock of the company is distributed among several hundred holders. The minority stockholders will appeal to the courts, it is said, to set aside some transfers of stock, on the ground that under the by-laws the company was to have the right to buy shares before any could be sold elsewhere.

It seems likely that important changes are to be made among some of the old wholesale grocery houses of the city. Negotiations were begun some time ago for the purchase of the business of Wm. A. Leggett & Co. by Francis H. Leggett & Co. The former house has been widely known as a conservative company of the old school, handling specialties, for the most part. The negotiations had not been successful, at last reports, and John S. Sills & Sons have come forward as possibe purchasers of Wm. A. Leggett & Co. The outcome at this writing is not known, but it is given out that the latter concern will certainly retire.

The cranberry market is doing better. Good stock now commands $2 to $2.25 or $5.50 to $6 per barrel. Much of the poor stuff that has been depressing the market of late has disappeared and conditions should be healthier from now on. The demand is fair.

Goff's Cough Syrup has been on the market for more than 35 years. It is made from pure herbs, roots, barks, etc., and it is a standard remedy for coughs and colds. The S. B. Goff' & Sons Co., of Camden, N. J., have a special proposition that they would like to tell you about, which will show you how you can make 70 per cent. on their remedies.

New Chain Store Firm Offers Stock for Sale

"Pure Food Beef Co." Has Already Acquired Five Stores and Will Have Twenty More. Offers Stock at $1.00 Per Share and Promises Thirty-five Per Cent. Returns.

Under the rather curious name of the "Pure Food Beef Company" a new chain-store concern has established itself in Philadelphia and is offering its stock for sale at $1 per share. The concern already has five stores—749 North 24th street, 2022 Montgomery avenue, 726 North Forty-fourth street, 12 North Fifty-second street, and 4205 Haverford avenue. It is proposed to establish others as soon as enough stock is sold.

Here is the concern's story, told by itself:—

Realizing the fact that the results to be obtained from a business which consists of marketing staple food products on a strictly cash basis are such as would guarantee handsome returns to those interested, the Pure Food Beef Co. has been organized for the purpose of operating a chain of stores along this line. The company is organized under the laws of Delaware with a capital of $100,000, the par value of each share being $1.

The business of the company now consists of five stores, all of which are well located and netting fair profits. With the addition of other stores from time to time, when the number shall have reached twenty-five, then the net profits will be not less than $35,000 per year, or sufficient to pay 35 per cent. on the entire capitalization, and with the exceptional opportunities offered, there is no reason why the business cannot be extended indefinitely.

In order to provide sufficient capital for securing choice locations and fitting up additional stores, a limited amount of stock will be sold at par.

Under proper management it is needless to say that the investment offered is as secure as a savings bank, while the returns are many times greater. A most thorough investigation of both its management and proposition is invited to the end that the prospective investor may be at once assured of the merit and safety of its investment proposition.

The results obtained by practical demonstration in the sale of other food products under similar conditions prove conclusively that it insures low prices to the consumer and large profits to the company.

It is certain that stock in this company will speedily and greatly enhance in value. How can it be otherwise considering the fact that food products are always in demand?

The president and general manager of the company, Mr. A. L. Hanway, is an active, progressive, successful business man of unquestioned integrity. During the past few years Mr. Hanway has been associated with a similar business. Benefited by past experience, our successful management is assured.

While the promise of the new concern to make 35 per cent. profit on the investment seems roseate, there is reason to believe that the other chain-store concerns of the city are doing as much if not more.

The Hotel Patrons' Demand

A coffee that satisfies on a hotel table is a good coffee and will stand up under any test you can give it.

That's because hotel patrons are supercritical. They expect more than they get at home; in fact they expect perfection.

Hotel Astor Coffee is the year-in-and-year-out brand of some of the most exclusive hotels in New York City. They never think of buying anything else — they wouldn't dream of it.

The success of this coffee under this exacting test is really the reason that led us to push it through the grocery trade. We have a plan to increase your high-grade coffee trade. May we tell you about it? A postal request is enough.

In a list of Philadelphia wholesale grocers which appeared in an editorial article headed "Consistency," published last week, the name of McCahan, Cooper & Co. appeared. This was a rather ridiculous error. The firm mentioned have been out of business for several years, and the writer knew it perfectly well at the time the article was written. It was one of those unaccountable slips that sometimes occur.

The Breakfast Food Suits.

The prosecutions begun by the Pennsylvania Dairy and Food Department against certain breakfast foods that claimed great nutritive properties upon their labels have had practically no precedents in the history of the American courts. The department claims that the thirteen brands against which suits will be brought have claimed for themselves qualities that they did not possess, and that in so doing they have made a "false and misleading" statement and thus violated the law.

The action is, as stated, unprecedented. Under the law sellers of merchandise have been permitted to make all manner of claims for their wares, true, half true and wholly false, short of actually making representations so strong as to become the inducing cause to the purchase.

For instance, the seller of a patent food preparation could not say of it: "this contains a certain ingredient which is a positive cure for dyspepsia," provided it did not contain it, for persons might easily buy the product on the strength of his statement, and would thus be misled and swindled. That sort of offense has always been false representation.

On the contrary, sellers of merchandise have always been permitted to puff their goods and make all manner of claims of excellence for them without incurring any legal responsibility. Indeed such claims were long ago recognized by the law as mere "puffery" and held not to constitute a misdemeanor or to render the maker liable for false representations. "This is the finest sherry wine in Philadelphia" is an example of statements of this kind. Such a claim is excused even if the wine is not the finest or anywhere near it.

The Pennsylvania Department will probably claim that the statements on the breakfast food labels belong to the first class, that they are misrepresentations and sufficiently false and misleading to violate the law. The defense will either be that the statements are true, or that they are simply such puffery as the law protects. And that even if they did amount to positive representations, nobody bought on the strength of them; being callous toward breakfast food claims, and so nobody was misled.

Actions to compel literal honesty in business are always interesting.

The Pennsylvania Dairy and Food Bulletin.

The "Grocery World" wishes to protest, gently, but still positively, against the fact that the monthly bulletin of the Pennsylvania Dairy and Food Department has taken on the functions of a trade paper, under conditions of competition to which no regular trade paper can be fairly subjected.

There are in the current number of the bulletin thirty-five pages of reading matter, about half of which has not the slightest connection with the food affairs of Pennsylvania. Examples are articles on "Enthusiasm in Business" and "The Grocer's Wife." This is thoroughly praiseworthy matter, but the Dairy and Food Department has absolutely no legal warrant for spending the State's money to publish it, and would doubtless be enjoined from doing so upon application by any taxpayer. The bulletin has legal warrant only to promulgate the work of the department, none whatever to enter the realm of general publication.

Now, the unfairness of such a proceeding is this: A legitimate trade paper must pay its expenses out of its revenues, and must make a profit if it is to live. The Pennsylvania Food Bulletin issues 25,000 copies monthly. There is no question of revenue and none of expense—the State pays. We repeat—this is not equitable competition, it ought not to exist, and it is putting every trade paper that circulates in Pennsylvania at a disadvantage. It would not be fair even if it were legal.

The "Grocery World" suggests that the Dairy and Food Department submit this article to the Attorney-General, with a request for an opinion on the subject.

Coffee at Drug Stores.

An unusual and somewhat disconcerting condition is revealed by the following portion of an advertisement clipped from the New York "World" of last Sunday:—

HEGEMAN & CO.
(A Corporation.)
THE WORLD'S GREATEST DRUGGISTS.

For convenience, economy and safety it is wise to bring all your drug needs to one of our ten great stores. It is our settled policy to sell only honest goods at honest prices, to have everything you want and render a general drug service of the highest possible efficiency. There is a Hegeman drug store in each business centre of New York. Write for what you want if it is not convenient to call. We guarantee satisfaction with every purchase.

COFFEE.

Hegeman's coffee is a rich blend of choicest selected varieties. It makes the most delicious and grateful beverage that ever delighted a coffee expert. Coffee of this grade is considered cheap at 40 cents the pound. One pound canisters, 25 cents.

Here is an exclusive retail druggist selling coffee, for the first time in the writer's knowledge. There is not the least reason for believing that druggists generally are contemplating the sale of coffee. Yet trade innovations must always have a progenitor, and it is entirely possible that from such a beginning might come a more or less general condition.

Washburn-Crosby Agent Arrested for Short-Weight Sales.

Four Persons Charge Mill's Washington, D. C., Representative With Selling Short-Weight Flour.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Washington, D. C.,
Jan. 19, 1908.

Col. W. C. Haskell, Sealer of Weights and Measures, reported to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia on Tuesday last that upon information of four persons, charges had been made in police court against J. H. Kays, local manager of the Washburn-Crosby Milling Co., of Minneapolis, Minn., for sale of flour of short weight.

Col. Haskell said that he had called the attention of Mr. Kays to the complaints which had been registered in his department from different customers, but that the laws governing the sale of commodities in the District had apparently been disregarded.

Twenty-five prosecutions for alleged violations of the District weights and measures law and fines amounting to $320 since September 7th were reported yesterday by Col. W. C. Haskell, sealer of weights and measures, to the Commissioners. The cases prosecuted and the amount of fines are as follows: Seven ice dealers, $40; five grocers, $70; four pushcart vendors, $45; three hucksters, $20; three farmers, $25; one commission merchant. $75; one tea merchant, $20; one rag dealer, $25.

HOLT.

European Beet Sugar Crop Reduced.

As the result of its latest investigation, under date of December 14th, the International Statistical Sugar Association estimates the 1907-8 crop of beet sugar in the principal countries of Europe at 6,189,880 tons of 2,240 pounds, against 6,446,306 tons produced last season. A decrease in production is shown for all the countries mentioned save Austria-Hungary and Italy. In the latter the output for the current season is estimated to be 21.8 per cent. larger than that of last season and in Austria-Hungary 6.5 per cent. larger.

Misbranding Cereal Suits Begun

Pennsylvania Dairy and Food Department Attacks Well Known Brands and Will in All Bring Thirteen Suits. Charge is the Making on Label of Misleading Statements Concerning Health Properties.

As a result of the report of Dr. William Frear, State chemist, on several samples of breakfast foods recently examined, suits were begun by the Dairy and Food Department during the week against certain brands of breakfast foods under the misbranding clause of the State food law. The said clause is as follows:—

> Misbranding: If the package containing it, or its label, shall bear any statement, design or device regarding the ingredients or the substance contained therein, which statement, design or device shall be false or misleading in any particular.

The suits are begun in Altoona, the defendants being Curry, Canan & Co., wholesale grocers, and W. L. Longenecker, retailer. The charge against the first is the sale of Grape-Nuts, alleged to have been unlawfully labeled, and against the latter the sale of Pillsbury's Best Cereal, on the same ground. It is said that ten more actions of similar character are to be brought within a short time. The others will be begun in Harrisburg, Wilkes-Barre and Bloomsburg.

In all these cases the charge is that the labels of the brands attacked contained untrue and misleading statements concerning the health properties of the cereals. The matter of this class on the label of Grape-Nuts is as follows:

> The human system will absorb a greater amount of nourishment from Grape-Nuts than from a like amount of any other known food.
> * * * * * * * * *
> ATHLETES
> Find it necessary to select food that not only makes muscle, but quickly and surely rebuilds the delicate gray substance in the minute nerve cells in brain and other parts of the body, without which the most powerful muscles in the world are useless. Brain workers are driven into dyspepsia, nervous prostration and various diseases because of the lack of the kind of food demanded by nature, from which to rebuild the daily loss occasioned by brain and nervous work.
> Grape-Nuts furnish, in a condensed form, these necessary food elements. Two weeks' use of Grape-Nuts for two meals a day will produce that feeling of reserve force and energy that does not easily tire, and that is most essential to the successful prosecution of one's life work.
> It is a most profound truth that health is a matter of intelligent selection of food and a well poised mind.

The label of Pillsbury's Best Cereal bears nothing of the sort except a design on the lid called "A Pyramid of Health and Strength." The meaning of the design is somewhat obscure, but is evidently intended to prove that Pillsbury's Wheat Food contains more food elements than beef, pork, eggs, milk, butter, tomatoes, cabbage, fruits.

Members of the Carnegie Merchants' Association estimate that the association has saved them $2,500 this winter by eliminating the giving of Christmas presents to customers. The association passed a resolution that the practice of merchants giving Christmas presents was not appreciated, was not a good investment and was poor advertising, and had an agreement circulated and signed and furnished display cards to that effect. No member of the association gave presents, and the dealers outside fell in line.

The Carnegie Association has 65 members. They are applying for a charter.

Still Insists That Jobber Is Indispensable

Mr. Kingsbury, California Manufacturer, Wants Some Jobber to Express His Idea of the Jobbers' Present Functions. Reproduces Some Comment From Another Source.

I have not heard anything from the "Wholesale Grocer" to whom I sent a letter in your care a short time ago, but to-day I ran across a clipping which shows that there is another man who has been thinking along the same lines that I have. The general proposition seems the same, although the lines manufactured are different. I believe that the jobber is all right, and is necessary to the handling of business in this country to-day, but what I want to find out is the jobber's own idea of his functions. This will lead to a better understanding between us, and would, I think, be of interest to your readers, so ask the "Wholesale Grocer" to come through with an article telling why and wherefore from his standpoint.

I note that the "Grocery World" published the letter I wrote to the "Wholesale Grocer," and while it was not written for publication, if it will do any good in the situation, I am glad to have been of service.

The clipping I refer to was from a little paper called "Judicious Advertising." The article was written by C. H. Ingersoll, and certainly is a good argument for the continuance of the jobber. The head is "The Jobber is Essential." I reproduce a part of it as follows:—

> We have heard much in the past decade of the coming disappearance of the jobber, and in fact the middleman generally, but our impression is that history is not bearing out this expectation, and it rather appears to us that the jobber has simply refused to disappear by showing a tenacity to life, a progressiveness in keeping to the forefront, an a defensive ability against "the tendency" referred to, that has entrenched rather than weakened his position.
> This view may, however, be very erroneous, and it may be a fact that in recent years trade has tended to jump over the middleman, and especially the jobber, and if there are statistics on this subject, we would very much like to have them, and they would probably constitute the best and most conclusive answer to this proposition.
> Even though the jobber is on the wane, however, it would still be left for individual manufacturers to decide for themselves where their best interests lie, and from our standpoint we consider that they lie with the jobber, and this without any feeling of absolute dependence on him. We have an organization that is easily expansible to cover the major part of the retail trade, but we have not seen how this could be accomplished at any saving to ourselves, and therefore our only aim is to supply a force in the retail field which we deem essential to its health. We police it, so to speak, keeping our representatives on the ground at all times, with definite instructions, and never permit a situation to be uncovered for a great length of time.
> We look upon the jobbers' organization as a whole, as one that we are bound to avail ourselves of if it can be done without great sacrifice. It reaches every smallest town where there is any commercial life visible, and makes our distribution absolutely complete. Without this organization something must be supplied to take its place, and while in many respects that something, namely, an organization of our own, would do our work better to the extent it was universal in its scope, it would be at a great outlay of effort and money, which we naturally do not wish to undertake needlessly.
> In this one important considera-ation is the distribution required. If we were selling something that appealed most particularly to the urban dweller, we might think that the best plan was to go it alone, but where we aim at every hamlet, it is quite a different problem.
> No, advertising cannot do the work of the jobber, nor the retailer, though the same results might be approximated proceeding along radically different lines, and both methods have been followed successfully, and probably will continue to be.
> But the jobber has a legitimate field and theoretically should stay in business. There is nothing more logial than for one organization to generalize in its work and carry a multiplicity of items into places which would not warrant the visitations of ten, fifty or a hundred different specialists, and we believe that the jobbers' security is in the wide expanse of our country, and the extreme ramifications of its activities, and that if the jobber had to depend on the cities, he would soon disappear.
> In passing we would drop a word of criticism of the jobber in his disposition to mere mechanical work. It is almost impossible to get the average jobber to give an item a fair representation. This is largely excused by the multiplicity of his items, yet a manufacturer has some right to expect thoroughness from the jobber in presenting his goods, and there should be a constant endeavor on the part of jobbers to bring this more to a point where manufacturers can with safety look upon them as measurably representing them as their own employees would do.
> Another common charge against jobbers is their "dog in the manger" proclivity. They are not progressive in pushing new goods and making new trade, but are practically in the attitude of waiting to be shown that the goods must be had, and where the new trade is. If they wish to take a step up to a higher plane, or in fact if they wish to maintain their present ground, this must be changed, or they will in time reach the level of the English jobber, who is absolutely an automaton for the delivery of goods already sold.
> In our opinion, there is no department of trade which should not do its share is assisting in the creation of demand, or in other words, none which should not exhibit true salesmanship, and when jobbers refuse to assist in creating demand, they deserve to be forgotten. Publicity from the manufaturer, the highest type of salesmanship from the jobber, display and activity—including salesmanship—from the retailer are all a part of a mutual scheme, and the failure of any of the parties to it should entitle them to disqualification, and sooner or later it will be meted out.
> In closing, would say that in adopting the old maxim of "moving along the line of least resistance" and deserving the widest distribution for a product, the jobber forces himself upon the manufacturer as a most welcome and valuable vehicle of distribution under conditions in this country at present, and in our opinion, it will be a long time before any facilities are found that will displace him, as he is very largely displaced, for instance, in England.

AMONG THE TRADE.

In last week's item stating that T. A. James, deceased broker, had been at one time associated with William Bonsted, a typographical error made the name read "Bonsor."

James C. Hires, well known among the local wholesale grocery fraternity, died at his home in Palmyra, N. J., on Wednesday, of general collapse due to attack of Grippe. Mr. Hires was 70 years old. For sometime he had been connected with the wholesale grocery house of Comly, Flanigen & Co., selling a small personal trade, which had remained with him during his long years in the grocery business Mr. Hires was for a long time with Barber & Perkins and later spent some time in the retail business. He was an unassuming man, of kindly disposition and his friends will miss him.

Christian Ritter, vice-president of the P. J. Ritter Conserve Co., died on Tuesday at his home, No. 2167 East Susequehanna avenue, after a long illness. He was well known in commercial circles, and his funeral, which was held on Saturday at 2 o'clock, was a large one. Mr. Ritter was born in Dresden, Germany, in 1844 and came to this country at the age of 13. In his youth he was a noted gymnast and athlete. He became a confectioner and prospered. In 1864 he married Marie L. Hoeffer, of Pottsville, and 12 children were the result of this union. His business had to be given up later because of poor health, and it was not until 1874 that he joined with his brother in a large business of manufacturing fruit butters, jellies and preserves. This business has since grown until it is one of the largest and best known in the country. When a company was formed he became vice-president.

It is the intention of the officials of the Philadelphia Bureau of Health to institute within a short time prosecutions against retail dealers in meat, poultry, fish and oysters who are doing business in the city despite the fact that they have not secured licenses as provided by the act of Assembly regulating the sale of such foodstuffs. There are between 8,000 and 9,000 stores where such foods are sold in this city. As a result of inspections made by meat inspectors licenses have been withheld from about 400 because their places were not in good sanitary condition.

Question: * * *, Pa.—We hereby wish to ask for information as to the law regulating the sale of the following groceries. As an illustration we mention compound syrups and country lard:—

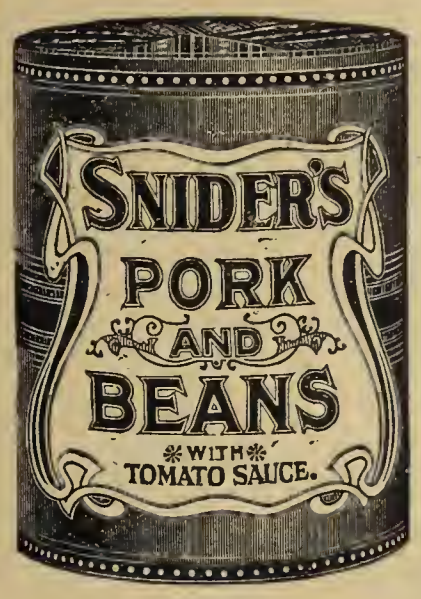
Say, for instance, we get a barrel of light syrup, which is a compound syrup, and is marked compound on the barrel and is guaranteed to comply with the food law by the jobber. This we notice will relieve the jobber. Now, how must we hand this to the consumer in order to clear ourselves from the law? Say, for instance, a customer comes in the store and asks for a quart of molasses or 10-cent syrup. Will it be necessary to make an explanation or label the jar or vessel with a label marked compound syrup?

Also, for instance, take country lard bought from the farmers, who usually mix more or less tallow with the lard. In what way would you advise such lard to be sold?

Answer.—To clear you under the food law, you must make it perfectly clear to your customer what she is buying. You can easily understand that no matter what the jobber puts on his syrup barrel, as notice to you, it is not notice to your customer, who never sees the barrel. To comply with the law you must give some notice of your own. If the customer asks for "syrup" or "10-cent syrup" it would not be safe to sell her compound syrup without informing her in some way that it is compound. You can either do this verbally or by sticker, or by standing placards placed where she must see them bearing some such matter as this: "Our 10-cent syrup is a blend of sugar syrup and glucose." Naturally if she has once been informed of the character of 10-cent syrup I would not consider it necessary to keep telling her every time she asks for "10-cent syrup" in the future.

Exactly the same principles apply to compound lard.

Question: Joseph C. Kane, secretary Allegheny (Pa.) Retail Merchants' Association.—A claims that a bill paid by check must be deposited in B's bank within 48 hours after B receives the check. If B fails to deposit the check in his bank within 48 hours and A could prove that he had on deposit the said amount of check, and the amount was in the bank up to the said time and A had drawn his account from the bank, B, through carelessness or some other reason, has not deposited the check for three or four days after he received it, and when the check arrived at A's bank there was no funds there to pay said check.



The question in argument is—Could B compel A to pay the bill or give him a new check?

Answer.—This correspondent is confusing somewhat the application of the legal principle that a check must be presented to a bank within a reasonable time after delivery to the payee. There is such a principle, but it is usually only applied in cases where the bank fails in the meantime. For instance, A and B live in a small country town in which is also a bank. A gives B a check. B could have cashed it within an hour, if he had chosen to, but instead he put it in his pocket and held it there four days. Meanwhile the bank failed. If during those four days A had enough money on deposit to have paid the check, he is held to be freed from the debt, as B was the cause of his own loss in that he did not present the check for payment within a reasonable time. There is no rule as to 48 hours. What is a reasonable time will depend on circumstances. Where the payee is close to the bank, the time which the law will call reasonable will naturally be much shorter than what would be reasonable for a payee living far distant from the bank.

In the case submitted this principle does not apply. There is no question of loss here. A still has the money he drew against and it is therefore no hardship for him to draw another check, he having lost nothing through the first one. B has just as good a claim on him as he ever had.

Cucumbers from Boston hothouses range from $6 to $8 per box. There are practically no Floridas. The demand for cues is very poor.

If you say so, it's all right.

WE believe grocers have more influence with their customers than any manufacturer could possibly have through advertising, no matter how good it might be. We advertise Snider's Pork and Beans with Tomato Sauce extensively, in most of the big national mediums, to help the demand for this product, but we particularly want the grocer to know how good it is—because we are certain if he does, that no matter WHOSE Pork and Beans his customers ask for, he will tell them to take

THE GROCERY MARKETS

Tea.

The tea market is still on about half rations, so to speak, the demand being about 50 per cent. of an active business. Values are steady, there having been no change for the week and none in sight. If fluctuations occur, they are more likely to be advances than declines, especially in low grades.

Coffee.

The market for Rio and Santos coffee is steady and unchanged. There is absolutely no speculation on the exchange, and this makes a stupid market. Spot Rio and Santos coffee of desirable grades is becoming scarce and high by reason of the Government's large purchases of these grades. From a buyer's standpoint the market for the better grades is in a very unsatisfactory condition on this account. Mild coffees are firm and in quiet demand. Both Javas and Mochas show a slight recession from the recently reported high prices.

Sugar.

All refiners advanced refined sugar 10 points during the week, due to the temporary scarcity and high price of raws. The trade are just now depending upon sugar from Cuba, New Orleans and Western beet sections to supply the trade. The Cuban production has been greatly interfered with by recurring rains and the beet sugar men have no sugar to sell east of Pittsburg. This has created a temporary pinch, and the refined market will be high until it is relieved. The raw market is strong and high. A sale of raws which had been in storage in New York for less than two months sold during the week at a radical advance.

Syrup and Molasses.

Glucose is unchanged for the week. Compound syrup is in fair demand only at ruling prices. Sugar syrup is unchanged and in moderate demand. Molasses is unchanged, and as to high grades, still high and strong.

Fish.

The mackerel market has stiffened greatly during the past week. Norways are firmer, although no advance has yet occurred. It is hard to see how higher prices can be avoided, however, if anything like a demand springs up. Irish mackerel are scarce, and also likely to advance. Shore fish seem not to be in the game to any material degree. Cod, hake and haddock are all duller than they should be, owing to the mild weather. Prices are unchanged. Salmon is selling in a very small way at unchanged prices. Domestic sardines are unchanged as yet, though rumors of coming advance are still current. The demand is light.

Canned Goods.

The tomato market is unchanged on the basis which has ruled for several weeks. There has been some buying, but very little in this market. The adherents of the belief in a higher market, however, base their views upon the known fact that jobbers almost everywhere have low stocks and must come on the market sooner or later. When they come the aggregate demand is expected to cause an advance. Some advance may develop as the result of a good demand, but it seems almost certain that no radical advance can occur this season. Only one packer has had the hardihood to name future prices as yet. He asks 80 cents for 3s and 60 cents for 2s. Corn is dull and unchanged. Peas are steady and in moderate demand. Peaches are high, scarce and dull. Apples are unchanged and not much wanted. The California line is slow at ruling prices. The Baltimore small line is in light request, string beans being strong and spinach easier than for some time.

Dried Fruits.

Prunes are unchanged, both coast and spot. The demand is light. Peaches are dull and unchanged, as are apricots. Currants are quiet at maintained prices. Seeded raisins are cheaper in Eastern secondary markets than on the coast, but seem not to be much wanted anywhere. Loose raisins show the reverse condition—a higher price is asked for them in secondary markets than on the coast. Naturally the higher spot price is being paid only by buyers who want stock at once. Apples are unchanged and in light demand. Citron, figs and nuts are unchanged and quiet.

Butter.

The butter market is unchanged from a week ago. The percentage of fancy butter is very light, and the consumptive trade is very

Window-Dressing Articles Wanted

For several months the "Grocery World" has been looking for the right man to take charge of its "Window-Dressing Department" and contribute a good, suggestive weekly article. We have tried several, but none was exactly what was wanted.

We will now attempt to get these articles from our subscribers, probably every one of whom has some technical knowledge of window-dressing. What we want is articles clearly describing window displays that can be made by the average retailer; not necessarily new or original—in fact, those which have been used successfully are perhaps preferable to all others.

For all acceptable articles, the "Grocery World" will pay an average price of $5 each. All matter sent in under this arrangement should be addressed to the "Window-Dressing Department." If drawings are also sent they should be made throughout in black ink (not pencil).

good. There is likely to be a firm market on all grades for some time to come.

Eggs.

The egg market has been stationary during the past week. The recent decline has created a very good demand. Storage eggs are going out very rapidly, and if the present weather continues the market is likely to remain steady and unchanged.

Cheese.

The cheese market is unchanged. There has been a noticeable increase in the consumptive demand. Stocks are increasing very satisfactorily and if any change occurs it will probably be a slight advance in all grades.

Provisions.

The provision market shows a slight increase in the consumptive demand. Stocks of everything in the smoked meat line are large and there is not likely to be any change in the near future. Both pure and compound lard are unchanged and the market is barely steady. There is likely to be an increased demand almost any time. The market is likely to remain unchanged for the present. Dried beef, barrel pork and canned meats are dull and unchanged.

Produce.

Pennsylvania potatoes, 85 to 90 cents per bushel; York State, 75 to 80 cents per bushel; Jersey, 45 cents per basket, demand good; sweet potatoes, primes, $1 per basket; culls, 60 to 65 cents per basket, demand good; yellow globe onions, 65 to 70 cents per bushel, demand fair; domestic horseradish, $4 per barrel, demand good; white turnips, 20 to 25 cents per basket; yellow, 40 to 45 cents per basket, demand fair; savoy cabbage, 60 cents per barrel, demand fair; Danish, $11 per ton, demand good; domestic, $8 per ton, demand fair; watercress, 3 cents per bunch, demand fair; parsnips, $1.50 per barrel, demand fair; carrots, 40 cents per basket, demand fair; oyster plants, 3 to 3½ cents per bunch, demand fair; beets, $1.75 to $2 per barrel, demand fair; Pennsylvania celery, 5 to 12 cents per bunch, demand fair.

Green Fruit.

Apples, Bellflower, $3 to $3.50; Spy, $3 to $3.50; Spitz, $3.75 to $4.50; Pippins, $2.50 to $3.50; Greenings, $3.75 to $5; Hulbersons, $3 to $3.50; Baldwins, $2.50 to $4; Kings, $4.50, demand fair; bananas, jumbo, $1.75 to $2.50; firsts, $1.25 to $1.75; 7-hands, 65 to 85 cents; 6-hands, 40 to 60 cents, demand poor; grapefruit, Florida, $3 to $5 per box, demand fair; California oranges, $2.25 to $2.75 per box; Florida, $1.25 to $3 per box, demand poor: tangerines, $3.50 to $4.50 per box, demand fair to good; pineapples, $2.25 to $3 per box, demand fair to good.

Nuts.

Almonds, 17 to 18 cents per pound; Brazil, 10 cents per pound; filberts, 10¼ cents per pound; pecans, 9¾ cents per pound; walnuts, 12½ to 14 cents per pound; mixed nuts, 11 cents per pound, demand poor; peanuts, choice, green, 4 cents per pound; fancy, 5 cents per pound; jumbo, 6¼ cents per pound; roasted, choice, $1 per bushel; fancy, $1.25 per bushel; jumbo, $1.50 per bushel, demand fair.

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORTS.

Coffee.

The unsettled state of trade experienced from the end of October to the middle of December, which was caused by unusually serious financial disturbances, is at last giving place to normal conditions, and we can herald with satisfaction the return of confidence.

It is but natural that merchants, with the recent occurrences so fresh in their minds, will pursue an utra-conservative course in their dealings for at least some months to come.

The fundamental basis of mercantile pursuits in this country is perfectly sound. There was some over-extension and over-trading in lines foreign to ours, which will probably have to undergo a curing process. But with coffee it is different. There has been no over-trading, and there are no extensive stocks carried anywhere by the trade. We can, therefore, safely bar from our mind the probability of disturbing influences, and confine ourselves to the actual position of the article and the probabilities for the future.

It is noticeable at first sight that the basis on which the so-called valorization scheme was planned and carried into effect,—i. e., decreasing supplies and a simultaneous increase of the consumption, actually exists.

The visible supply usually increases during the first six months of the fiscal or crop year, because the larger part of the Brazilian crops are marketed during that period, and decreases are experienced as a rule during the last six months of the crop year. The only exception to this rule in the past were abnormally large crops.

That we have to deal this year with a small crop is shown conclusively by the smallness of the receipts so far. The visible supply of the world was on December 31st only 358,000 bags larger than on July 1st; but we were then at the beginning of a new crop, whilst now we are at the winding up of the same, making the position materially stronger now than it was then.

Out of the existing stocks of about 16,750,000 bags the governments of the principal coffee growing States of Brazil control about 7,750,000 bags.

Whilst it was not generally known that these government holdings were well financed, time proved that they were. These coffees were firmly held out of the market despite serious financial disturbances and tightness of money the world over. In fact, these governments paid off interest, storage and insurance charges for the whole year ahead of time, which is certainly a proof of their strong financial position. None of the loans fall due before next December.

STICK TO A GOOD BRAND

Any grocer will find his canned goods business more satisfactory if he will get hold of a brand which covers all the lines he wants and stick to it as long as it is good.

This business of buying one brand one year and another the next never gives a man's canned goods department the strength it ought to have.

Under the OLNEY brand are packed the finest New York state canned goods on the market. Particularly fine because our canneries are located in the heart of the growing district. We gather the fruits and vegetables, and almost immediately can them. The result is the flavor of the real thing to a degree not approached by any other brand.

BURT-OLNEY CANNING CO.
ONEIDA, N. Y.

During the past year there were delivered against contracts made on the New York Exchange about 1,050,000 bags of coffee, mostly coffees that were considered undesirable by the trade. Nearly all of these were taken up for the account of the above-named governments.

Bankers who were formerly carrying this kind of coffee for the good rate of interest they made out of it are entirely out of stock, which means that speculators who were the nominal owners of this coffee have disappeared from the field.

The government holdings are distributed and carried in the consuming markets of Europe and the United States in the following proportion: 5,750,000 bags are carried in Europe which leaves about 3,650,000 bags of the European stocks available for the trade. About 2,000,000 bags are carried in our port, leaving about 1,400,000 bags in other hands, and of these about 1,000,000 bags belong to a few firms who are known to be friendly to the valorization scheme, leaving only a very small quantity in the hands of the rest of the trade.

The strength of the position will become more apparent with each month and will be most pronounced toward the close of the fiscal year. Consumption during the next six months is expected to amount to 5,000,000 or 5,250,000 bags in Europe and about 3,500,000 bags in the United States (a total of 8,500,000 to 8,750,000 bags), which is to be supplied out of the existing available stock plus what may come into sight of Brazils and Milds.

The consumption of Brazils during the past six months reached the record figure of 7,000,000 bags, that of Santos coffee increasing steadily each year. This growth will no doubt continue to gain in favor, as long as the price remains as much below that of other mild drinking coffees, as has been the case for some years past.

Mild coffee crops are generally reported to be small. The total is expected to show a falling off of 500,000 to 750,000 bags from last year. Nevertheless, we find that the receipts of Milds during the last six months exceeded those of a year ago by about 175,000 bags, the result probably of a considerable enhancement of values in consuming markets early last fall.

Baltimore Canned Goods.

A more cheerful feeling certainly pervades the canned goods market in this section, not because of any increase in the demand, but rather because of the remarkable and rapid improvements in the financial situation throughout this country as well as abroad. As a matter of fact, the demand for canned goods here during this week was smaller than in the week previous, and orders for straight carload lots of any line of goods, excepting tomatoes, were scarce comparatively. There was the usual run of small orders every day for assorted goods for immediate shipment, the same character of buying that has been in evidence since the trouble in the money market started, but there were no developments of any sort of more than passing interest. The attention of nearly all buyers is, of course, centred on tomatoes, because that article is regarded very much as a barometer of the whole market. There is a saying here "as goes tomatoes so goes the balance of the list." It is not an infallible guide, however. The undertone to the tomato market is certainly not any weaker and it is regarded in circles well informed on that particular article that an improvement in the price is almost a certainty. The offerings of tomatoes for future delivery is regarded as being rather premature under the existing conditions, and there is a general feeling on the part of the jobbers to let them severely alone, at least for the present. As for ourselves, we have not yet received a single order for "futures" of any kind or description. It will be time enough to take up futures next month or the month after, and by that time some greater inducements may be offered to secure buyers of them. There is an excellent demand for cove oysters of all grades and sizes and the present prices look tempting to the buyers.

MARKET NOTES.

Florida oranges are doing no better. The market ranges from $1.50 to $3 and the demand is very quiet. The receipts are larger than the demand.

Florida grapefruit is wanted. The price is still firm—$3 to $6. The quality is good.

Jersey sweet potatoes are very high. The average price is $1.25 per basket and $5.50 per barrel, which is nearly twice the normal value.

Tangerines are in good sale at $3.50 to $4.50. Good fruit is coming forward regularly.

Florida cauliflower is now coming forward and is selling low—$1.50 per basket of about 12 heads. The quality is good, but the demand only fair.

Florida tomatoes are very low—$2 to $2.50. The quality is rather poor and the demand light. Hothouse tomatoes average 20 cents per pound and are quiet.

Florida strawberries have been very low, through rather large receipts and lack of demand. The market ranges from 35 to 50 cents per quart. The quality is fair.

Florida peas range from $2 to $2.50 per basket and are wanted.

Bermuda potatoes are ruling rather lower than in years before. No. 1s range from $6 to $6.50 per barrel and No. 2s from $4 to $4.50 The demand is light.

Michigan rhubarb ranges from 90 cents to $1 per bunch and is in poor demand.

Florida eggplants range from $1.50 to $2 per crate and are slow.

Mr. Callanan on Glucose.

41 and 43 Vesey St.,
New York, Jan. 16, 1908.
Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—In your issue of January 13th you give an extract from an interview with me by your New York correspondent; you then comment on my claim that the only proper name for the saccharine product of corn is glucose; that corn syrup is not its name; and that the attempt to make its name is simply an attempt to masquerade the product behind something which will conceal its real character.

Whether my reasoning or yours is at fault, I must still maintain my position that naming a product—Karo Corn Syrup—which is composed of three-quarters of the product of corn, known as glucose, is a mistake and will in my opinion result in failure. If the article when it was first made was named corn syrup there would be no objection to it.

You then say: "For years glucose was considered an adulterant and the name was publicly used everywhere as synonymous with spurious substitution. Later the fact was established that it was wholly healthful and legitimate, but the stigma remained and it is the perfect right of the manufacturers to get rid of it by changing the name not by changing it to something comprehending deceit, but to something just as much its name as glucose."

Why was it not given to it when it was first made if that was its proper name?

I would not object to using glucose syrup; probably anyone who has read the various reports as to its being healthy would not object to it. It is when selling it you run up against trouble. A customer goes into a store where Karo Corn Syrup is not kept; he or she inquires for it. The clerk says, "What do you want that for; it is made from glucose; we do not keep it for that reason." That kills the sale to that customer.

If the article was labeled "Glucose Syrup" there would be no trouble about it.

It is idle to say that if an article has merit it will not sell under its own name. If its merits are properly placed before the people it will sell, but the minute a doubt is cast upon an article, and its name changed in order to hide the name of the material from which it is made, its doom is sealed. It may run for a short time; expensive and lying advertising may cause a good temporary demand for it, but it will be a continual fight, with the result that in the end it will be forced out of the market.

Do not understand me as being opposed to the sale of glucose syrup. I am not. I am opposed to the sale of glucose syrup under another name.

Yours truly,
L. J. CALLANAN.

THE SCIENCE OF ADVERTISING

This Department is devoted to the criticism of advertising matter sent in, to the devising of new advertising ideas for special occasions, upon request, and to the suggesting of original advertisements when data is supplied. All communications sent in for this Department should be addressed to the Editor of Science of Advertising. They will be filed in their order and taken up according to strict rotation.

Roanoke, Va., Dec. 11, 1907.

Editor "Science of Advertising."

Dear Sir:—Under separate cover I mail you three copies of Roanoke papers, telling what I promised the people of Roanoke and telling how they received my guest. As an advertisement, kindly let me have your views. Yours truly,

W. E. RENNER.

These papers were received and noted with care. Each one contained as a display news item, on the first page, the news that Santa Claus was coming in his famous sleigh. The final article described the coming of the old Saint, who apparently was received with great enthusiasm. This is good advertising unquestionably. Not the sort of advertising, of course, which could ever lead Mrs. Smith to go to Mr. Renner's store and give an order with the remark: "I saw your advertisement in so and so." The results from such advertising as this are always indirect, but should be just as sure in the end as the results from any other form of advertising. The Santa Claus scheme was a very cleverly conceived idea, and probably succeeded in doing just what it was intended to do—give the general public the idea that Renner's store was right in the forefront of the Christmas festivities and the place to go if all the delights of the season were to be experienced.

I do not consider this good advertising. As a matter of fact, it is simply a price-list. Price-list advertising is seldom profitable advertising, unless, as I have often explained, the prices are so obviously low that that fact itself constitutes the advertisement. For instance, if you advertise shredded whole wheat biscuit at 3 cents a package, most people would realize the lowness of the price and for that reason nothing but the price would be necessary. So far as I can see none of the prices quoted on the above circular are so obviously low as to constitute in themselves good advertising. I should think it better to quote fewer things and devote more space to each one.

Oleomargarine Still Selling Illegally in Pennsylvania

Monthly Bulletin of the Dairy and Food Department Contains Many Reports of Unlawful Sales. Catsup Containing Too Much Preservative to be Prosecuted.

The regular monthly bulletin of the Pennsylvania Dairy and Food Department is at hand, containing a large amount of reading matter, most of which has no connection with Pennsylvania food work. Reports of analyses made up to December 16th show that a large amount of oleomargarine is still being illegally sold in Pennsylvania. Some of the comment is reproduced below, together with the chemist's adverse reports:—

A few years ago about one-half of the catsup contained artificial coloring matter and starch. It was the practice at many of the canneries to gather up all the waste products, the water, the rotten parts of the tomato, the skins, and after pressing the water and tomato parts, ship the same to the makers of catsup under the name of tomato pulp. This stuff was very little better than colored water, dirty colored water, at that. Starch was added in liberal quantities to give it body. Then coal-tar dye was added to give it the required brilliancy to make it a good marketable product.

This disreputable and uncleanly practice has been largely broken up under the provisions of the National pure food law. Only one sample containing artificial coloring matter was purchased in Pennsylvania during 1907. But there is another matter requiring attention and caution. The National rules and the State rules and regulations allow the use of one-tenth of 1 per centum of sodium benzoate in articles of food in which it has been used heretofore. The fact must be stated on the label. However, in Eastern Pennsylvania, out of thirty different brands of catsup collected by the agents of the Dairy and Food Division and analyzed by one of the most eminent chemists in the State, twenty were found to contain twice the quantity of benzoate of soda allowed by the rules and regulations. This is clearly a violation of the misbranding feature of the law.

The chemist's reports on various samples examined are as follows:—

Sample bought of Hotel Coyne, P. H. Durkin, proprietor, Scranton. Sold for butter. Chemist's report—Oleomargarine, colored with a coal-tar dye.

Useful Facts About Groceries

The department which will henceforth be conducted under the above head is best explained by the letter which appears below, and which was recently sent to the "Grocery World." In the hope that a little such matter may be of interest and value to "Grocery World" readers, a short educational article along the lines indicated will appear under this head from time to time.

Vermontville, N. Y.

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—I have long wanted a book which would be a sort of encyclopædia, one that would take a certain article, describe it, tell where it grew, how it was prepared for market, what season of the year it was marketed, how it should be stored, whether in a cold or warm place.

Such a book was published once, but as near as I can find out it is out of print now.

I was thinking if the "Grocery World" could devote, say, half a column a week to a work of this kind we would have, in a little while, the long-looked-for work.

But I won't ask for too much, for we are getting good things all the time.

Very truly yours, N. H. BRECKENRIDGE.

Nectarines.

A variety of peach-like fruit known as Amygdalus Persica and near akin to the apricot and almond, but very sweet, and a smooth rind.

The nectarine seems to differ only from the common peach through the rind of the latter being rougher and more downy, its flesh firmer, while the stone is always comparatively free or detached from the pulp, and not fixed or grown into it.

Mustard.

Mustard is manufactured of several strengths or qualities, and from a mixture of different kinds of seed, white and brown, and with or without the addition of other ingredients, such as wheat flour, turmeric, cayenne, etc. Every firm has, of course, its own particular recipes and processes. This white seed, Sinapis alba, yields a much larger percentage of flour than the dark brown or black variety, Sinapis nigra, and is much cheaper.

Now ground mustard made from dark seed with this oil left in will not keep good long owing to variations in temperature, exposure to air, etc. It soon cakes the powder, turns it rancid, bitter, and unfit for use; hence any kegs, tins or other packages, with discolored paper linings or wrappers showing oil stains within or without, should always be rejected as old or out of condition. The oil is, in fact, a source of great trouble to manufacturers who wish to sell a pure mustard in powder, of good flavor, and one that will keep good.

Neufchatel Cheese.

A celebrated French make, from pure cream thickened by heat and then pressed in a small mold. The cheese weigh about a half pound each, and when fresh are considered a great delicacy; but when old they acquire an offensive odor, from the vegetable growths often observed on them. In shape these cheese are long and round, like small pillars.

The original is produced at Neufchatel-en-Bray, but one kind—an imitation of the French—is also made in Switzerland. These, however, are not so liquid in form as the "fromage de Brie," which usually contains 15 to 20 per cent. of casein with 40 per cent. of fat.

Whence the Seven Washings

The first starches on the market to-day are Murdoch's Laundry and Corn Starches.

They represent an effort to overcome a powerful competition by depending on quality alone—an effort that has been magnificently successful.

The amount of trouble we go to to make these starches perfect is almost incredible—seven washings are just one illustration.

You have probably never seen quite so good starches as Murdoch's. Get samples and see if we're not right.

WHY do the big downtown merchants light their windows at night and display bargains in them?

To induce the people to stop and look.

WHY do they want the people to "stop and look"?

Because experience has told them that some of these people will come into their stores the next day.

WHY do they want them to come into their stores?

Because they know that is the only way to get them to buy something.

WHY can't the grocer do the same thing? If it works with the department stores, won't it work with yours?

WHY isn't it worth trying, when one new customer a day will pay the cost of the light for a week?

We will have a representative call and show you how to make your windows draw trade and tell you just what it will cost, if you will drop us a line.

St. Paul, Minn.

The associated wholesale grocers of St. Paul have issued the following credit announcement to their customers, which is regarded an important one:—

To St. Paul City Trade:—To avoid any misunderstandings, announcement is hereby made that the following terms and discounts will be observed by the undersigned on and after December 28, 1907:—

On bi-monthly payments in full on 15th and 1st day of each month, full cash discounts will be allowed.

On monthly payments in full on 1st day of the month following date of purchase, a cash discount of 1 per cent. will be allowed.

No discount allowed after the fourth day of the month following date of purchase.

On accounts not paid on or before the 15th day of month following date of purchase, interest will be charged at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum.

Orders taken for the first of the month delivery shall not be delivered before the 28th day of the preceding month, unless the 28th be Sunday, when delivery may be made on the 27th day. No deliveries made previous shall take the first of the subsequent month dating.

Minnesota.

All of the wholesale grocery houses in Minnesota and North Dakota, thirty-seven in number, have joined in an announcement to the retail trade defining clearly the credit terms on which groceries are to be sold.

Where payment is made within ten days from date of invoice, cash discounts will be allowed as follows:—

One per cent. on sugars.
One per cent on thirty day bills.
Two per cent. on sixty day bills.
Four per cent. on four months' bills.

If payment is made after ten days from date of invoice and before maturity, the retailer will be credited with interest for the unexpired portion at 8 per cent. per annum.

Interest will be charged on all past due accounts.

Washington, D. C.

The request that the District of Columbia police regulations be amended so as to prohibit the sale of gasoline, kerosene and other inflammable oils from tank wagons after dark was made at a hearing before the District Commissioners during the week by the Retail Grocers' Association through its attorney.

The regulation at present prohibits dealers from selling or dispensing such oils "in any room, store or place where there are gaslights or other lights burning." The association's attorney argued that this was class legislation, as the tank wagons are permitted to deliver oils at night while the grocers are prohibited from selling it.

The Commissioners have taken the matter under advisement.

Large Olive Prospects Confirmed.

United States Consul Sends Report That Current Crop Will Exceed Average Yield by Twenty-five Per Cent.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Washington, D. C.,
Jan. 16, 1908.

Consul-General Benjamin H. Ridgely, of Barcelona, has sent to the State Department a comprehensive report concerning the olive industry in Spain and other Mediterranean countries.

A meeting of the principal olive growers of Spain is being held at Madrid for the purpose of obtaining legislative assistance to put a stop to the adulteration of edible olive oil. Olive growers have thought it necessary, in their own interests, to call a mass meeting to discuss the measures that the Government should be urged to adopt. In the opinion of leading olive oil dealers, however, little importance is attached to the meeting, inasmuch as the bumper crop, which is expected this season, will effectually do away with any necessity or desire to evade the existing regulations relative to the adulteration of olive oil. It is roughly estimated

MAKE OUR HISTORY YOUR GUIDE TO SUCCESS

A few years ago A. W. Johnson, a retail grocer, refurnished his store with tilting bins, new scales, electric coffee mill, molasses pump and a new dried-beef cutter. These equipments were satisfactory labor-saving devices with the single exception of the new dried-beef cutter; this, although a highly advertised, standard machine, was incapable of doing nice work. After carefully investigating the merits of every slicing machine on the market he did not find one that was actually slicing dried beef in a workmanlike, economical manner. Being a thorough, competent mechanic with an inventive turn of mind, backed by many years of experience cutting dried beef, he determined to design and construct an altogether new machine, avoiding or correcting the defects of the others and embodying new, practical devices of simple construction.

The new machine was a success—a world beater—it sliced dried beef to perfection. His customers were delighted with the broad, smooth, perfect slices, deliciously juicy, transparently thin—so much superior to any beef they ever saw—naturally he gained trade, his sales of beef increased week by week until Johnson's dried beef became a household word, and people would use no other kind, while the new machine sliced up every little scrap in thin, salable slices and reduced waste to a minimum.

Send for a sample of this famous sliced beef—the beef that beats the world.

Bound Volume 30 of Brains

ALMOST useful book. It's like a good set of tools for a carpenter—always find what you want when you want it. If you are over-stocked with a certain kind of goods, turn to the proper place in this volume and you will find a plan for a special sale that will take the extra goods from your shelves. When you are in a hurry for a certain head-line or window card, a search in this volume will quickly reveal hundreds of suitable specimens from which you can pick the ones that suit you best. Bound Volume 30 is just as useful to the advertising man as a dictionary is when one wants to know the meaning of some word. If you want to know about copy, you find all styles and all lines classified properly and can decide your question quickly. If you are in doubt as to what style of illustration to use, you can find the most suitable kind by looking through some of the thousand odd illustrations that have been photographically reproduced from the originals. In the same way you find the best methods of layout and arrangement, telling how to secure the most effective type displays. You have an opportunity of studying the descriptive and literary styles used by the best ad writers and can readily find out what kind of window and store trims to use in conjunction with each special sale. In fact, almost any information the ad-man desires can be quickly found. This book is cloth bound and stamped in gold. Lots of people say they consider it worth double the price.

Opinions of Experts

BOOT AND SHOE RECORDER says:

Three Dollars' Worth of Brains.—We have just received from the publishers a bound volume of BRAINS. Probably most of our readers are more or less familiar with the magazine which is devoted to giving information and suggestions to advertisers in all lines of retail business, a large portion of which is made up of reproductions of advertisements cut from papers all over the country, and descriptions and details of the schemes of wideawake merchants to pull trade. There are also many articles of much practical value regarding storekeeping in its many phases. The book makes a volume of over eight hundred pages and probably contains more real practical information of this kind to the square inch than any other book ever published. It is a book which any merchant can use to advantage and will find of immediate, practical use, when he is writing his advertisements or is studying ways to boom his business.

DRY GOODS ECONOMIST'S Opinion:

Brains.—A journal for retailers and advertisers, has just issued a bound volume. It contains reproductions of hundreds of ads—the work of some of the best known ad-men in America. Departments devoted to catch-phrases and sales suggestions help to make this work a valuable one for busy retailers and ad-men.

PROFITABLE ADVERTISING says:

Brains in a Book.—BRAINS for the last half of 1906 comes to hand, with this legend on the title-page: "In this volume will be found the boiled-down results of the best work of America's highest-priced advertising men." This seems to describe the contents of the book.

Merchants Say

Bound Volume BRAINS received. Just what I needed and more than worth the money.

M. W. Rowley, Warrington, Fla.

Just received Bound Volume of BRAINS. It certainly is a very valuable book for the advertiser.

Robert A. Hanson, Buffalo, N. Y.

I have always considered BRAINS the best of advertising publications but never appreciated its full value until I received the Bound Volume.

G. Ashley Voorhees, Chicago, Ill.

I have derived very great help from BRAINS in getting up my ads. It is the best publication on advertising I have seen.

J. R. Carey, Wellington, New Zealand.

Allow us to give our high appreciation of your Journal which no up-to-date business man can afford to be without. Wishing your paper continued success and an ever-increasing luminousness.

Yours faithfully,

Harris & Co., Rockhampton, Australia.

When the Children Come

Lay a path for children to your door and trade will come as straight as the needle to the pole.

That's one great thing about our plane of advertising Ralston Health Food and Purina Whole Wheat Flour—they advertise these superfine products to everybody, but particularly to the little folks.

Any of these:

Ralston Children's Checkers and Board
Ralston Children's Wagons
Ralston Checkerboard Satchels
Checkerboard Window Display

When you advertise Ralston Health Food and Purina Whole Wheat Flour you've got something to advertise—the most perfect cereal foods of their class, whose purity from the very beginning has been absolute and unimpeachable.

that the olive crop will exceed the average yield by fully 25 per cent.

In this connection, it may be stated that the official bulletin of the Spanish Department of Agriculture publishes the following indications concerning the prospects of the olive crop in other countries:—

Italy.—There will be a good harvest in the south and a medium one in the north.

Algeria.—There will be very good harvests in Algeria, particularly at Oran and Constantine. The trees are already full of fruit in good condition, and oil of fine quality may be calculated upon.

France.—On account of the extreme drought there will be but a scanty crop this year

Crete.—The harvest will be abundant. The oil produced in this country is generally used for lubricating, and there is but little comestible oil.

Stocks of olive oil are at present insignificant, both in the countries where they are produced and in the principal contres of trade.

HOLT.

What Are Considered Wine Frauds in Germany.

Consul Thomas H. Norton, of Chemnitz, advises that a German court recently issued an important decision in regard to the use of geographical terms for wines which referred to their quality, but were not in accord with the place of production. A wine merchant imported and sold large amounts of a sweet wine produced in Hungary which he labeled as "Medicinal Tokay." When brought to trial for selling goods under a false name, he acknowledged that the wine did not come from the well-known locality but claimed that the term "Tokay" was used to designate a class of wines, and was not a simply geographical name indicative of origin. He lost his case and was forced to pay a heavy fine. The Minister now forbids the use of the term "Tokay wine" on exportations from Hungary to Austria or Germany unless the wine actually came from the Tokay vineyards. As the tract of land yielding the genuine Tokay is exceedingly limited in extent, there will probably be a marked diminution in the amount of "Tokay" wine reported in export statistics, although possibly not in the quantity of "Tokay," so-called, consumed in the countries in question. The subject is of interest in connection with the efforts now made in the United States to insure accuracy and honesty in the designations of food products and beverages.

Two-Minute Sermons for the Retail Grocer

XXVI.—Pride and Pride.

Whenever pride gets a hold upon a business man, and throws his chin in the air, he is sure to stub his toe.

No man is in danger of stubbing his toe, however, if he merely takes a pride in his business and forgets himself entirely in his effort to increase and build up that business. It is "swell-headed" pride of our own personality which is dangerous. The real business man is so busy for twenty-four hours out of each day trying to devise better and more profitable business methods, so he can better serve his customers, that he never has time to give more than a passing thought to himself, but in all that twenty-four hours it is his pride in his business which spurs him on to overcome difficulty after difficulty, and every employer who is himself well supplied with this brand of pride will be found surrounded by assistants who also feel the same way about the business, and that business will have just the right kind of push behind it to make it grow. There is no danger in pride at this stage of the game, but every employer and every subordinate must watch out for the time when everyone recognizes the success of the business and is inclined to praise those who made it successful. This is the time when the pride microbe becomes dangerous, and if it is ever given a firm footing it will as surely ruin the business as the other kind of pride was sure to build it up.

The Law.

By George, the law's a funny thing!

(Editor, please take notice.)

There may be some justice in it somewhere, but I'll be darned if I can see where it is sometimes.

The justice is there, but it's all on the side of the other fellow. At least that's the way it looks whenever you get mixed up in it.

I heard a conversation one day last week between a grocer and a customer which shows up what I mean pretty well.

I was in there on business and was standing in the back of the store talking to the proprietor. This customer came back and butted in right in the midst of a sentence. It was me that was talking, too—what dy'e know about that?

"I got your letter, Jones, and I don't like it," he said to the grocer.

I could see the grocer's fur rise right away.

"I don't care whether you like it or not!" he said, "so long as it gets the money."

"Well, it ain't going to get the money!" said the customer, "that's the best of it. You've acted so ugly about that bill that I say to you now I'll pay you when I get good and ready and not a minute sooner. If you don't like that, you know what you can do."

Just as ugly as sin.

The grocer was hot. "Well I don't like it!" he said, "but I know I can't get at you all right because you ain't worth more than the clothes on your back! There's no law on people like you!"

"I can pay that bill to-morrow if I want to!" the customer said. "You know what my salary is at the gas office. I'm simply going to take my time because I don't like the way you've acted!"

Then he went out.

"What is his salary at the gas office?" I asked.

"Thirty-five a week," was the reply.

Now, where's your justice there? I know enough about the collection laws of Pennsylvania to know that if a man's only got his salary you can't touch him, no matter how much he makes.

As a result of that law, here's a fellow who admits he owes a debt, admits he can pay it to-morrow if he wants to, yet who refuses to pay it through pure cussedness.

Know what I'd do? I'd clap the dog into jail and keep him there till he paid.

But oh no! "That wouldn't be just."

A friend of mine out in Ohio got beautifully soaked by a lawsuit the other day. He sold a can of oysters that had gone wrong, though they tasted all right, and they made a whole family sick.

They sued him and got $250 damages! How about that one?

He said at the trial he didn't know anything about the condition of the oysters. They came to him in a sealed can and he sold 'em in a sealed can.

The judge said he was responsible for what he sold anyway whether he knew about it or not. Biff!

I'd like to ask that judge a question. How in thunder could he know except by cutting the can and in that way making the stuff unsalable?

Some of these solemn fools on the bench ought to be slapped on the wrist!

I knew a little grocer that worked harder to get along than most anybody else I ever knew. He started a little store over in Kensington about three years ago. It built up mighty slow, but by-and-by he began to see daylight. He only had one clerk, and one day he sent him out to collect quite a lot of money that he had to have to pay a couple of jobbers' bills. He had no working capital, and had to depend on the money that came in to pay bills.

The clerk collected the money and skipped. The grocer tried everywhere to raise enough to pay his bills, couldn't do it, and finally the jobber who had been carrying him along shut him up. He's clerking to-day in a Germantown store.

Later they got the clerk and put him in jail for two years, which was all right, of course. But did that bring back the grocer's money and open up his store again?

You Do Want Really Fancy CODFISH

Talisman Codfish is the finest selected, hand-line caught, Georges' style cure Codfish—the most delicious food fish caught. Cured, boned and packed with all the scrupulous care that we always give a superfine product.

Usually packed in three-pound boxes, sometimes in two-pounds, occasionally in ten-pounds, and once in a great while in one-pound. In every case the fish is neatly trimmed, square cut, faced up handsomely and wrapped in heavy waxed paper. Every scrap edible.

Do You Sell "Just Print Butter?"

Why is it that so many of you grocers just sell print butter without having a butter leader?

Do you forget that the store that just sells nameless bulk goods never has as much hold on people as the store that keeps itself identified by brands of some individuality?

If you will sell Gurnse butter you will see very clearly the force of this. Gurnse print butter represents a certain standard of quality that never varies; it represents a quality that you are never sure of getting in ordinary print butter.

Don't you see the benefit of identifying your store with such goods?

P. F. Brown & Co.
39 S. Front St., Philadelphia, Pa.

I talked to a lawyer about this one day and he said "he could sue the thief and get a judgment against him for his money."

"Yes," I said, "and how much would you give for a judgment against a dead beat and a convict?" He didn't make any offer while I was there.

Is that justice? Certainly it ain't! That clerk ought to be made to work every day he's in jail at something that will bring in money. Part of the money should go to pay his board, and the rest to pay back what he stole. When he's worked long enough to pay it all back, then he ought to be let out.

I remember another case that happened only last November. A grocer in this very State—I know him well—caught a certain cheap local politician stealing a can of potted chicken from his shelf. He said nothing, and in a week or two he saw him swipe something else. When the local political convention was held this fellow came up for some little nomination, and the grocer got up in the meeting and told the simple truth—that he'd seen him steal twice in his store and didn't think he was the sort of rooster to hold public office.

The fellow had him arrested for criminal libel. The grocer got a lawyer who told him he'd better plead guilty because he wouldn't be allowed to testify that he saw the thief steal. In criminal libel, he said, the truth wasn't any defence! If he'd accused the thief of stealing he was liable to a fine, even though what he'd said was true!

Just tell me what you think of that!

When I heard it I didn't believe it and I asked a lawyer some time after whether such a thing could be.

He said it was straight goods. I won't pretend to explain it—I haven't got the gumption to see through it.

The law's all right—for lawyers. THE STROLLER.

Fairbank Co. Sued in Test of Iowa Food Law.

The Iowa Food and Dairy Commissioner, H. R. Wright, has decided to bring a friendly test case against the N. K. Fairbank Co., to determine what rights the State possesses over manufactured articles which are in the nature of substitutes for staple articles of a food nature. To that end Mr. Wright has filed papers in a suit against the Fairbank Co. for selling under the trade name of "Boar's Head Compound," a mixture of cottonseed oil and oleo stearine, which does not contain an ounce of hog fat and is sold in lieu of lard. The test is not to be made solely upon the labels which the foods bear, but upon the sale of a substitute for pure food, without making sufficient discrimination between the substitute and the real article. The Fairbank mixture is not singled out as any more flagrant an offender than a number of other such substitutes, but this is agreed upon as bearing the nearest points in question which shall be adjudicated by the courts. The compound is made of cottonseed oil and oleo stearine, a product of beef tallow, and does not on its label pretend to be lard, yet its appearance and use are so identical with that of pure lard that the Commissioner believes that the pure food regulations of the State relating to substitutes covers the sale and use of this compound without wide discrimination in label and appearance.

December Failures Show Increase

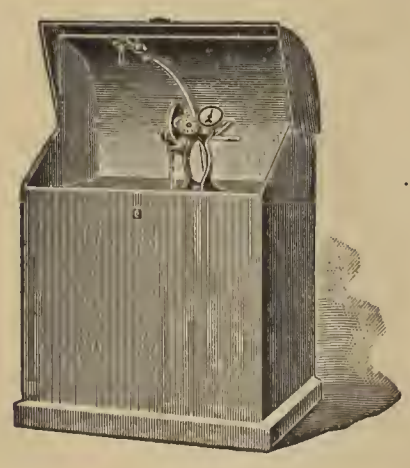
Both in Grocery and General Store Lines There Were More Business Disasters Than in December, 1906. Liabilities Also Much Heavier.

The failures in both general store and grocery lines show an increase for the month of December, 1907, as compared with the same month of 1906.

The figures are as follows:—

General Stores.—December, 1907, 172; liabilities, $1,225,887; December, 1906, 146; liabilities, $983,011.

Grocery Stores.—December, 1907, 234; liabilities, $785,060; December, 1906, 200; liabilities, $497,344.



The little round cracker with "Exton" stamped on it. It has been on the market over half a century, and no consumer will use any other oyster cracker if she can get the Exton, because no oyster cracker can take its place in the esteem of those who know the difference between fair and good.

CLEAN, EASY AND PROFITABLE.

Handling Headlight Oil and Gasoline in the old way is hard, dirty, and because it takes so much time and trouble, not very profitable. Handled in our way is as easy as weighing coffee or tea and just as clean, almost as profitable. We will send you our Catalogue B, if you wish, which will show you how to turn this unpleasant feature of your business into a simple sanitary job, increasing your profits to such an extent that our Tanks and Pumps, which work with almost human intelligence, soon pay for themselves.

Window Dressing for Grocers

In this department from now on will appear each week suggestive articles regarding the proper use of the retail grocer's window. An endeavor will be made to deal with the subject practically, in other words, to show grocers how they can turn their windows into a money-making feature of their business. Subscribers are invited to make free use of the department by submitting both queries or suggestions.

Tea and Coffee Display.

Here is a very attractive display for teas and coffees, and one that we found increased our sales very largely on both teas and coffees.

Have the windows and everything to be used in the display spotlessly clean, for nothing is so attractive in a food display, in which samples of the articles are exposed, than cleanliness. Besides cleanliness does not cost anything and the time invested in making a display inviting is not wasted.

The entire display was furnished us free by a package coffee firm. The arrangement is very simple and anyone can easily make the display. And as the materials are all of bright colorings they attracted great attention both by the children and the parents.

The bottom of window was filled with package coffee and tea in beautiful tins, also teapots, Japanese dolls and bird book which we gave away during the display, and which was a good advertisement for both coffee, tea and ourselves.

S. B. Bernhart & Co.
Mt. Joy, Pa.

A Tea Display.

Herewith is an illustration of a neat and attractive tea display. It is very simple and the cost is comparatively small:—

Cover the floor of the window with some neat and suitable cloth or paper, or if the wood is in good condition and suitable to be exposed, no paper or covering need be used.

Arrange packages of tea or coffee in the manner shown in the drawing by forming a semi-circle, upon which are placed other packages of the tea or coffee. Within the semi-circle of the packages expose samples of the articles on platters of either wood, metal or porcelain, upon which place small neat cards stating the price of the tea or coffee. The name of the brand can also be used if desired. In the centre of the window, towards the front, have an artistic sign suitable for the display. Here is a sample:—

> The Delicate and Delicious Aroma and Flavor of Our Blends are the Kind so Admired by the Connoisseur.
> Try a Sample.

The above display is sure to attract attention and it is one of the kind that draws trade.

If it is not desired that so many packages of the tea or coffee as shown in the drawing should be used, the number can be lessened by allowing a space between the packages.

HORSES ARE A NUISANCE

Why are they? Because you never know when they'll be sick, and they're expensive to keep.

"Same thing applies to automobiles" you say? Not at all. It did once; but it doesn't now. The Lindsley Commercial Delivery Car is so simply constructed that it almost never gets out of order, and when it does, its mending is a good deal simpler and cheaper than a big veterinary bill.

Will carry 1,500 pounds thirty miles on a gallon of fuel. Horses can't begin to deliver so cheaply. Think it over.

"I'ts Too Fine"

Some people said to us when we first put La Toscana Virgin Olive Oil on the market: "You can't sell it—it's too fine." But we did sell it, and we're selling more every year.

This is probably the fanciest brand of Italian Oil that comes to this country. There is, however, no prohibitive price on it. If you want an Olive Oil you can boast of and take pride in, sell La Toscana. Simply the pure, clear, rich first pressing of the finest oil olives in the world!

A Big New York Concern to Share Their Profits With Retailers.

The Knickerbocker Chocolate Co., of New York, who have for years very extensively advertised their Barker's Hasty Lunch Chocolate and Bedford and Blue Ribbon Cocoas, have recently made an arrangement to share their profits with retail grocers. They have identified themselves with the Manufacturers' Trade-mark Association of New York, and are packing Universal Coupons for dealers with their goods to give them an extra inducement for pushing them.

This proposition should interest grocers everywhere because of the character of this firm and the well-known popularity of its products. Universal Coupons are the most valuable premium vouchers ever issued because they are exchangeable for such high-class merchandise and because they come to grocers from so many sources, they can accumulate enough of them in a short time to entitle them to such articles as roll-top desks, platform scales, delivery wagons and even pianos and automobiles.

In pushing Barker's Hasty Lunch Chocolate, Bedford Cocoa and Blue Ribbon Cocoa grocers are certain of two things which are important—pleasing their trade and getting an extra profit which they can't get with any other chocolate or cocoa on the market.

WANTED—A good salesman for New York State, from Albany west; must know tea, coffee and spice trade. Address Samuel Wilde's Sons Co., 11 Dutch street, New York. tf

FOR RENT.

FOR RENT—Large General Store (owned by the undersigned estate) in Quarryville, Lancaster County. Pa. This Borough has a population of about 800. Is the terminus of two steam railroads, a trolley line and two new state turnpikes. It is the only town of any considerable size in the ten lower townships of Lancaster County, and commands a large proportion of their patronage. It has two banks, and does more business in a week than most towns of its size in a month. In fact, during the year of 1907, it is carefully estimated to have exceeded $800,000, not including the money paid out in the borough for tobacco which will amount to about $150,000 yearly. The borough has, besides this store, one large general store, carrying every line, and one smaller general store, one small grocery and a large hardware store. This store has enjoyed a large patronage for half a century. The location is the best in the borough, and in the midst of the town's business activity, within 200 feet of the depot of the Lancaster & Quarryville Railroad, the Lancaster, Oxford & Southern Railroad, the freight station and the terminus of the trolley line. The building is large, well-lighted, and is undergoing repairs; it has a fine cellar. It will be rented on good terms. The opportunity for an energetic man to establish a fine business in one of the best towns of its size is here afforded. A renter will not be handicapped with a stock of old goods, as the building is entirely empty and ready for immediate occupancy. For any further information address George W. Hensel's Estate, Quarryville, Lancaster Co., Pa. tf

PHILADELPHIA

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC FRUITS,

Under the direction of

R. DAETWYLER & CO.,
N. E. Cor. Callowhill and Newmarket Streets.

All our prices are subject to fluctuations of the market, which we will adhere to until next issue, unless an advance in the market should be very pronounced. Quotations below are based on Prices ruling Monday, January 20th. Terms, net 10 days.
First orders must be accompanied by references.

FRUITS THAT PLEASE.

IMPORTANT.

Our stock of Florida and California Oranges is the finest in Philadelphia. Prices no higher than is charged by most dealers for grades of fruit that will not bear comparison.

Caricol stands for Pleased Customers
Pleased Customers stand for Profits

Caricol is the Tea on which you can make 160 per cent. profit because it has been blended by one who has spent a lifetime finding out how to please the majority of the people. If you will get a sample and prices from us you will understand why we have sold tons of it.

Thomas Martindale & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

You Can Use Kerosene Gas or Gasoline

The Acme Peanut Roaster is equipped to use either of the three and give the same results—i. e., perfectly roasted peanuts in the smallest amount of time, with the least expense and no labor.

The Acme Peanut Roaster is the cheapest and yet the most effective automatic roaster on the market. By its use you can earn at least from one to three dollars per day more than you now are making, and have an added attraction in your store. Full particulars and price on application.

ATSATT BROS.
24 Pearl St. MATTAPOISETT, MASS.

Rae's Lucca Olive Oil

An Olive Oil of the purest quality—pressed only from perfect olives and carefully preserved from contact with anything that would hurt its exquisite flavor; beautiful to the eye and agreeable to the taste.

Do you keep it in stock?

H. KELLOGG & SONS, PHILADELPHIA
AGENTS FOR SAMUEL RAE & CO., LEGHORN, ITALY

What's in a Name?

We'll tell you. We have picked out the name Apelpi for our Evaprated Apples, so that every tiuie it is thought of particular people will think of the finest fruit of this kind ever put on the market.

We have adopted the seutence, "The bottoui as good as the top," because that is unusual with evaporated apples, and we pride ourselves on the fact that it applies to ours. Put them in, and your troubles in this directiou are over.

Unbroken Eggs Mean Unbroken Profits

We will show you how to deliver Eggs without breaking them—this will interest your customers some, and it should interest you more.

We will show you that a small portion of the money you save by not breaking Eggs will equip you with our carriers, and that the balance will represent profit.

We will show you this in figures, so there will be no more question in your minds about it than there is in ours.

How to Make Other Cocoas as Good as Ours

Take the average cocoa on the market and carry it through another process or two, and you may have an article about as good as Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa.

The trouble is that other manufacturers will not use that "other process or two," because of its cost. They prefer to send out their product half made, as it were—containing indigestible and ill-tasting ingredients which should have been eliminated—so that they can save a little on the cost of making.

Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa has everything taken out that should be taken out, and for that reason, among others, it has the smoothest, finest flavor of any cocoa made.

Will you mention the "Grocery World" when you write?

Packed in ½-lb. jars, 6 and 12-lb. boxes

CROFT & ALLEN CO. Philadelphia PENNSYLVANIA

It Is Spelled R=A=M=L=Y

If you want to sell a really delightful smoke, get the real Ramly, don't take something gotten up to look like the Ramly, because there the similarity ends.

No cigarette ever made has jumped into such immediate popularity. It has become famous on its quality alone.

If you put Ramly Cigarettes in stock you will be assured of the permanent patronage of every man to whom you sell a package.

Don't get confused on the name—it is spelled R–A–M–L–Y.

The Sweaty Spots in 1907

Look back over the year 1907—have you saved yourself all the work you could? Or do you see, as most grocers do, places where you've done an unnecessary lot of slaving?

The grocer who saves himself hard labor by modern devices like Franklin Carton Sugar is the grocer who stays young and gets the most out of his business.

Imagine all the hard work of digging sugar out of barrels, which you and your clerks did in 1907, rolled into a lump—would you like to do it over again?

Particularly when you reflect that every bit of it could have been avoided?

The work isn't the only saving—you save all overweight and hence all your profit.

Make 1908 easier for yourself.

Clean, sanitary cartons that preserve strength and freshness. Two-pound cartons and 2, 5, 10, 25, 50 and 100-pound cotton bags : : :

If You Can't Get French Sardines

And you probably can't, because there aren't many, sell VITA Norwegian Sardines. They are packed in Norway, the source of the finest fish products in the world, and only the best autumn fish are used, packed in pure olive oil.

Even more delicious than French sardines. Anybody who likes the French brands will like VITA.

SEND THEM ANYWHERE

Do you want a brand of flavoring extracts you can send anywhere with the certainty that no matter how fastidious and exacting the cook or the housewife, she will be pleased?

Try our Waldorf brand of Lemon and Vanilla. If you don't say, when you smell and taste a sample, that you have never seen an extract to quite approach them in strength and smoothness, then we shall be greatly disappointed.

Price, $1.25 per dozen.

100 Per Cent. On Spices

Spices are ten times purer to-day than they were before the food laws came; but there are still impure spices on the market. When you buy spices in bulk you have nowhere near the protection that you have when you buy our spices in cartons.

For our spices bear a name that has been at the head of the spice business for ninety-three years—a name that has never gone out over an ounce of impure goods in all that time.

Practically all grocers who sell our quarter pound carton spices are making 100 per cent. on them. Cost 20 cents a pound, yield 10 cents a quarter.

"I Wish I Had Some Real Gelatine"

Every day some woman in your town bemoans the disappearance of old-style gelatine--the clean, delicious, melting kind, flavored with lemon, that we learned to like on our mother's table.

Old-style gelatine has not disappeared, though at times it has seemed to be snowed under by the flavorless imitations that hide their worthlessness behind bright colors.

Chalmers' Gelatine is old-fashioned gelatine—nothing in it but purest calves' stock and spring water. Your customers want it.

What would you feel like to look around your store and not see Babbitt's Soap?

Why you'd feel as if you'd lost an old friend. For Babbitt's Best Soap has been a national grocery stand-by for more years than most grocers have spent in the business. Of course you could do business without it; but you wouldn't want to, and there is no reason why you should since it sells steadily and pays a good profit.

Sell the established things that pay well.

It's An Old Friend

B. T. BABBITT

NEW YORK

In the Dead Beat's Heart

Somewhere in the life or the heart of every delinquent debtor there is a something which if you touch it will make him pay your debt. You may have hunted for it and failed—now let us try. We're skilled searchers for tender points, and long practice has made us well-nigh perfect.

Send us a bunch of the worst accounts you have. You run no risk. They couldn't possibly be more hopeless than thousands of accounts we have collected every cent of. Let us show you what we can do.

What you want to do is to "Get Ahead"
Your best asset is "ENTERPRISE"

"ENTERPRISE"

With New Total Registering Device

The saving of time will doubly pay for it.

The convenience alone will make it worth all it costs.

It is cleaner, as it dispenses with the use of measures and the consequent absence of flies and dirt.

SELF-PRIMING and MEASURING PUMP

Accurately measures molasses, heavy oils, tar and other thick liquids. Has total registering device showing when stock is low in barrel.

No. 97 Pump costs $6.00; Auger, 75 cents; Extension Tube 50 cents a foot.

MAKE MONEY
WITHOUT WORKING FOR IT

The difference between the Ariosa proposition and other package coffees: With the others you create the demand and get your profit on what you sell and that's all. With Ariosa the demand is already created everywhere, so you get your profit without working for it and in addition the vouchers coming to you with every case will be exchanged for almost anything you may need in your home or store.

"As Good As I Bought Last Time"

You ought to sell Swift's PREMIUM Hams for your own protection. Can you satisfy your trade unless your hams are uniform? And can they be uniform unless bought from a packer who can keep his raw material uniform?

Few packers have our facilities for keeping hams up to a given standard year after year. Swift's PREMIUM Hams scarcely vary a hair's breadth from one year's end to another. That does us a whole lot of good, as it will do you.

The woman who can always depend on getting good ham—"as good as I bought last time"—is going to buy lots of ham.

They Must Keep Expert

It is a provable fact that a majority of cooking experts use Nicelle Olive Oil in all their demonstrations.

Why? Because they must use the very best oil obtainable in order to insure results. Otherwise they would soon cease to be known as experts.

Nicelle Olive Oil is bottled in France, where produced. It is the first pressing of the finest oil olive grown. You will be proud to sell it.

To Display Pickles

Here is a handsome single jar for displaying pickles on your counters. Embodies an entirely new idea. The support is made of hard wood with brass nickeled hinge supporting a composition cover which doesn't warp, is acid-proof, and is both fly and dust-proof. A salesman that never gets tired. Very moderate price. Write

WALKER STORE FIXTURES
—Attract Good Trade—

There is so much to be said to the merchant about to buy new fixtures that we prefer to send our catalogue, which will set him wise on many points that he should know. Our designs and our workmanship are unsurpassed. Our customers write that they are more than pleased with the appearance of their stores.

WE KNOW HOW TO DESIGN ARTISTIC INTERIORS

We are ready at all times to offer suggestions covering any detail. And our catalogue is sufficiently explicit to make it both interesting and instructive. Send for it.

Walker Patent Pivoted Bin Co.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

"As Good as the 'J. M.'"

No delivery wagon built is as good as the "J. M.," though many are said to be. The makers of other wagons do the best they can, but they haven't our facilities.

The "J. M." wagon is the handsomest, longest-lived delivery wagon on the market. No other wagon manufacturer we ever knew rejected everything but second-growth hickory for wheels, as we do.

Buchan's Toilet Soaps

Number "363" is known throughout this entire country as a symbol of soap purity, because it was the first, and we belive the only serial number given to a soap firm by the United States Government.

Buchan's Toilet Soaps contain phenol absolut, the greatest antiseptic known. That is why they are the cleanest and purest soaps made.

Let us show you how to make big profits.

"Is This What I Made?"

If the cook who invented Baked Beans with tomato sauce were to come back and open up some of the cans labeled Baked Beans he would go gladly back to oblivion.

For "Baked Beans" doesn't always mean baked beans any more. In most cases it means beans boiled or steamed, dampened with a little cheap catsup and packed. The result is an attempted fraud on the palate of him who knows the real thing.

L. & S. Baked Beans are really baked in the good new way. We guarantee that absolutely. Baking makes the bean over. Instead of swelling and mushing it up like steaming or boiling, it leaves it just as firm but mealy and melting.

And our tomato sauce is tomato sauce made by an expert.

They Thought We Did Miracles

If we could make every credit grocer understand how clean and wonderfully strong our collecting plan is, we could probably get three-fourths of all the credit grocers in the the country on our books—because every credit grocer has debts that he can't collect.

Our plan has had results that to some merchants have seemed almost miraculous, since we have literally squeezed blood from a stone—yet the only thing we do is to hunt for the weak spot in the dead-beat's armor—it's there somewhere—and plant our blow there.

Write us for your own good.

"Fight the Devil With Fire"

Do you know why you lose trade to the Department Stores? It's because when these stores are closed at night the windows are lighted and the light shows bargains in groceries. These offerings attract passers and the next day they come in and buy.

You can do the same thing—make your store advertise you while it is closed—light it well, show something in your windows that will attract attention and many of those who see it will come in the next day. One new customer will pay the cost for a week. Write us and we'll show you how to do it.

VALUE

Better Than Milk or Meat

¶ Royal Peanut Butter is one of the most healthful food products ever manufactured. We want you to tell this to your customers, and as a real incentive for you to do so we are going to give you the money we would otherwise use to tell consumers of its merit. Universal Coupons packed in every case from January 1, 1908. Remember, it is the best thing of its kind ever made. You make a splendid profit on it and the coupons are exchangeable for any article of merchandise you may need for your home or store.

It Made No Difference to Us

No gelatine sold in this country was less affected by the Federal Food Law than Chalmers'.

Our brands complied with the legal standard even before there was one. How could they help it? They were simply unsophisticated gelatine, made of pure unadulterated calves' stock and spring water. There was nothing to change about them, nothing to alter in any way.

We take a just pride in the fact that while the Federal Food Law caused some manufacturers to completely transform their business, it made no more difference to us than if it had never been passed.

Two styles—granulated and shredded.

Giving It To You

We want you to handle our Macaroni, Spaghetti, Noodles and Pastels.

Why should you? Partly because we assure you on our honor they're as good as Freihofer's Bread. We must make a superior grade of these things to sell them, and we are making it.

Another reason why you should think favorably of these goods is that every case contains Universal Coupons, which you can exchange for things you want.

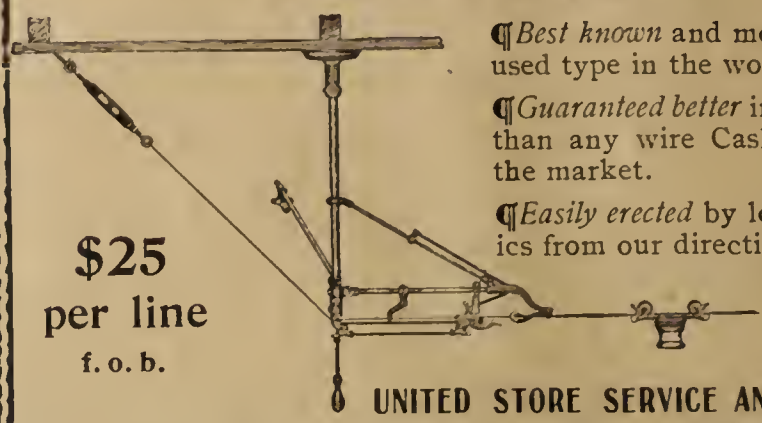
What One Gallon of Gasoline Will Do



EVERY grocer feels he'd be proud to deliver goods in an automobile, but thinks it would either cost too much or be too much of a nuisance to keep up.

If he will look into the Lindsley Car, he will find both fears unfounded. He will find the first cost little if any more than a good team, the cost of operating far less than that of keeping horses, and the working capacity several times as much.

Think of going thirty miles on one gallon of gasoline! With a load of 1,500 pounds! Write about this.

Even More Particular Than You

Print butter's a good deal like the little girl—when it's good it's very good indeed, but when it's bad it's horrid.

It keeps every grocer busy seeing that the butter he gets is such that it's safe to send out.

That is unless he is selling Gurnse, our fancy carton print butter. No grocer need worry that the next consignment of Gurnse won't be as good as the last. Gurnse butter is inspected more than any other print butter we know of. Inspected by inspectors instructed to be more particular even than you could be.

It's perfect, rich, smooth, delicious butter.

"Particularly Lard"

Package groceries have come to stay, and they have the right to stay—the right of greater cleanliness, of better sanitation, of greater ease of handling.

Particularly lard.

Every can of Armour's "Simon Pure" Leaf Lard bears a seal which is the United States Government guarantee of purity. It goes there under the Government Inspector's own eye and means that every ounce of every tin is all leaf lard.

Selling package goods that never fall below superfine, and that are advertised to your customers at the manufacturer's expense, comes pretty close to getting the cream of the grocery business. Sold in 3s, 5s and 10s.

Latest "Woman's Home Companion" Article A Brief for Package Goods

The February Contribution is Headed "Why Is the Clean Grocer Clean?" and is Practically an Argument For Carton Goods. Much Less Objectionable Than Its Predecessors.

The article in the February number of the "Woman's Home Companion" on the grocery store subject is headed "Why is the Clean Grocer Clean?" It is much more nearly decent and honest than any of the preceding articles. Mainly it is a brief for package goods, and for the most part is unobjectionable and good. Whether the illustrations in it are fact or fiction is not of course known.

The salient portions of the February article follow:—

You say that John Smith runs the best grocery store in your town.

Why?

Because John Smith believes in bins with covers, and in a different scoop for every bulk article. Whenever he can, to the advantage of his customer's purse and the upbuilding of his own trade, he serves his provisions not in bulk, but in packages. And he further protects his customers by selling recognized brands—brands of package goods whose label stands for something, stands for your money back not only from the grocer, but from the manufacturer, who has spent millions to make that label with his name upon it mean something worth while, something big and fine to the housekeepers of the United States.

To sum up, the best grocer or the cleanest grocer—we have already seen that the terms are synonymous—can sell at the lowest figure because his store is so admirably organized that he loses nothing through waste and dirt. He loses nothing through waste and dirt because he believes in the package goods which are proof against waste and dirt. And lastly he has a reputation to maintain, and therefore will not substitute an inferior brand for a standard brand just to lift a dishonestly earned penny from your purse to his.

Show me a woman who does not have cans, boxes and jars in her pantry and I will show you an untidy housewife.

Show me a grocer who does not believe in package goods and I will show you a "mussy," dust-and-germ-laden grocery.

Show me a woman who keeps her pantry immaculate because she uses boxes, cans and jars to hold her provisions, whether those provisions are bought in package or in bulk and then poured in the covered receptacles, and I will show you a woman who manages her household well and economically.

Show me a grocer who believes in package goods and sells the standard brands at standard prices and does not offer a substitute, and I will show you a grocer who can afford to sell at a small profit because neither time, space nor energy is wasted in his establishment.

He is the best grocer and the cleanest grocer in your town.

"But I don't like to trade at ——— store," writes one housewife, "even if it is the cleanest. I just can't get used to package goods. I like to see what I am buying, to handle it, to judge its quality."

And she is right. She handles the goods—and so do scores of other persons, whose hands, alas, are not so clean as hers!

Your best grocer, your John Smith of whom you are justly proud, is a product of evolution. The best grocer may not have been the best when he first started in business. He progressed. Nine chances out of ten, when he bought out some other man's store or took up the business which his father or his uncle had managed before him, he did not believe in package goods at all. But, as one bright grocer expressed it, "he was born clean." It made him nervous to see rice spilled in front of this bin by careless clerks, sugar crunched under foot before that barrel, raisins lying crushed and ruined before a third bin. And, looking, he realized that every scrap of that spilled sugar or rice or raisins came out of his pocket. A little here, a little there, and in the long, long year he had lost an alarming percentage of his bulk food. Had he not been quite honest, the second year he would have decided that some of it must come out of your pocket by taking just a trifle off the weight. But being an honest man, he tried another method. He had his clerks come a little earlier in the morning or stay a trifle later after the doors were closed, or work during dull moments, putting up packages of tea, coffee, sugar, meal, etc. Then when a customer asked for so many pounds of these provisions, one of these packages was ready for delivery. This meant less waste.

Still progressing, this man began to lean toward those salesmen or representatives of manufacturing concerns who sold goods not in bulk, but in packages. Of course, all of his ware could not be bought in packages, but as years went by he found that an ever-increasing number of them could be so secured. He found that with bulk goods there was always waste, with package goods there was none. With bulk goods he had complaints from customers. Perhaps crackers tasted of coal oil or cheese tasted of soap. His crackers were fresh—until the clerk who had forgotten to wash his hands lifted them from the box or barrel. His cheese was "tasty" until a careless clerk packed it in a basket close to half a dozen bars of unwrapped soap. He had to make good the order to the fastidious housewife. The loss was his.

And so he became a convert to package goods because they saved him waste, clerk hire and complaints on the part of the customers. And so he became a clean grocer, the best grocer in your community.

In a New Jersey town, not many miles from a famous institution of learning, I found one of those groceries whose proprietors have not progressed. You could brush your skirt against a dripping molasses barrel; you could dip your hand into a cracker barrel and help yourself; you could pick out big pickles with your fingers if you wanted them of uniform size, because the clerk did the same thing; but you could not count the fly specks on the cheese box and coffee grinder, because life is too short for so stupendous a task. And oh, the dust!

The proprietor of that store could not sell me a certain brand of gingersnaps in a moist-proof box. He said he did not believe in package goods. His customers could not afford such luxuries.

There are thousands of customers like his all over America. They declare that package goods are for millionaires, not wage-earners. But oh, if the wives of wage-earners would only study such problems and not jump at conclusions. How much farther the hard-earned wages would go and how much better food would be placed before the man who earns the wages!

Here are the results of actual investigations:—

I asked the grocer whose customers could not afford to buy package goods how he sold the best grade of rice in his stock. He weighed out a pound of large plump-grained rice at 16 cents. I duplicated that pound at another store in a dust-and-germ-proof package at 15 cents.

He did have both the bulk and package oatmeal. I bought a pound of bulk at 5 cents, and a two-pound package of a recognized brand at 10 cents. On reaching home I weighed both. The bulk, poured into the scales, weighed an ounce less than a pound. The package weighed exactly two pounds when poured out of the carton. The honest grocer handles package goods that weigh as much as advertised without the carton, understand.

With soda crackers comparisons were equally interesting. I bought two cartons of a certain soda cracker packed in an internationally famous moisture-proof box, and paid 10 cents for them. At the same time I bought ten cents' worth of bulk soda crackers. On reaching home I found that I had forty-eight whole, fresh, crisp crackers in the moisture-proof boxes. I then counted the bulk crackers, and stopped half way in my task. Of the bulk crackers I found only two-thirds to be whole crackers. Even those were chipped on the corners. The remaining one-third were broken in small pieces. Much of it was cracker dust.

For 10 cents I got 10 per cent. more of package crackers than of bulk crackers, and, moreover, the package crackers were light, whole, crisp and savory, while the bulk crackers were not whole by any means, they may have been fresh, but were certainly not crisp.

In Graham crackers the difference is more pronounced. For 10 cents I got a moisture-proof package of crisp, delicious Graham wafers, thirty crackers in all. Of the bulk Graham crackers I got twenty-three whole crackers and two broken ones for nine cents, but threw away the bulk crackers because they were moist, heavy and soggy and they tasted of codfish!

In each of the cases cited, money was actually saved by purchasing the package goods. We are not contending that all package and bulk goods average up as well. Pickles in glass jars, for instance, cost much more than pickles bought in bulk from barrels or huge glass receptacles. But when you figure on a food proposition, bear in mind that quality counts. Just consider how much food you throw away each year because it does not "taste just right," because it is not crisp or fresh, because you find worms or dust in it.

Many firms market their package goods, not by weight, but at a fixed price printed on the label, selecting a package of a size and quantity so that the consumer may always purchase it at an even sum of, say, 5 or 10 cents. Others market by weight or measure, and then these factors become important.

Actual tests will convince any housewife that the standard package, produced under careful inspection and measured and weighed by automatic processes, gives full quantity not most of the time or sometimes, but all the time. Mistakes are impossible, and so is dishonesty. That the scales of the retail dealer are not so infallible, we all know, though it comes as a shock to us to read the statement of Fritz Reichmann, superintendent of weights and measures for the State of New York, that the dealers in that State alone make $20,000,000 annually by use of inaccurate weights and measures. We hope and believe that the facts are overstated by this enthusiastic official.

We do not believe that all grocers are dishonest; we do not believe that even a majority of grocers in these days are dirty and unscrupulous. This fact, however, is worth remembering: Your grocer may be honest. Thousands of them are. But if he uses packages whenever possible, instead of bulk goods, he must be honest. The man who stands behind the label on those goods makes him an honest grocer, with or without his consent.

But how about the man or the firm and its millions who stand behind that label?

"We admit the argument that package goods are proof against dust and dirty hands in the grocery, but how about the factory in which they are prepared? What proof have we that the package goods are put up in a cleanly fashion?"

These are questions asked by housewifely skeptics.

The best answer is the label and the name on the label. The man whose name and trade-mark are on that package of oatmeal or farina or crackers has spent millions building up a model factory where he can produce the greatest quantity of salable, customer-pleasing and customer-gaining goods at minimum expense. Very likely he has spent millions more to bring that article before the food-consuming public by clever advertising. He is going to do nothing which will endanger the returns on the millions he has invested. Remember this fact when your grocer suggests that you accept a substitute, a "just as good." As we have said before in these articles, he should not be condemned unheard. Possibly he has some inside information about this unknown brand which makes believe in it. If so, he is doing right in giving you the benefit of his wisdom. More likely, however, he makes a larger profit on the brand about which you have never heard. Suppose you ask a few questions. Does he put up the new goods himself, and if so, how much better is his guarantee than the guarantee of the man behind the label you know, the label which has meant something to your household? And when the grocer finds that you are intelligent enough to ask these questions, interested enough in the health of your family and the stretching of your family income to insist on information, the cry of substitution will no longer be heard in the land.

Another protection offered the consumer of the package article is the government food inspection. The food inspectors may not be able to watch the thousands of individual grocers as closely as they would like, but the big factory, the important manufacturer, cannot escape them.

The New York Letter

Large Plans for Retailers' Food Show. Mr. Callanan's Investigation of Drug Store Coffee. Trade Social Events. Sunday Closing Bill Coming up Again. Oleo Jobbing House Dissolves.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

New York, January 24, 1908.

New York's Pure Food Exposition, to be conducted from March 26th to April 16th, in the Lennox Lyceum, by the New York Retail Grocers' Union, is to surpass anything of the kind seen before in the city, according to the expectations. It is especially to be the kind of a food show that grocers can provide when they personally manage the affair, as distinguished from the efforts of professional promoters.

In communications being sent to food manufacturers, who are invited to exhibit, it is recalled that the association of 1906 had contracts with forty-five prospective exhibitors, but the show did not take place because a difficulty arose about the legality of making use of a State Armory. There has been quite a long delay since then, but the association is all the more determined that the show, now to be given, will be memorable.

Diagrams are given of the main and lower halls in the Lyceum. The spaces are to be leased for the exhibit at prices varying from $105 to $265. The central booth of the main floor is to be let for $750. The shape of the hall being a circle, says the committee, enables the artist who designs the booths to make it the handsomest ever given in this city, with abundant space for exhibits and passageways that give every facility for seeing everything without inconvenience.

The committee is to equip all booths with lights, decorations and signs. This insures a display which will be harmonious and appropriate, saving the exhibitors anxiety and trouble and securing to them the best results.

Speaking of the benefits of a food show, the committee points out that its former expositions have been successful in introducing new products, which have won favor since they were thus set before the people, and have entered largely into daily consumption by the people of New York and the surrounding country. The committee adds:

"Pure food expositions educate the consumer by giving him an opportunity to see and test the products shown; they aid the producer and the exhibitors by giving the facilities for demonstrating the value of what is exhibited, their methods and economy in their use."

The article on the editorial page of last week's issue with reference to the sale of coffee in Hegeman & Co's drug stores attracted special attention here. L. J. Callanan sent over to the drug store and bought some of the fancy canisters containing the coffee so warmly praised in the drug company's advertising. Mr. Callanan is an expert in the judgment of coffee, having been been recognized as such for many years. He examined the coffee in the canisters with care and will write out his conclusions. He told your correspondent that he is ready to sell coffee of the same grade at 14 cents a pound. He also suggested that the company would scarcely be willing to have its drugs considered as of the same relative standard as its coffee.

The report received here that the President will appoint a commission of five scientific men to pass on disputed questions as to foods and drugs gave rise to speculation as to the probable immediate effect. The general opinion seemed to be that the introduction of the new commission will not cause any delay in the work of the Board of Food and Drug Inspection, which will continue to pass on questions as to labels and quality, referring to the new commission only issues on which scientific opinion is divided. Some shippers think that at any rate there will be a delay of a season or so before the questions as to the use of sulphur and benzoate are definitely decided and in the meantime they may go on somewhat the same as at present, using discretion in the amount of preservatives and making the labels reveal everything.

Those who think that such delay is probable argue that the scientists must take time for organizing, laying out their plans and conducting experiments before they can reach any conclusions.

Several social events are to take place among the grocers' societies within a short time. The United Retail Grocers' Association will give a ball next Tuesday evening in Saengerbund Hall. The New York Retail Grocers' Union will give a smoker in March. Plans for other events are under way. The expectation is that there will, after this, be more visiting between the New York and Brooklyn associations, because the completion of the subway under the East River makes traveling from one borough to the other much more pleasant than it was formerly.

It is expected that a Sunday-closing bill, approved by the Sunday Observance League, will be quite vigorously supported at the present session of the Legislature at Albany. The grocery clerks have taken part in the movement and committees from some of the grocery societies have co-operated with the League in the work. A troublesome question is in relation to the delicatessen stores, it being claimed that they must be allowed to open between certain hours on Sundays to accommodate the people in apartments and tenements who cannot keep food over Sunday, especially in the warm weather, and who depend on the stores to furnish the food just when it is wanted. The tendency is for this kind of a trade to grow because if the stores are open Sundays people will buy on that day whether necessary or not. If the delicatessen dealer opens the corner grocer feels quite often that he must do the same to accommodate and hold his trade. So, one dealer, by opening for a part of the day, leads another to do the same, and usually the hours during which they open are quite elastic.

A petition in bankruptcy was filed Monday against Abraham Trilling, a wholesale grocer at 1946 First avenue, by these creditors: Samuel Slomin, $175; Bernhard Losser, $81; Max Rubin, $159, and Alex. Palestine, $90. It is alleged that the defendant is insolvent and made an assignment last week. The court appointed William S. Creevy receiver. Assets are estimated at $3,000.

A petition in bankruptcy was filed Saturday against Wm. J. Fisher, doing business as Fisher Bros., grocers at Tuckahoe, by these creditors: R. C. Williams & Co., $450; C. H. & E. S. Goldberg, $84, and Charles F. Mattlage & Sons, $97. The petitioners claim that the defendant is insolvent and made an assignment January 14th to Henry C. Merrit. J. Milton Southard was appointed receiver. Stock and fixtures are estimated at $5,000. Mr. Fisher has been in business for seventeen years.

"Not if I can help it," replied Wiley. "You don't need it. You ought not to have any sulphur. We will show you pretty soon how to dry fruits without sulphur. We are with you. Be patient and don't kick and your industry will be bigger than ever."

Dr. Wiley showed Mr. Needham samples of apples dried by steam heat. He said he was at work on a process that would enable California to advertise to the world that no sulphur is used in drying its fruits. The fruit is placed in a room with steam coils and given a steam bath, but is not cooked, and oxidization is prevented.

Dr. Wiley says his process is nearing perfection. He declares that the California fruit drying system is all wrong, because it promotes decomposition and the breeding of insect life, thus making the use of sulphur necessary. his process, he says, prevents decomposition and destroys animal life. Further tests will be made before the process is made public.

New Canned Goods Contract Proposed.

Jobbers' Executive Committee Frames One and Will Ask Its Adoption by Canners' Convention. Seeks to Put Canned Goods Sales on Business-like Footing.

The Executive Committee of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association held an important and animated meeting at Chicago last Monday and Tuesday. The principal accomplishment was the framing of a new canned goods contract which will be presented to the National Canners' convention, to be held at Cincinnati next month.

The text of the new contract appears below. It seeks to correct the exceedingly loose and unbusiness-like methods which have characterized the sale of canned goods for years:—

(Buyer's city or town.)

Deputy Dairy and Food Commissioner W. A. Hutchinson, of Bloomsburg, went before Alderman Miller, of Reading, Pa., on Tuesday and brought suits against G. H. Delp, J. J. Noll, W. H. Moyer, George W. Liess, James P. Bixler, Charles Walley and William Walley, grocers, on the charge of selling misbranded breakfast food in violation of the acts of Assembly, approved June 1, 1907. The penalty for such sales is $60 and costs. Defendants gave bail for a hearing.

The Dog May Bite

Honestly, you will be much more likely to succeed by pushing Hotel Astor Coffee than by pushing a blend of your own.

We have been in coffee blending for many years. Obviously, we must know more about it than you do. And then Hotel Astor Coffee has been tried on the dog—the hardest dog to please in the United States—the patrons of the most exclusive hotels of New York City. The dog pronounced it good at once, and with the stamp of weighty approval upon it we offer it to you.

When you blend your own coffee the dog you try it on is your own customers—that's risky; the dog may bite.

A perfect blend of superfine coffee. For the very finest trade.

The Come-Back of "The Woman's Home Companion."

The February number of the "Woman's Home Companion" kept its editor's promise and reproduces portions of a number of the criticisms which various trade papers have made upon the series of articles on "Know Your Grocer" which the magazine named has been running for several months. The matter in which these criticisms is discussed is as follows:—

CALLING THE EDITOR NAMES.

"The most scintillating ass in the United States" is a title to which few aspire. When, however, such a picturesque phrase is applied to the editor of the "Companion" by the organ of that class of grocers whose feelings and pocketbooks have suffered most during our campaign for clean stores, there is at least a consoling feeling that one has not lived in vain. To be first in something, to reach the top, even in the hatred of the untidy grocer and his defenders, is an honor not to be sneered at in these day of specialists.

Nevertheless that modesty which has hitherto kept the editor's superlative asininity from acknowledgment in the public prints forbids the acceptance of this new honor without a challenge. Is it true that no other American is so donkeyish? What has been done to deserve the plaudits of the dirty grocer? Why should his defenders rise and shout "Hail our king?"

This: In the columns of the "Companion," beginning with the November number, there have appeared four articles on the general subject of "Clean Grocery Stores." The fourth of these articles appears in this number, ending as the first began, with these four mottoes, which are in themselves a fair description of the motive, spirit and general nature of the campaign:—

"I will know my grocer."

"Of two grocery stores, I will trade at the cleaner."

"Of two foods in a certain class, I will buy the cleaner."

"Having decided to buy a certain food backed by the guarantee of an honest firm, I will accept no substitute."

WHAT OTHERS HAVE THOUGHT.

The subject is a vital one to the readers of the "Companion"; the investigation which preceded the writing of the articles was thorough and fair-minded; the articles themselves, honoring as they did the clean grocer and wounding the dirty grocer at his most vulnerable points, were destined to cause comment and action. They did. Our readers wrote to us letters filled with thanks, approval and good resolves. Clean grocers all over the country welcomed the publicity we were giving to the business-like and sanitary methods on which they prided themselves; some even asked for additional copies of the "Companion" to distribute among their best customers; others spent money in the advertising columns of their local papers to show that they were "'Woman's Home Companion' grocers." A third element of support and confirmation came from the leading trade publications circulated exclusively among grocers; some editors wrote friendly, co-operating letters; others reprinted our articles and added stirring comments of their own.

The campaign progressed, the press applauded, the grocers themselves co-operated, a few hundred thousand of our readers put themselves in motion—when suddenly there began to appear in the columns of the less progressive grocery journals a series of misdirected jabs at the integrity of our motives and at the spirit of our articles. As examples of vigorous English and as specimens of the argument which is known to lawyers as ad hominem, we publish some of these comments here; and with them, as their most conclusive answers, the opinions of their more progressive fellow workers. It has been difficult to choose the comments for this page; all are interesting and sincere and for this reason worth publishing.

SOME FAVORABLE, SOME NOT.

Here is a word from Saint Paul that is more peevish than logical:

Too bad some of these would-be reformers don't have to make a living running a grocery store. The chances are that after they had gotten down to the store a few mornings as early as the average grocer opens, and had remained as late as the grocer remains at his post, and had worked as hard and had earned as little for his work, they would not be so ding-blamed particular about running a grocery store along the lines laid down by some sanitary sharp who has nothing else to do but sit in his office and figure out how the grocer could handle a barrel of sugar according to scientific sanitary rules.—"Saint Paul Trade Journal."

Compare this attitude with the following letter from the manager of "The Canadian Grocer," for twenty-one years the Canadian authority on groceries:—

We may state that we have for many years past been working on identically the same lines and in every way are endeavoring to instil into the minds of our subscribers the idea of up-to-date cleanly stores, clean and attractive delivery wagons, well and neatly gowned attendants. We may say that we will do all we can to encourage, through the columns of "The Canadian Grocer," the display, selling and delivery conditions of food products. These matters are our leading dogma, and we commend you for giving publicity to same in your valuable magazine.

"The Merchants' Review," which has been more temperate in comment than some, enters this ingenious defense of disease germs and bad ventilation:—

But we have always felt that, let the disease germs be ever so abundant in the grocery store at the start, the wholesome fumes of spices, ground coffee, tea and citrus fruits would make the germs curl up their toes in short order. Even the absence of good ventilation in the grocery store could do little or no harm, since the less the movement of the atmosphere, the stronger would be the spicy odors that make grocery stores among the most healthful places one can find within doors.

A less conservative attitude is that of the "Grocery World," which begins with this statement, which a contemporary speaks of:—

The world holds quite a number of asses, and up to the present time there has been no overt competition for the title of chief. If the editor of the "Woman's Home Companion," however, progresses at his present rate, he will be in excellent position to claim the enviable distinction of being the most brilliantly scintillating ass in the United States at least.

The editor of "The New Jersey Trade Review" differs from the writer of the previous paragraph, as is shown by the following letter:—

The subject under discussion has been time and again presented editorially in my paper; and from what I learn by a perusal of proofs forwarded to this office a few days ago I have no hesitation in commending the work. A majority of stores in New Jersey will not come under the ban. The only danger is that the readers of "Woman's Home Companion" may receive the impression that all stores are kept in an uncleanly condition; but, after all, this objection disappears in the thought that the author of the articles is addressing an intelligent constituency.

HONEST MISUNDERSTANDING.

Of course it would be easy to dismiss those criticisms, which are both adverse and fallacious, by assigning them to self interest. However, some of these attacks are inspired by higher motives, or at least by honest misunderstanding.

The only quarrel that we have with such critics is this: They have not recognized the fact that our articles are directed against the dirty grocer, not all grocers; and some of them, for the sake of a play to that portion of their clientele of which they should not be proud, have substituted for careful reading and helpful co-operation a brand of denunciation, "written with fury and corrected without phlegm."

This is most painfully weak. As a matter of fact, it does not answer the "Grocery World's" one criticism of the attacks at all. We have been wholly sympathetic with the principle that grocery stores should be clean; in fact no sane man would dream of disputing it. We have criticised the "Woman's Home Companion" articles because we believed and still believe them to be at least partial fakes, in that the instances of unclean stores which have been published as types of many city stores have been pure inventions. The ridiculous errors in stating trade methods prove the fake without any other evidence.

The "Grocery World" has directly charged the "Woman's Home Companion" with faking, and has received only the obviously evasive reply of the consciously guilty man.

Worshipping Strange Gods.

Some articles have appeared in the "Grocery World" recently, emphasizing the wisdom of a business man sticking to the line he knows and leaving outside schemes alone. No better illustration of the foolishness of adopting a contrary course can be found than the case of Mark Twain.

Mark Twain is an author. The public eagerly buys whatever he writes, and with his pen he has made several very large fortunes. But he was tempted with strange gods and went into the Plasmon Company, a concern formed to make a powdered preparation of milk. The Plasmon Company has failed, and Twain has been let into a loss of $30,000.

The point to remember about going into outside schemes is that you are completely at other people's mercy. If those other people want the scheme to succeed—if they wish to do the square thing by you—it may succeed, if qualified to, and you may find it a good thing. But if the powers that really control it want to freeze you out, there is usually no way whatever in which you can prevent them.

The Jobbers' Disintegration.

It is perhaps a superfluous observation that before an organization of merchants begins a contest which may become acrimonious, it should be so well organized as to present a solid front to the enemy. This observation comes unbidden to the mind of him who contemplates the somewhat disintegrated condition of the wholesale grocers of this section, who recently begun a war against the retailers' buying combines. The jobbers have two organizations, one the Wholesale Grocers' Association of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware, and the other a local league which admits Philadelphia jobbers only. Both of these associations are working in harmony in the present conflict, and both have been at least in part disrupted by it. The leaders of both organizations seem to have taken decisive action without troubling to consult the great majority of the members. The latter feel the pinch of the retailers' resentment and are protesting vigorously against being made the scapegoats for sins which they neither authorized nor sympathize with.

On all sides it seems to be accepted as a foregone conclusion that the present conflict will fail, not so much because the retailers were well organized as because the jobbers were not really organized at all.

The Futility of Canned Goods Report.

The "Grocery World" has always contended that reports of canned goods packs, such as is yearly compiled and published by the "American Grocer," are never worth the paper they are printed on. Not necessarily because of any fault in the paper publishing them, but because of conditions over which no paper has or can have any control.

The most vital of these conditions is the fact that the accuracy of the report depends on two factors: First, that each packer should state his production, and second, that the stating should be correct. So many reasons exist in the packers' mind for suppressing or exaggerating the truth that any calculation based on such unstable material is hardly worth the trouble needed to make it. Understand, the figures may be correct, but one can never be sure.

Directly in line with the above is a most serious criticism which the Chicago "Canner" makes of the figures which the "American Grocer" presents as the pea pack of 1907. The substance of the criticism is as follows:—

> Take Ohio's pack; the "American Grocer's" total is only 45,721 cases, while a single concern in Ohio packed nearly double that number of cases of peas last season. Another State underestimated by the "American Grocer" is Utah. It reports a total pack of 30,000 cases, while we received reports showing two Utah concerns each of which packed more than 30,000 cases of peas in 1907. Illinois is yet another State greatly understimated in the "American Grocer's" statistics, which give this State 104,482 cases, the incorrectness of which is proven by the fact that three companies in Illinois packed together last season 135,982 cases, which leaves the several other pea packers in this State to make up the difference between 135,982 cases and the total of 216,508 cases packed in Illinois in 1907, as published in the "Canner" of December 26th.
> However, Ohio, Utah and Illinois are not important pea-packing States. The heaviest shortage in the "American Grocer's" figures is in the packs of New York and Wisconsin. In the former its total is 1,509,997 cases, compared with the "Canner's" 1,659,944 cases for New York, a difference of 149,947 cases. For Wisconsin, the "American Grocer" estimates a pack of 1,507,710 cases, which compares with 1,773,599 cases reported by "The Canner," showing a difference of 265,889 cases. The "American Grocer's" estimates are so far wrong that there is no doubt at all that its figures represent the minimum quantity packed in 1907. The New York State packers' Association's total, for instance, exceeds the figures which the "American Grocer" gives by a shade over 50,000 cases, while the association report was also too low, as is proved by the fact that some of the packs estimated in the association's report were underestimated. Direct reports to "The Canner" from some of the New York State canners whose output was estimated by the association furnish proof of this. The "American Grocer's" total for Wisconsin is even further wrong than its New York estimate, as it is not only more than a quarter of a million cases below "The Canner's" Wisconsin figures, but it is over 100,000 cases short of the Wisconsin State Association's estimate, which did not include all Wisconsin factories packing peas in 1907. We are forced to conclude that incompleteness is what ails the "American Grocer's" report on Wisconsin.

If the "Canner's" statements are correct, and the paper has the reputation for speaking only the truth, the "American Grocer" underestimated the 1907 pea pack by 970,897 cases! In this case it looks as if carelessness in compiling had been partly responsible. But even without carelessness the "Grocery World" wishes to emphasize the point that by reason of obstacles impossible to overcome, no general canned goods report can ever be sure that it is within a mile of the truth.

Wanted, A Rest.

In Heaven's name, when are we to be respited from the ceaseless flow of gibberish that has taken the place of the names of proprietary brands? From the time when the Biscuit Trust made what some called a hit with its "Uneeda," there has been a long, long list of emulations, of which the latest and the worst is "Tro Tro Krunch," which has been applied to a new confection just launched by the Trowbridge Chocolate Co., of Meadville, Pa. There was some cleverness in "Uneeda." It was novel, it had a point and it slipped easily from the tongue. But some of the imitations are a mouthful as rough and crude as gravel stones! "Tro Tro Krunch" is a good example. Why, as a matter of fact, an uninformed person hearing certain package goods asked for by name, would imagine either that a very young infant was being addressed in its native language, or that the user of the words had suddenly became an imbecile!

In coining such atrocities, however, manufacturers defeat their own ends, for people do not use those names in asking for goods. The tongue is lazy and delights to travel in the line of least resistance. Instead of using such names as "Tro Tro Krunch," most people would prefer to point.

Government Moves Against Polished Coffee.

Seizes a Car Shipped From New Orleans to Nashville on the Charge of Being Polished and Colored in Violation of the Food Law. Practice General Through the South.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Washington, D. C.,
Jan. 23, 1908.

The first confiscation of food products alleged to be impure, which has been made under the Federal food law, was made by officials of the Department of Agriculture on Tuesday at Nashville, Tenn. The merchandise seized was a car of coffee which had been shipped by a New Orleans house to a concern in Nashville. A warrant of seizure was issued and the goods taken into the custody of the United States Government.

Before the warrant was executed the coffee was unloaded. However, at the store of the firm, 84 bags of the coffee were found to-day, which it was stated had been carried in the car. It was marked with stencil "polished coffee." The coffee was seized pending further action by the Government.

It is charged that the coffee was adulterated in the purview of the law in that it is said to have been colored and stained by use of chemicals. The chemicals used, it is charged, were French talcum and yellow or chroma, and the effect of the chemicals on the grain is said to be to conceal defects.

HOLT.

NOTE.—Almost all of the green coffee sold throughout the South is artificially polished and some of it is actually colored. The practice seems to have grown up more as a fad than as a deliberate method of concealing inferiority, or counterfeiting superiority. Unquestionably it does improve the appearance of the bean, though as a rule it does not increase the market value.—ED.

Butter Men Don't Want Oleo Question Opened.

They are Opposed to the Penrose Bill Introduced Last Week, or to Any Other Bill, Fearing the Strength of the Oleo Interests with the Subject Reopened.

A talk had during the week with certain influential representatives of the butter interests of Pennsylvania revealed the fact that very few of the butter men favor the oleo bill introduced in the Senate two weeks ago by Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania. A synopsis of the bill was given in the "Grocery World's" Washington correspondence of that date.

It is perhaps incorrect to state that the butter interests are opposed to the bill. What they are opposed to is its introduction at this time, or in fact the introduction of any bill. The butter men are fearful, and they have good cause to be, that if the oleo question is once opened in Congress, even to make way for a bill which would be an improvement over present legislation, the oleo men will be able to get the present 10-cent tax reduced. The oleo interests have strong friends in both Houses of Congress, and they would like nothing better than to reopen the old fight over oleo license, so hardly won by the butter interests before. When the Penrose bill was introduced the Pure Butter Protective Association of Pennsylvania was named as its sponsor, but it was learned during the week that the organization has never indorsed the bill at all.

Asks Public to Help Him Reduce Delivery Cost.

San Jose, California, Grocer Prints Elaborate Argument to Show That Public Abuse Free Delivery. Asks People to Forget Their Own Conscience and Think of His.

A retail grocer of San Jose, Cal., is asking the general public of his town, through his local newspapers, to help him cut down his delivery expense. It is a somewhat thankless task, as consumers are proverbially selfish, and usually think only of their own convenience. Particularly female consumers. There is no flaw, however, in the San Jose grocer's published argument, which is in part as follows:—

> The good public, as a rule, hardly realizes what a hardship and expense the delivery of groceries by grocers' wagons means to the man in business.
> While the free delivery of goods means much to many customers, it has its unfair points, and is not an equal privilege for all kinds of customers. For customers living in the city free delivery is a convenience more often over-used than properly used. For the customers living outside of the city it is decidedly unfair; they cannot use the free delivery. This brings but one vital point: The town people should pay for delivery of goods and the country people who handle their own goods would be ahead of this charge, which is surely due them.
> If the grocery people do not deliver goods the public would get about a 5 per cent. lower price on most goods.
> From city trade the grocer is troubled with small, in fact very small, orders, sometimes a cake of yeast to be delivered a mile; sometimes an order for 15 or 20 cents' worth of merchandise. Such orders are unfair, and bring one to the point of making a minimum amount for delivery. Say orders for less than 50 cents' worth of goods will not be delivered. The amount is not large, and no larger than any housekeeper could make her order.
> Few ladies realize how much it costs to handle small orders. Some ladies don't send their orders in until almost dinner or supper time, and, seemingly, they think their one order is the only order that the store has to handle, as they expect it at once.
> The ordinary grocer makes four deliveries per day in well-populated localities, and this immense amount of ground covered over and over again is hard on teams, wagons and men; although even this four-times a-day delivery does not seem enough for some housewives; simply because they fail to give it the thought of getting together an order of any size, not beause they don't care, but because they don't think over their wants.
> If delivery was to be charged for, and price of goods made correspondingly lower, the lady ordering four times a day would pay a minimum price of 10 cents per order, or 40 cents per day, or for a week, $2.40. If she ordered only twice a week she would pay only 20 cents. This illustration is for light-weight groceries. For heavy goods, such as potatoes, grain, etc., charge would be as to weight—about 10 cents per hundred.
>
> Possibly if delivery was not made free it would be well to have a transfer company or an automobile service handle goods for the combined grocers.
> These deductions might not suit all grocers (that is, big and little grocers), but there is no argument that will down the facts that the free delivery of goods is a big expense, and one that is increasing; and one that is, sooner or later, going to be handled by a company organized for that purpose, where all buyers will get the same benefit, country buyers and city buyers alike, where the person carrying his own goods is allowed for this service, and all are charged a lower price for groceries than they are now paying.
> This argument may be a trifle ahead of time at the present moment, as to relation to not delivering groceries, but as to limiting the amount of purchase to, say, 50 cents' worth for free delivery, the time for consumers to consider such a fact is now. There is no merchant so overworked, so overtaxed, and no merchant asked to do so much free of charge as the groceryman.
> The buying public are the ones to give the article some thought, and they are the ones to lend their assistance to help the average grocer with some of these problems brought about by his aims to please the public in so many ways free of charge.

In the Forbes Coupon Book system all possibility of loss is practically eliminated. It practically places every business upon a cash basis. With it in operation the merchant, instead of figuring upon things beyond his control, is estimating on certainties. (See Adv.)

WITHDRAWN

The special discount announced in this paper to be given to retail grocers on purchases from February 1st to March 15, 1908, has been withdrawn owing to the fact that we are now running the works practically to their limit and cannot accumulate stock to care for the increase this proposed special discount would demand.

When our new additions will insure the making of a surplus stock we will, in all probability, renew this offer to retail grocers.

It would create dissatisfaction at this time, however, to hold out inducements to the retailer and then be forced from lack of capacity to properly fill orders through the jobbers.

A deal will be forthcoming some day which will not result in disappointment.

THE GROCERY MARKETS

Tea.

The tea market is still short of its normal demand. One large importer estimated the business of the current month at about 20 per cent. below last January. There is a good steady demand, nevertheless, although only for immediate wants. No buyer is anticipating his wants to any noticeable degree, in spite of the firm market. The situation on all low grades is strong, and the higher grades are steady.

Coffee.

The market for Rio and Santos coffee is steady, with a gradual hardening tendency in the value of spot stock. The increasing scarcity of the better grades, due to the policy of the Brazilian Government in buying these grades to put away, is now being felt quite strongly by the roasting trade, who are compelled to pay a higher price for old crop coffee than the grade warrants. The receipts of Rio and Santos at primal points indicate not more than a 10,000,000 crop, which is a decrease of about 50 per cent. from the last crop. Some explanation of this remarkable condition, without droughts or frosts, is wanted by the trade, but is not vouchsafed as yet. Mild coffees are very firm. Java and Mocha are steady. The general demand for coffee is good, but the trade are taking it in small quantities.

Sugar.

The sugar market is practically unchanged for the week. The raw market is a trifle easier, but Cuba is far behind in her production, and the supply is still very low. Refined sugar is unchanged for the week and gives no indication of any change in the near future. The demand is very slow.

Fish.

The fish market has remained unchanged for the week. Norway and Irish mackerel are still very firm, but without change for the week. The demand has been light for the week. Cod, hake and haddock are all dull, as all need snapping cold weather to bring out the demand, which has not been forthcoming as yet. The market in some quarters is inclined to be easy in consequence. In spite of the general prophecy, domestic sardines have not advanced as yet. The demand is light. Foreign sardines continue to be scarce and very high. Salmon is steady and quiet.

Syrup and Molasses.

Glucose is unchanged for the week. Compound syrup is quiet, owing to the mild weather, and rules at unchanged prices. Sugar syrup is unchanged and in moderate demand. The molasses producing season is about over, and prices on the finer grades show no indication of any immediate change. There will be plenty of the lower grades of molasses this season and prices will in all probability be low.

Beans and Peas.

Pea beans can be bought on spot at $2.20, but cost to come forward $2.30. The demand is nevertheless light. Marrows are somewhat lower—about $2.15—and the demand is light. California limas are unchanged, so far as the best stock is concerned, although some rain-damaged beans can be bought at about ¾ cent below the market. Dried peas of all grades are unchanged and in fair demand.

Dried Fruits.

Prunes are unchanged both on spot and the coast. Some odd lots have been sold to clean up on spot during the week, however, at considerably below the market. The general demand is light. Peaches and apricots are in the same firm and dull condition they have been in for several weeks. Currants are fairly active at unchanged prices. Raisins are dull and easy, both as to loose and seeded. Apples are weak and dull. Citron, figs and dates are unchanged and dull.

Canned Goods.

The tomato market is decidedly unsettled. There have been sales during the week at 80 cents delivered, which would be equivalent to a decline of about 2½ cents. On the same day, however, other sales have been made at 80 cents f. o. b., so that it is difficult to state exactly where the market is. Stocks are low everywhere and it seems sure that large jobbing buyers must come into the market soon. It is confidently predicted that when they do prices will advance, but the tomato market is a hard thing to forecast. Corn is unchanged, and on spot the demand is exceedingly light. Prices have been named

The Difference Between Bank Notes

If some one said to you I'll give you a bank note if you will do something for me—you wouldn't be much interested, would you? It would be too indefinite.

If some one said I'll give you a hundred-dollar bank note that would be different, wouldn't it? The same difference exists if one of your customess tells her family "I am going to give you Pork and Beans for dinner"—they are not much interested; but if she says "I'm going to give you that means something. We have advertised them so widely that they have been widely used, and because they have been widely used their unusually fine quality is widely known.

for New York State corn, on about the same basis as last year, and some orders have been taken. Peas are dull on spot and active as to futures. Peaches are still very dull, scarce and high. Apples are weak and some offers of New York State gallons have been made as low as $2.60. The Baltimore line of small canned goods is unchanged and dull. California canned goods are scarce in first hands, and unchanged in price.

Butter.

The butter market is firm and unchanged. The receipts of absolutely fancy butter are very light and sell readily at outside prices. There is also a good demand for under grades at proportionately lower prices. The make of butter is about usual for the season, and prospects are for a firm market during the coming week without special change.

Eggs.

The receipts of fresh eggs have increased during the past week, and this has caused a decline of 2 cents per dozen. There is a very active demand for all grades at the decline, and no change seems in sight for the next few days. Prices now are about normal for the season. The future depends on the weather.

Cheese.

The cheese market remains steady and unchanged. There is still an increased consumptive demand and stocks are considerably lighter than a year ago. As prices are already higher than usual for the season, no change seems likely for the coming week. The above statement of conditions applies to all grades.

Produce.

Potatoes, York State, 78 to 80 cents per bushel; Pennsylvania, 78 to 80 cents per bushel, demand fair; sweet potatoes, primes, 90 cents to $1 per basket; culls, 40 to 50 cents per basket, demand good; white turnips, 25 to 30 cents per basket; yellow, 40 cents per basket, demand fair; yellow globe onions, 65 to 70 cents per bushel, demand good; white onions, 75 to 85 cents per basket, demand fair; Danish cabbage, 75 to 85 cents per barrel, $2 to $3 per 100, demand fair; watercress, 3 cents per bunch, demand fair; parsnips, $1.25 to $1.50 per barrel, demand fair; carrots, 40 cents per basket, demand fair; oyster plants, 3 cents per bunch, demand fair; beets, $1.75 to $2 per barrel, demand fair; Pennsylvania celery, 7 to 12 cents per bunch, demand fair; horseradish, $3 to $4 per barrel, 7 to 12 cents per bunch, demand fair.

Provisions.

The entire line of smoked meats remains stationary. The demand shows considerable increase. The supply of hogs is large and the ruling price 15 to 20 per cent. lower than a year ago While the present large receipts of hogs continue, the advance in hog products which usually occur early in the year will probably not take place. Pure lard is steady and unchanged. No change seems likely during the week. Compound lard is fairly steady, but owing to the high cost of cottonseed oil there is not likely to be a decline soon. Dried beef, barrel pork and canned meats are in fair demand and unchanged.

Green Fruit.

Apples, Bellflower, $3 to $4.50; Spy, $2.75 to $3.25; Spitz, $4 to $4.50; Greenings, $4 to $4.75; Hulberson's $3 to $3.50; Baldwins, $2 to $3; Kings, $4 to $4.50. demand poor; bananas, jumbo, $1.75 to $2.50; firsts, $1.25 to $1.75; 8-hands, $1 to $1.25; 7-hands, 65 to 90 cents; 6-hands, 40 to 60 cents, demand poor; California oranges, $2.25 to $2.50, demand poor; grapefruit, $3.50 to $6 per box, demand fair to good; pineapples, $2.25 to $3.25 per box, demand good; lemons, $2.75 to $3.50 per box, demand fair to good.

Nuts.

Almonds, 17 to 18 cents per pound; Brazil, 10 cents per pound; filberts, 10¼ cents per pound; pecans, 9¾ cents per pound; walnuts, 12½ to 14 cents per pound; mixed nuts, 11 cents per pound, demand poor; peanuts, choice, green, 4 cents per pound; fancy, 5 cents per pound; jumbo, 6¼ cents per pound; roasted, choice, $1 per bushel; fancy, $1.25 per bushel; jumbo, $1.50 per bushel, demand fair.

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORTS.

Spices.

The market continues active. We note, however, few changes of any importance. There is little or no speculative demand.

Window-Dressing Articles Wanted

For several months the "Grocery World" has been looking for the right man to take charge of its "Window-Dressing Department" and contribute a good, suggestive weekly article. We have tried several, but none was exactly what was wanted.

We will now attempt to get these articles from our subscribers, probably every one of whom has some technical knowledge of window-dressing. What we want is articles clearly describing window displays that can be made by the average retailer; not necessarily new or original—in fact, those which have been used successfully are perhaps preferable to all others.

For all acceptable articles, the "Grocery World" will pay an average price of $5 each. All matter sent in under this arrangement should be addressed to the "Window-Dressing Department." If drawings are also sent they should be made throughout in black ink (not pencil).

Spices in general suffered severe declines during last year, and in our opinion advances are now in order.

Pepper.—Demand is active for import needs. There is little or no trading in futures. Prices are steady and slightly firmer.

Cayennes.—Fair demand at steady prices.

Cloves are steady, with good demand. Stocks in our country are exceptionally small.

Pimento (Allspice) is steady, but unchanged, the demand being very fair.

Nutmegs.—Rather quiet during the week. There is a firmer tendency for all sizes, although quotations are nominally unchanged.

Cassias.—Prices are steady; demand good.

Gingers.—We note an increase in demand, prices being steady but practically unchanged.

Seeds.—Caraway has advanced sharply and 9½ to 10 cents is now ruling market quotation. Celery, poppy and coriander are all steady at practically unchanged prices.

Rubbed sage and sweet herbs are still selling well. Prices on same are unchanged during the week.

Imported Fish Products.

Business continues to improve and orders have been coming in more frequently, and while they indicate that it is mostly hand-to-mouth business, the amount of orders is very encouraging.

Salt herrings are in slightly better demand, but prices are unchanged.

Irish mackerel are scarce and decidedly higher.

Norway mackerel are in very much better demand and tending higher.

Imported oil sardines are unchanged because there is little offering. A few lots of new Portuguese sardines are on the way and they have mostly been sold to arrive.

Sprats.—The catch is very disappointing, owing to stormy weather, and goods are scarce; almost unobtainable at present.

MARKET NOTES.

Florida grapefruit is wanted. Fine fruit still commands $6, ordinarily good $5.

Tangerines range from $4 to $5 and are in good demand. The quality is good.

Florida beans are scarcer than they were and range from $2 to $3. The demand is good.

Florida peas range from $2 to $2.50. The quality is very fair, but sales are slow.

Radishes range from 2½ to 3 cents per bunch. The hothouses are now furnishing the market. The demand is fairly good.

New Bermuda potatoes range from $6.50 to $7 per barrel. The demand is fair.

New Michigan rhubarb has come down in price and now commands 60 cents per dozen. The demand is light.

Florida eggplants are moving very slowly at $2 to $2.50 per crate.

The market for Florida oranges is still soft and easy, the receipts being in excess of the demand. Only the very fanciest fruit can now command even $3, and the top of choice grades is only $2.75. Fine sound oranges can be obtained as low as $1.75 to $2. The demand is fair, but not sufficient to clean up the market.

Hothouse cucumbers range from $1 to $1.25 per dozen and are in good demand. The quality is good.

Florida salad ranges from $1.75 to $2.25 per crate and is selling fairly well.

Florida peppers average $1.75 per crate. The quality is good, but the demand slow.

AMONG THE TRADE.

Gimbel Brothers laid off forty clerks from their grocery department on January 1st.

Joseph Gelb and Robert Cramer, oleomargarine dealers, were on Wednesday held in $600 bail by Commissioner Craig on a charge of selling oleomargarine in unmarked packages. An additional charge of selling oleomargarine without a Federal license was lodged against Cramer, who resides on North Thirtieth street, above Jefferson. W. C. Noll, an inspector in the Internal Revenue Department, testified against the accused.

John Dignan, a wealthy wholesale sugar merchant, died on Wednesday in the Presbyterian Hospital. He was 88 years old and for nearly 60 years was in business at No. 129 South Front street. Until two weeks ago, when he went to the hospital to undergo an operation for kidney trouble, Mr. Dignan had been in active control of his business. He was unmarried. For many years he made his home at the St. James Hotel and for about a year had lived at the Rittenhouse. He was a member of the Board of Trade and the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick. Mr. Dignan was well known among the wholesale district having antedated practically everybody there. Mr. Dignan was a relic of the old days when the sugar jobber occupied a position quite distinct from that of the wholesale grocer. In recent years his business amounted to but little, but in the days when it did he amassed a large fortune.

Olive Prices As Compared With Last Year.

Substantial Reductions From Last Season's Values. Reductions In Most Sizes, and Larger Packages for the Same Prices in Others.

Nearly all packers of olives are now taking orders at the reduced prices which are to rule during the current season. These prices show a substantial reduction from last year.

A few examples, taken from the prices of a large packer, are as follows:—

The regulation 25-cent package which sold from first hands last year at $1.95 to $2 per dozen is this year quoted at $1.75.

The regulation 10-cent package cost the jobber, both last year and this year, 77½ cents per dozen, but this year the package is much larger.

The package that formerly retailed at 50 cents, but which last year had to sell at 60 cents, is this year back to 50 cents again. This refers to 20-ounce, 80 to 90 fruit packed Philadelphia style. Last year they sold to the jobber at $4.35 to $4.50, this year at $3.50.

The 32-ounce package of the same sized fruit sells to jobbers this year at $5.75, as against $6.25 last year.

In several other sizes where the price has not changed, the package is larger.

Cutting the Price.

In last week's issue of the "Grocery World," a Philadelphia jobber quoted a price on Wrigley's soap which surprised us; and we wish to explain how such a price could be made.

For a short period last year we offered the retail dealers a 50-bar box W. M. S. soap free with each 100-bar box purchased through jobbers, each of the 100-bar boxes contained a notice to the retailers that they were entitled to a 50-bar box free with each purchase; and each of the free 50s was marked with stencil warning grocers that it was free goods and should not be paid for, notwithstanding this precaution on our part, jobbers who purchased large quantities for stock, while the deal was on, considered that they were privileged to dispose of it as they saw fit, hence the apparent cut in price, the 100-bar box and the 50-bar box are being quoted separately at a total price which nets the jobber a fair profit.

While we do not think we are being treated fairly by any jobbers who sell the soap intended for the retailer, we have no control over stocks on hand. We assure the jobbing trade, however, that the cut price can't last long, and that it won't happen again. It could not happen at all if the retail dealers would insist on their rights and ask for the free 50-bar box with each 100, as they have been notified to do.

Funny Developments of the Mail-Order Business

Manager of the Portland, Ore., Commercial Club, In the Course of an Argument That Parcels Post Schemes Would Change our Entire Mode of Life, Would Destroy the Retail Dealer, Enervate the Country Newspaper and Depress Real Estate Values, Tells Some Humorous Experiences of Mail-Order Buyers.

The introduction of a parcels post system into the United States will change our entire mode of business.

We now deal from the manufacturer through the jobber to the retailer, and it has been found in our country, with its enormous area and constantly increasing population and wealth, and with its changing credit conditions, that this is a cheaper and better plan than to deal directly from the manufacturer to the retailer. To overthrow this system is a serious question. The universal usage of the parcels post will bring about such change.

I have seen, through the work of one wealthy and influential manufacturer, the merchants of a town of 5,000 people actually ruined. It was not the intention of this manufacturer to hurt the retail merchants of his own town, but his family got into the habit of buying from mail-order houses, and talking about it, he gave his neighbors the opportunity, and not realizing what he was doing, he became an enthusiast. The result of it was that the trade of that town fell off until more than 40 per cent. of all the larger merchants failed in two years.

These people didn't buy their merchandise any cheaper, and they didn't recognize the fact that they had unconsciously participated in a scheme that emptied their houses, cut real estate to less than 40 per cent. of its former value, and almost wrecked a community that had been very prosperous. A public meeting was called, and the question discussed, which resulted in the people buying at home. In two years the town was back to its former condition, and has since grown and prospered.

There are a great many high-priced, skilled advertisers engaged by these houses and corporations which do their business through the mails, and you can easily multiply the present situation by five in a decade with a parcels post, for it will result in putting half of the present retail dealers out of business, and do away with half the country newspapers.

It will place the rent rolls of our smaller cities on the same basis as those of Germany and England (a return of 2 per cent. per annum), and a remark I have just read in a book written by Ed. Howe, editor. of the Atchison "Globe," that on an European trip they ran through a town larger than Kansas City at sixty miles an hour is but the record of an occurrence that would become common throughout the United States.

Next after the retail dealer and the country newspaper, the real estate owner is hurt through the mail-order system. There is property in Chicago to-day that is not worth what it was fifteen years ago, and why? Simply because 40 per cent. of the retail business of that great Western metropolis, outside of provisions and heavy hardware, is condensed within eight blocks of State street—between Congress street and the Temple. Chicago people like to trade on State street, and they will actually pay out extra money to do so. And if this is true in this instance, how much worse would be the condition with the great postal service of the United States made a vehicle for the convenience of mail-order concerns in the large cities of the country?

It is easy to get the mail-order habit, and millions of citizens of the United States already have it in a chronic form, and in those sections where it is the most aggravated you see the least prosperity.

Of course, there are some comical things coming as a result of the habit. I have some personal acquaintances and friends with the great mail-order houses of Chicago, and they told me of a man working in a carpet factory in Philadelphia who, through reading the attractive advertisements, sent to Chicago for a carpet which came out of the mill in which the man worked, and before he got his carpet on the floor it had cost him more than double what it would have done had he purchased it from his employers.

In another case a woman ordered a food product, and when it arrived found it was an article produced by her husband two blocks away. A relative of a New Orleans merchant sent to New York for a fabric, and her husband was the secretary of the company that wove the goods.

Now, in many cases it has been discovered that retail grocers have been buying their dry goods and clothing from mail-order houses, and when we get right down to brass tacks, and realize that the material and labor have to go into all commodities and be paid for, the man or woman who buys his merchandise from mail-order houes is no better off at the end of the year than those who buy it from the smaller stores at home.

The staples of life are sold at about the same price all over the United States. The housewife in New York City or in the Oregon village pays practically the same price for sugar, flour, coffee, tea, soda, soap, baking powder, canned goods, cured meats, muslins, calicoes, tickings, hosiery, gloves, etc. This list might be extended almost indefinitely.

A large per cent. of the standard manufacturers of the country, whether they produce hats, clothing, collars, shoes or various other articles, fix a retail price which is the same everywhere, and while this is true there are a great many communities in the United States where the merchant is unable to carry anything like an assortment because people have got the mail-order habit, and they actually send away for things that are carried by a next-door neighbor.

Just a little while ago there was a good joke on the wife of a Portland business man, who ordered a mattress by mail, and was very much embarrassed when it was delivered to her, through a local merchant, and the merchant and his wife were her guests at dinner when the mattress was delivered.

In conclusion, the parcels post will at least disarrange present plans, and while I may be mistaken, I believe it would mean disaster and trouble, and that we are not ready even for a trial of such a plan as this for a great many years to come.

Dear Sir:—Will you kindly pass your opinion in the "Grocery World" on the inclosed advertisement.

Yours truly,
SAML. APTEKAR.

The inclosed advertisement was a small circular, about 6 x 9 inches, printed in black on white paper. Here is a photographic reproduction:—

Why Must a Bank President Commit Suicide?

Because it is better than to die in jail, and in jail they must all go, those who spend the poor men's hard earned money for their own pleasure, if they were more saving and would by their groceries from SAM APTEKAR'S GROCERY STORE.

The body of this circular, "A Few Prices," is tame. Prices alone are seldom interesting. In this case there was sufficient space to have used several lines of matter for each article. Take Dog Head Pork and Beans with Tomato Sauce. How much more interesting would that have become had something like the following appeared beneath it:—

> The largest, whitest, mealiest beans, appetized with a dash of succulent pork and a relish of ripe tomato sauce.

If this same process had been followed out all through the advertisement, it would have gained about 1,000 per cent. both in attractiveness and probable results.

I'm going to be very frank with Mr. Aptekar—I think his circular pretty bad. The head is obviously written to attract attention, which is all right if there is something to see after the attention is attracted. In this case, however, the idea is fantastic, incoherent and pointless. I should not try this sort of ad-writing, if I were Mr. Aptekar. He can make out a great deal better, I feel sure, by sticking close to business, which Court's View of the Colorado Grocers' Combine.

In deciding the trust case against the Colorado Retail Grocers' Association, the court made the following reflections upon the grocers' attitude:—

> The testimony in this case tends to prove that there does exist an association—a combination of retail grocers in this State, doing business under methods and in a manner that appears to result, at least, in restraint of trade, which is unlawful; under the methods thus pursued it appears in the evidence in this case that prices are named, fixed and maintained in numbers, as stated by defendants' counsel, on at least 200 articles classified as necessities of life; that such prices are fixed without regard to the law of supply and demand, without the regard to the cost of production or manufacture, and without regard to the cost of exposing such articles to sale. Such combination, with such purposes, or doing business in a manner as to bring about such results and such consequences, the law uniformly prohibits, because it is declared to be unlawful.
> The grocer is apt to consider his personal interests for the time being, feeling that he is living but for a day, or a month, or a few years, and that his only interest in life is his personal success in business. He is apt to forget his obligations to the public.
> Grocerymen may think they might desire to go on and transact business in this way—that when a manufacturer comes into town and says: "We will sell you our goods, and we will give them to you at such a price, but you must sell them at a certain price," and the groceryman agrees to do that; and then they all get together and combine and organize over the State and they have such a systematic organization, such a complete control of their business and the business of their neighbor and the business of all their associates in the grocery business that a telephone message in the morning tells each of them what price to put on this or that commodity. They may think this is legitimate. They may think it in good morals and in good sense is the way to do business, but I do not believe it, and if they have not the moral courage to change their methods of doing business, I think the court would be doing them a great service in helping to break it up. I am sure it is not in the interest of the public, and I am sure it is unlawful.

At last week's meeting of the Harrisburg Retail Merchants' Association officers to serve for the ensuing year were elected, the parcels post and the mercantile tax laws were discussed, together with some proposed legislation to be presented to Councils in the near future.

These officers were elected: President, Otto J. Buxbaum; first vice-president, William F. Paul; second vice-president, William F. Burgoon; secretary, R. F. Cook, and treasurer, P. G. Diener.

St. Joseph, Mo.

At the last meeting of the St. Joseph (Mo.) Retail Grocers' Association the wisdom of retailers buying future canned goods was discussed. The following pertinent statement was made by one of the speakers:—

In buying futures we must figure interest on the money invested for at least six months, which will keep the majority of merchants from discounting their bills.

The difference between the cost of a case of 60-cent corn, less 2 per cent. discount, and the one with 7 per cent. interest added for six months is 6⅗ cents per case.

California.

The California State Retail Grocers' Association has placed itself on record with regard to the Standard Oil Co's method of selling consumers direct. At its recent meeting, with reference to the Standard Oil Co. and its policy of selling direct to small consumers at jobbing prices, the various individuals concerned were urged to write to this concern calling their attention to the injustice of such methods. Several of the directors roundly scored this sort of business on the part of the trust.

Denver, Col.

The Denver (Col.) Retail Grocers' Association adopted the following resolutions at its last meeting:—

Whereas, There are in Colorado a large number of persons of the class called municipal employees; and

Whereas, By reason of rules of the United States Government and the general laws of the State, no garnishee or attachment can be brought successfully against this class of persons; and

Whereas, The only way to reach them is by influence brought to bear through tthe heads of department, who may entirely overlook the matter, if they so desire; and

Whereas, This is not equal justice to all, and places the retail merchant in the attitude of a beggar for favor; and

Whereas, Making a class exempt from creditors is contrary to the principles of American Government; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Denver Retail Grocers' Association that a law covering this matter should be passed by our next Legislature, and we insist that the retail merchants of the State of Colorado see that it be done in the next Legislature meeting.

Epidemic of Retailers' Claims.

So Say Local Jobbers. Hard Times and Lowered Prices Responsible.

Conversations with wholesale grocers during the week by "Grocery World" representatives seemed to develop the fact that there is at present an epidemic of claims and complaints from the retail trade. Two reasons are assigned for it. One is the hard times, and the other is the fact that many lines of merchandise have declined in price, thus making stock bought to-day cheaper than that bought only a few weeks ago. In the course of the epidemic a large number of retailers have sought to return goods for various reasons, and the jobbers say the declined prices are unquestionably responsible.

One jobber pertinently remarked during the week that if the local wholesalers would combine to handle claims made by retailers they would accomplish more than through combining to selfishly confine all large buying privileges to themselves.

$20,000 to Employees!

Never have authorities differed more sharply than they differ to-day as to whether hard times are upon us or not. With six bumper crops in succession at higher and higher prices an agricultural people like ours ought to be prosperous.

How about luxuries? The diamond importations are falling off by half or more, but the bonbon manufacturers are evidently happy. The Walter M. Lowney Company, for instance, have just distributed nearly $20,000 to the employees of their two factories as a "labor dividend"—something in addition to regular wages and the sixth annual distribution. When it comes to economizing on luxuries, apparently some bonbons are considered necessities by the American people. Shoes, meat and overcoats may be subjects for economy, but Lowney's bonbons and cocoa seems to be in demand however. hard the times. Perhaps the good treatment the employees receive is one reason these chocolate products taste so good.

WHY AND BECAUSE

Why has the Exton Cracker kept growing in popularity from 1847 to 1908? Because you can induce people to buy some other oyster cracker only once, and because you can induce them to stop using the Exton only once. Why does the Exton cracker lead and the others follow? Because there is no other oyster cracker for the Exton to follow, so it must lead.

Another Talk With Dr. Wiley.

I tell you, but that Dr. Wiley is a grand good man!

You know who he is—he's the Government chemist that tells the courts what the National food law means.

I was in the "Grocery World" office one day last week, looking over some trade papers, when I saw a statement from the Doctor that he'd found a way to dry California fruit so they wouldn't have to use sulphur to give it a color.

He explained it as a scheme to steam the stuff—build a place with a steam plant in it and coils running all about the sides. The fruit goes in there and takes a Turkish bath, and when it comes out it's all dried without any sulphur.

Just think how simple that is! I don't know much about drying California fruit, but they tell me it's done now by the sun and the air. Now that Dr. Wiley made this great discovery all that the California fruit man has to do is to build a building and put his steam plant in it, and the thing is done.

Why it oughn't to cost each man a cent over $10,000 if he's economical. And then the sun and the air are fearfully old-fashioned! Everybody uses 'em and dear me, they're awful common!

Well, reading the thing made such an impression on me that I thought that I felt I simply must go to Washington to tell the good Doctor how grand I thought him. So I ran down and happened to catch him in his office.

I've had some mighty interesting chats with Dr. Wiley. He's opened his heart to me as he has to very few men. He's always had something new to tell me.

"Doctor," I said, "I think that steam plant idea of yours is by far the best thing that you've ever done! So simple and practical!"

The distinguished scientist smiled modestly and accepted a cigar.

"If I only continue to have my health," he said, "I'll get these food questions settled some time.

"I've solved the benzoate question, too," he said. "You know a large number of manufacturers think they have to put benzoate of soda in catsup and such things to keep it from going bad. And maybe they have up to this time, but I've got a plan now that will make it entirely unnecessary."

"Oh, Doctor!" I said, wholly under the spell of that mighty brain, "if I might only know what it is!"

"I'll tell you gladly," said he graciously, "because I think you are a man who very closely resembles myself in many ways (I hated like thunder to write that), I expect to have Congress pass a law forbidding catsup to pop."

"Even in leap year, Doctor?" I ventured timidly.

"I shall also organize a union among the brands of catsup and things," went on the Doctor, not noticing my interruption, "and one of the rules shall be that no brand that belongs shall work except on permission from me. I feel sure that this will remedy the evil, for you see I'll never give permission. Why shouldn't catsup be liable to the law as well as you or me? If we go wrong, we are arrested, but if a bottle of catsup goes bad, nothing is done to it. I propose under my law to arrest it as an example to other bottles."

"Doctor," I said tersely, "are you a man or a brain!"

Again he waved the tribute aside.

"A great many of these food problems only come up because manufacturers are allowed to hold opinions as to what's best for them," he went on. "How can they possibly know that? Now these glucose people who have been arguing with me over the name of their stuff—as soon as I can I propose to put every one of them in jail."

"For what?" I gasped.

"For differing with me," said the Doctor, in surprise at my dumbness.

"I never have believed that the consumer got the proper sort of notice about the character of the food products he buys," went on the Doctor, "labels won't do it. I have a plan as to that that will do the trick and it's the only thing that will. I will make every manufacturer of carton goods, bottles or tins or cans send out a messenger with every package. The messenger will go with the package until it reaches the consumer, and will then tell the consumer exactly what the thing is made of. After which he will go back to the factory and be sent out again, and so on. Why just think what that will do! It will not only solve the problem of informing the consumer about his food, but it will solve the problem of unemployed labor! Take a manufacturer turning out 1,000 bottles of catsup a day, and he will require 1,000 men! Say we won't have good times with everybody working!"

"Ain't it a little expensive, Doctor?" I ventured.

"Expensive? No!" retorted the Doctor, "I don't have to pay for it, do I? Nothing's expensive in this food business that don't come out of my pocket! Please remember that."

I apologized for being so nutty.

"Don't the New Orleans molasses people use sulphur, too?" I asked. "How are you going to fix that?"

"Easiest thing in the world!" he said, "I have that all thunk out. All they use sulphur for is to give the molasses a good color. Now, I have two ways of giving it a good color without sulphur. One way is to paint each stalk of sugar cane, while it is still in the ground, the color the molasses ought to be. I figure out that the paint will travel through it and by the chemical principle of fudgeillibus give the molasses the finest color you ever saw. No sulphur at all, you see!"

"And the other way?" I asked, swallowing hard.

"I shall use deep breathing," he said quietly.

"Deep breathing," I repeated, somewhat mystified.

"Certainly! What is wanted is to give molasses a good healthy color, isn't it? There's nothing better for a good healthy color than deep breathing. I shall teach the molasses to take deep breaths. Or," he went on, "I may use the same idea in another way. Whenever you run you get a good color, don't you?"

"Sure," I said, "royal purple."

"Well," he continued, "I will have the molasses run a mile through pipes every day, won't that give it a good color?"

"It certainly sounds reasonable," I conceded.

"And there you have it," said the Doctor. "It only takes a little brain to solve these things."

"Oh, but Doctor," I said, "there isn't another brain like yours in existence. Not outside of a jar of alcohol, at least."

And then we parted. Ain't he the most wonderful man?

Whisky Seizure Under Food Law.

District Attorney D. W. Baker, of Washington, D. C., on Tuesday authorized United States Marshal Aulick Palmer to seize forty-five barrels of whisky stored at the James Clark Distilling Co., 610 Pennsylvania avenue, Washington. The whisky, the District Attorney alleges, is misbranded and therefore violates the Federal pure food law. The company maintains that the whisky is a blend. Mr. Baker contends, however, that the whisky is made up of neutral spirits and has been found to have been colored and flavored. Upon this case a test case as to the righteousness of Dr. Wiley's whisky rulings will probably be based.

New Board Formed to Pass on Dr. Wiley's Rulings.

Five Leading American Universities Asked to Each Furnish One Member. Complaints Made to President Roosevelt by Aggrieved Food Interests Said to Have Inspired Action.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Washington, D. C.,
Jan. 23, 1908.

The Federal Department of Agriculture seems to have shown rather unmistakably that it is no longer willing to take the word of Dr. H. W. Wiley on chemical subjects related to the food laws. The department, it is said, at the instigation of President Roosevelt himself, has sent to the universities of Virginia, California, Johns Hopkins, Northwestern and Yale, to have those institutions each suggest the name of some scientist. The five together will constitute a Board which will pass upon Dr. Wiley's chemical rulings.

The move is said to have been taken as the result of a large number of vigorous complaints which have been lodged at the White House by Congressional representatives from the States principally affected by Dr. Wiley's rulings, notably California. These complaints have all emphasized resentment at having Dr. Wiley continue dictator as to food questions, and they are said to have had considerable effect on the President's mind. HOLT.

Your Profit and That's All.

Every grocer sells chocolate and cocoa—his customers must have it. No matter whose he sells, he makes his profit and no more. He has no good reason for recommending one brand instead of another, so he hands out what his customers ask for.

The Knickerbocker Chocolate Co., of New York, are giving grocers a real reason for trying to push the sale of Barker's Hasty Lunch Chocolate, Blue Ribbon and Bedford Cocoas. For making a point to give these particular goods to their trade when no special brand is asked for and for recommending them when some other brand is asked for.

They are the only chocolate manufacturers who are using their advertising appropriation to buy valuable merchandise to give to grocers to reward them for their efforts.

The quality of Barker's Hasty Lunch Chocolate Bedford and Blue Ribbon Cocoas cannot be excelled; they are certain to please everybody who is induced to buy them, and, still more important, every case of these goods carries Universal Coupons for the grocer. These coupons are exchangeable for almost any article of merchandise a grocer may want. They are the same as cash.

When it is possible for a grocer to sell not only as fine chocolate and cocoa as there is on the market and not only make his profit and please his trade, but get a roll-top desk, a new set of harness, standard scales, or even a new delivery wagon or a piano, isn't he short-sighted if he doesn't do his best to push the sale of these particular goods?

Why be satisfied with the profit alone if you can get a premium besides?

Slices Everything from 6-pound Knuckles to half-ounce Ends.

MAKE OUR HISTORY YOUR GUIDE TO SUCCESS

A few years ago A. W. Johnson, a retail grocer, refurnished his store with tilting bins, new scales, electric coffee mill, molasses pump and a new dried-beef cutter. These equipments were satisfactory labor-saving devices with the single exception of the new dried-beef cutter; this, although a highly advertised, standard machine, was incapable of doing nice work. After carefully investigating the merits of every slicing machine on the market he did not find one that was actually slicing dried beef in a workmanlike, economical manner. Being a thorough, competent mechanic with an inventive turn of mind, backed by many years of experience cutting dried beef, he determined to design and construct an altogether new machine, avoiding or correcting the defects of the others and embodying new, practical devices of simple construction.

The new machine was a success—a world beater—it sliced dried beef to perfection. His customers were delighted with the broad. smooth, perfect slices, deliciously juicy, transparently thin—so much superior to any beef they ever saw—naturally he gained trade, his sales of beef increased week by week until Johnson's dried beef became a household word, and people would use no other kind, while the new machine sliced up every little scrap in thin, salable slices and reduced waste to a minimum.

Send for a sample of this famous sliced beef—the beef that beats the world.

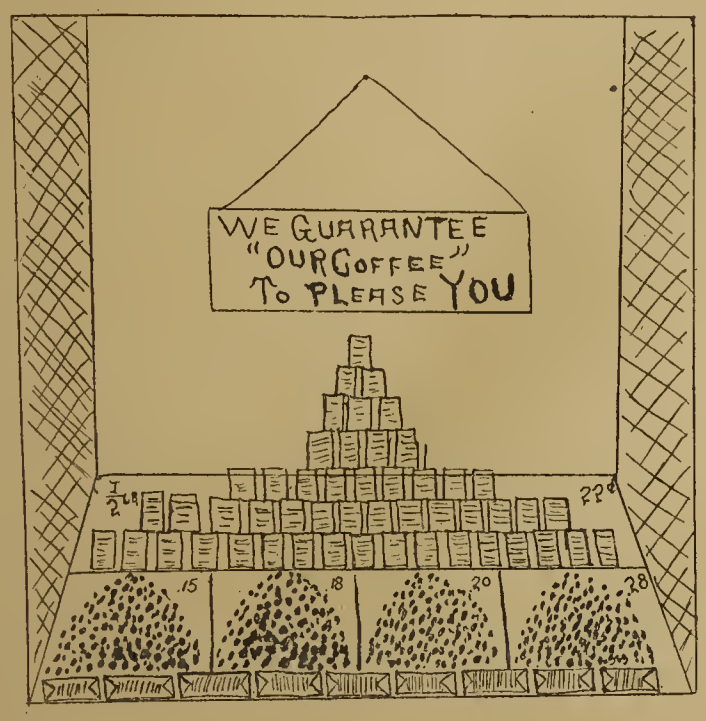
Window Dressing for Grocers

In this department from now on will appear each week suggestive articles regarding the proper use of the retail grocer's window. An endeavor will be made to deal with the subject practically, in other words, to show grocers how they can turn their windows into a money-making feature of their business. Subscribers are invited to make free use of the department by submitting both queries or suggestions.



A Cocoa and Coffee Window.

This is a very attractive display of coffee and cocoa.

Take enough packages of coffee to reach across your window by laying them lengthwise. Then right back of them divide your window into spaces large enough to hold about fifteen pounds of coffee loose. Divide each pyramid of coffee with a thin piece of glass. After you have your coffee fixed build Walter Baker's cocoa up in rear, and you will have a very nice window. If so desired you can place small price cards on coffee. By taking a small stick and tacking your card to it you can put it on top of pyramid very handy.

German Merchants Have Much More Latitude Than Ours In Combined Price-Fixing

Law Permits Organizations to Control Prices to a Certain Extent, In Order to Prevent Undue Loss Through Excessive Competition. French Limited Price Scheme.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Washington, D. C.,
Jan. 23, 1908.

According to reports recently obtained, the merchants of certain foreign countries, notably Germany, have a much wider latitude than those of this country in the way of combining among themselves to fix prices.

The trust proper is less highly developed than in America, but in nearly every branch of industry syndicates, agreements and conventions, or "Kartells," as they are termed, are controlling largely the business situation. There is nothing in German law to forbid any agreement among manufacturers or dealers in regard to prices and terms as long as it does not fall within the limits of the term "unfairness in trade" or is not "contrary to good morals."

The Supreme Court has repeatedly decided that there is nothing illegal in the organization of an industrial or trade combination when the claims have not been presented that such associations were fundamentally opposed to freedom in commerce or that they were opposed to good morals. In July, 1890, and again in February, 1897, it declared that valid objection could be made to them only when a combination sought to control a market for speculative purposes and to hinder the free play of economic forces or upon an attempt to create a monopoly and exact exorbitant prices from consumers. It recognized the full legality of combination to prevent losses in any branch through excessive competition and underbidding. It established clearly the principle that united action and agreements to affect production and control prices are not, per se, opposed to good morals. At the same time it rejected the claim that trade combinations for the control of prices, while not forbidden by law, still lack legal protection, and that such an organization has no standing in court.

In France agreements or coalitions between manufacturers or merchants of a certain merchandise for the purpose of establishing obligatory prices or prohibition of sales of goods are forbidden by the penal code. But it is permitted to sellers who do not deal in the same class or kind of merchandise to sign agreements between themselves to establish rules concerning uniformity of prices and general sales conditions. If the legal agreements are violated, the other contracting parties have the right to ask for damages, the amounts of which are established by the courts according to circumstances.

In France the Government does not interfere concerning the fixing of prices on merchandise. Commerce is entirely free, and each one may establish his prices according to his fancy, owing to the established principles of free competition. Blacklists are in principle considered as damaging procedures which lead to suits before the courts. However, it is every merchant's right to choose his customers and not to sell to those who do not suit him.

There exist in the trade in France many different methods of controlling the sale of proprietary articles, which are established by the manufacturers. One of the most notable is that of affixing a certain blue stamp, the size of a postage stamp, which is the recognized device of certain manufacturers. Those articles on which these stamps are affixed on the exterior of the package are sold to the retailer at the price which is printed on the exterior, in legible sized figures, and are retailed to the customer at the same price.

The retailer obtains direct from the manufacturer at certain given periods a percentage on the total amount of goods which he has purchased and which represents his profit on the transactions. He is usually bound by agreement not to sell such articles for less than the price marked upon them, and if he should sell them for less he may be sued in the courts for damages by the manufacturer. Although these articles are generally sold as agreed there are undoubtedly isolated cases where sales are effected at less than the marked price by dealers who wish to obtain increase in their trade in spite of the agreement. Another class of articles is sold in packages which contain a premium ticket which is detached by the retailer. The tickets represent the profit made by the retailer and may be presented for payment at any time to the manufacturer or jobber.

Pennsylvania Executive Committee Discusses Trade Evils.

Adopts Resolutions Against Parcels Post and Lays Plans For Other Reforms. Signal Prosperity of the Retailers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company. Secretary Wanted at Mauch Chunk.

Written for the "Grocery World."

Erie, Pa., January 24, 1908.

The annual meeting of the Retailers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company of Pennsylvania was held Thursday, January 9, 1908, in the rooms of the Retail Grocers' Association of Pennsylvania. There was no change made in the officers or directors. The following will serve during 1908: president, Albert Kaiser, Philadelphia; first vice-president, P. M. Malloy, Williamsport; second vice-president, C. A. Geesey, York; secretary, A. M. Howes, Erie; treasurer, Wm. H. Nelson, Chester; directors, Wm. Smedley, Philadelphia; E. J. Morris, Reading; A. S. Deeter, Reading; A. M. Latshaw, New Brighton.

At the close of the year the company had $2,346,158 insurance in force, and a premium note reserve amounting to $227,332.85. Since the company was established five years ago it has paid for losses $31,402.73. Policyholders have averaged 46 per cent. saved in comparison with board rates, or $45,783.81.

The annual statement of the secretary and treasurer will be printed and distributed among members of the company. Their accounts were audited prior to the annual meeting and found correct.

The Executive Committee for the Retail Merchants' Association of Pennsylvania met January 9th in the rooms of the Retail Grocers' Association of Philadelphia, those present being Albert Kaiser, Philadelphia, president; A. M. Howes, secretary, Erie; Wm. H. Nelson, treasurer, Chester; C. A. Geesey, York; P. M. Malloy, Williamsport; A. E. Martin, Greensburg; A. S. Deeter, Reading.

Corry, Coroapolis, Nazareth, Elizabethville and Pen Arglye were elected to membership.

A. M. Howes, Albert Kaiser and P. M. Malloy were made a committee of three to confer with the Pennsylvania Railroad regarding their opposition to the Garnishee Bill during the last Legislative session. The merchants want to know why.

The rating sheet system indorsed at the York convention has been printed, and as soon as circulars descriptive of the binders to be used are ready the project will be communicated to the membership.

Questions of extending the peddling law covering Northumberland County by legislation was referred to the local associations for an expression of their wishes.

President Albert Kaiser was appointed a committee of one to represent the Retail Merchants' Association of Pennsylvania as a member of a tax commission, if one were appointed, to investigate the State tax laws and provide necessary remedies for existing defects.

William Smedley, representing the Retail Merchants' Association of Pennsylvania, addressed the Executive Committee at length, explaining conditions which made co-operative buying necessary in Philadelphia and outlining the efforts that were being made to prevent their buying direct from the manufacturer. The fight centres on Shredded Wheat and Kellog's Toasted Corn Flake. Resolutions were unanimously adopted as stated in the "Grocery World" last week.

A. M. Latshaw, of New Brighton, addressed the committee, urging a campaign of questioning candidates for State Senate and House of Representatives, prior to the primaries, as to their stand on repeal of the mercantile tax law and enactment of a 10 per cent. garnishment law for necessaries. Request will be complied with. This is in line with resolutions adopted at York.

After considering the replies of many affiliated associations on the subject of parcels post, the Executive Committee went unanimously on record as opposed to a reduction of the general rate or an increase in the weight limit. The following resolutions are expressive of their stand on the recommendations of Postmaster-General Meyer, and also reflects the sentiment of a majority of affiliated associations who have been voting on this question:—

Whereas, We now have a National parcels post service for delivery of packages not exceeding four pounds in weight, at 16 cents per pound; therefore be it

Do It Now

KIRK FOSTER & CO. WHOLESALE GROCERS 208 N. DELAWARE AVE. AND 209 N. WATER ST. (PHILADA.)

Having made up your mind, why not act at once? We call your attention to a few items in our line that should prove good sellers at any first-class grocery store, don't wait for business, make it.

SYRUPS.—This is the best time of the year to sell Syrups and if you have a good article you will find an increasing demand. Our Gilt Edge Table Syrup is very popular, a fine cloudy syrup, price 29c.; Royal Syrup is a fancy table syrup, fine flavor and a clear light color, price 30c.; Quaker City Syrup is another grade at 29c.; we also have full line of Pure Sugar Syrups and New Orleans Molasses; now is the time to buy New Orleans Molasses. We have some fancy lots, get prices and samples before buying elsewhere.

DOXSEE'S CLAM JUICE.—This is the pure product of the Little Neck Clams. It is an excellent article for clam broth or clam buillon or makes a good soup; guaranteed to keep indefinitely in the tin and conforms to the National Food and Drugs Act; No. 1 tins, 2 dozen in a case, at 90c. a dozen.

BAKED BEANS.—Recognizing the fact that there is a growing demand for a really good quality of Baked Beans, we unhesitatingly recommend our Quaker City Brand Pork and Beans as a superior quality, No. 3 cans with tomato sauce, per dozen, 95c., or plain at 90c. a dozen. We also have a good low-priced bean to be used as a leader under the Beehive Brand, No. 3 cans, in sauce, at 72½c., plain at 70c. per dozen.

IN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS KINDLY MENTION "GROCERY WORLD"

Resolved, That we are not in favor of a reduction in rates from 16 to 12 cents per pound, as recommended by the Postmaster-General, because it is not a good business proposition to reduce rates when the Post-office Department is operating with an annual deficit.

Resolved, That we are opposed to an increase of weight limit, because we believe that the tendency is dangerous to the interests of retail merchants, and it is to the advantage of merchants to have goods sold after personal examination, rather than to fill telephone or mail orders.

Resolved, That we are not in favor of reducing rates for local parcels post, because any advantage offered by this plan to local merchants for protection from mail order and catalogue houses and manufacturers that retail, could be met by their combining smaller packages in one large package to be shipped by them by freight or express to the local distributing point, where the original packages could be broken and the smaller packages mailed local delivery in unprotected competition and to the detriment of local merchants.

Resolved, That we are in favor of the present National rate of not less than 16 cents per pound on packages not exceeding four pounds in weight for National delivery.

Resolved, That we are in favor of postal savings banks as recommended by Postmaster-General Meyer.

Resolved, That we are opposed to postal note currency, because money orders, checks and drafts now used offer sufficient convenience for remittance by mail at reasonable cost. We are opposed to any system that discourages home trading.

A. M. HOWES,
State Secretary.

Heart-to-Heart Talks With Grocery Clerks

"Mutual Aid Sheets" Which a Large Eastern Retail Grocer Tucks in Each Clerk's Weekly Pay Envelope. Some Advice From the Head of the House on Selling Goods and Other Subjects.

[The "Grocery World" has come into possession of a series of "Mutual Aid Sheets," which are weekly little talks issued regularly to its clerks by one of the large retail grocery stores of the East. The talks are typewritten and a copy is enclosed in each clerk's pay envelope. They are so soundly practical and so useful generally that it is this journal's purpose to publish them weekly or bi-weekly for the edification of other clerks as well as other grocers who have clerks.—ED.]

$5 SUGGESTION.

We are ready to adopt two or three suggestions that in our opinion will improve the order department. These must be original. We will pay $5 for each one adopted. Put the suggestion in writing and leave on the manager's desk.

THREE-HOUR SALES.

Every day next week we will have three-hour sales from 7.30 until 10.30. You notice recently how quiet things are in the morning compared to the afternoon. We want morning shoppers. We want to have the business spread out more so we can take better care of it.

Remember the cut prices close 10.30 on the dot. No deviation from this under any circumstance.

THE UPPER THOUGHT

in your mind must be selling goods. Taking orders isn't selling goods. Giving a woman what she calls for and handing her the check to pay the cashier isn't any salesmanship. Describe your best peaches. Tell how cheap your good peas are. Ask her to drink a cup of coffee. Tell her the kind it is and the price while she's drinking it. Book a fish order for Friday. Don't say these things all in one breath, of course nor to one person if she acts fidgety. But make it a point to "sell" while you're taking an order.

REMEMBER NAMES.

It's a great thing to remember the name of a customer and to call him or her by such. People like that, especially men. "Good morning, Mr. Bank," sounds friendly and makes a man feel that he isn't among strangers. It's really a drawing card and you must all endeavor to cultivate it

FRIDAY SHOPPING.

Encourage Friday shopping. Point out the importance and convenience of having the Saturday order go out on the 7 o'clock delivery. On Saturday business taxes our full capacity. Let us get some of it the day before. You can do wonders in this by presenting it intelligently.

BUCKWHEAT.

You're not selling enough prepared buckwheat. Get some packages back on the counter again with a few bottles of maple syrup. Keep it before you for a week. Push "our own" brand. Now's the time to do it.

Put tapioca back to 6 cents again. Sell five pounds of granulated sugar for 27 cents. Make Fels-Naptha soap $4.25 per box. Change Marshall's kippered herring to 15 cents. Expect a good day's business every day.

WANT DEPARTMENT

Advertisements in this department occupying fifty words or less will be inserted for subscribers free cost. Answers may be addressed to the GROCERY WORLD when desired, provided the advertisement is accompanied by 10 cents in postage to pay for remailing the same. To non-subscribers the price is 50 cents per issue.

The meat department is rented to another dealer on profitable terms, which make advertiser's rent very low. Owner has other business which takes his time. Price inventory.

No. 331.—In North Philadelphia, good neighborhood. Size of store 20x50 feet. Yearly business $30,000, balance weekly and monthly. Stock $1,500; clear net profits 10 per cent. Uses one team, hiring the horse. Good dwelling connected. Owner's wife ill and must take her to California. Price inventory. This store has been established 40 years.

No. 332.—In West Philadelphia. Size 20x30. Does $350 weekly, two-thirds cash. Stock $500 to $600. Nets 15 per cent. above everything. Dwelling connected. Team if wanted. Owner has not sufficient time owing to other business. Price inventory.

No. 333.—General store in Mifflin County, Pa. An extremely strong proposition. Size 30x100 feet. Business about $4,000 per month, 40 per cent. cash. Stock $6,000, which can be reduced considerably. Uses two teams. Business thoroughly profitable, netting about $5,000 per year. Owner in poor health and wants to retire to country place. Will make very favorable terms. Low price for fixtures. Stock at inventory, with proper allowance for everything not strictly up to the mark. The business can be very decidedly increased.

No. 334—In West Philadelphia, size 16x44. Does $375 weekly, three-fourths cash. Stock $1500 but can be reduced to $1000. Clear slightly more than 10 per cent. above everything. Dwelling connected for sale or rent. Owner going into manufacturing and will sell at inventory. Fullest investigation.

No. 336.—On best business street of West Philadelphia. Store 16x27 feet. Does $150 to $200 weekly, all cash. Stock about $700. No team delivery. Clears 20 per cent. as expenses are low. Good dwelling connected for sale or rent. Good reasons which will be fully explained. Price inventory.

No. 337.—In Germantown, on main business street. Store 30x40 feet. Does $600 weekly, half cash, balance mostly weekly. No dwelling. Stock $1,500. Uses two teams. Net profits 10 per cent. Owner going on farm, and will sell at inventory. Some of the fixtures belong to the real estate and are rented with it. Easy terms to good buyer. This store has been established for 15 years.

In all of these the cause of selling is good, and the fullest investigation courted. Every one paying.

AN UNUSUAL BUSINESS

We offer now a wonderfully profitable business in meats, poultry, butter and eggs. Located near Philadelphia. Does $1800 weekly, 65 per cent. cash. Average stock is only $1000 as it is turned very rapidly. Uses two teams. Nets clean profits of 12½ per cent. Real estate if wanted. Owner started this business thirty-three years ago and wants to retire. Does some small manufacturing, such as sausage and has fully equipped plant. Price complete, which is simply inventory, is about $7000.

927 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

ONLY STORE IN THE PLACE.

We offer the only grocery store in a high-grade Philadelphia Suburb. Under restrictions no other store can be built there. The owner has another business to which he wishes to devote his entire time, and will sell the place at inventory, asking nothing for good will, though the business is unusually valuable. Store 16x50 feet, with two storerooms, does $13,000 yearly, all gilt-edged. Stock about $2,000; uses three teams. Dwelling connected. Actual net profits 8 per cent. The business is open to the very deepest investigation. Teams and fixtures will inventory around $1000 to $1200, and the stock around $2000.

WARNER & CO.,
927 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

WILL EXCHANGE FOR TRUCK FARM

Grocery located on one of the principal streets of West Philadelphia. Size 25x72 feet. Doing $550 weekly, mostly cash. Stock about $2,000. Nets 10 per cent. Uses one team. The owner is not at home in the grocery business, and wishes to retire from it. Store is very profitable, and will stand the deepest examination. Price inventory, Owner will sell for cash or exchange for good city property or truck farm within 15 miles of Philadelphia. The store will run about $3,500; if property exchanged is worth more will pay the difference in cash.

SEASHORE GROCERY DEPARTMENT FOR SALE.

The owner of a large department store in the cleanest seashore resort on the Atlantic Coast offers his grocery department for sale; the whole place is too big for him. Does $42,500 yearly; 20 per cent. cash; 50 per cent. weekly, 20 per cent. monthly and 10 per cent. seasonable. Present stock $4,300, but this includes a lot of futures and can be reduced. Fixed charges moderate. Net profits 9 to 10 per cent. Price inventory. This is an unusual chance.

FOR RENT.

FOR RENT—Large General Store (owned by the undersigned estate) in Quarryville, Lancaster County. Pa. This Borough has a population of about 800. Is the terminus of two steam railroads, a trolley line and two new state turnpikes. It is the only town of any considerable size in the ten lower townships of Lancaster County, and commands a large proportion of their patronage. It has two banks, and does more business in a week than most towns of its size in a month. In fact, during the year of 1907, it is carefully estimated to have exceeded $800,000, not including the money paid out in the borough for tobacco which will amount to about $150,000 yearly. The borough has, besides this store, one large general store, carrying every line, and one smaller general store, one small grocery and a large hardware store. This store has enjoyed a large patronage for half a century. The location is the best in the borough, and in the midst of the town's business activity, within 200 feet of the depot of the Lancaster & Quarryville Railroad, the Lancaster, Oxford & Southern Railroad, the freight station and the terminus of the trolley line. The building is large, well-lighted, and is undergoing repairs; it has a fine cellar. It will be rented on good terms. The opportunity for an energetic man to establish a fine business in one of the best towns of its size is here afforded. A renter will not be handicapped with a stock of old goods, as the building is entirely empty and ready for immediate occupancy. For any further information address George W. Hensel's Estate, Quarryville, Lancaster Co., Pa. tf

"Figures Don't Lie"

SUPPOSE somebody paid you for all the eggs broken in your store or while being delivered. Did you ever stop to think how much money it would mean to you?

¶ Do you know that the average breakage of eggs is eight to a case of thirty dozen? Suppose you sell 100 cases a year, that's 800 broken eggs; suppose you only pay 20 cents per dozen for them, that means 66⅔ dozen or $13.35. Suppose we can show you how to save nearly every penny of this sum! Suppose we can show you how to handle eggs in half the time without breakage, would it interest you? We will do so gladly if you will write us, and the information won't cost you anything.

Give Me Some Fresh Roasted Peanuts

You know that most everybody eats peanuts, and they all want them freshly roasted, but you may not know that they pay you 300 per cent. profit when they are roasted in an

Acme Peanut Roaster

the simplest and most inexpensive automatic roaster made. There is practically no labor and no expense in operating one, any boy can do it, as there is nothing to get out of order and nothing to break. It will pay for itself in a month's time. Send for full particulars and price to

"THE BOTTOM AS GOOD AS THE TOP"

Our Apelpi Evaporated Apples are a prime grade of New York fruit, selected from the best flavored and matured apples.

The square cartons are lined with waxed paper and their contents are guaranteed to be as fine as anything in the market.

Every piece of fruit is hand picked and must be perfect before it goes into our machines.

The result is a product for which the demand is not only enormous, but constantly growing.

How to Buy This Year's Futures

The time is coming when you'll be offered future canned goods again. Why not start in on the businesslike plan this year?

If you will order Blue Bell and Clover Farm canned goods from your jobber, you will get 100 per cent. delivery, and will therefore know all the time exactly where you are.

We guarantee the jobber 100 per cent. on these brands, and he can therefore give it to you.

Don't order these brands simply because you get all you buy. Order them because no better canned goods are packed in Maryland. They are superfine throughout.

Oil From Three Lands

There's a tremendous difference in olive oils. There's French oil, Spanish oil, Italian oil, and many, many grades of each.

The finest oil in the world, bar none, is Italian oil. It has a smooth, delicious richness which no other oil has.

The finest Italian oil is La Toscana, without a doubt. Not because it is pure, because there are dozens of pure oils. Because of its mellow richness, and the incomparable ripe aroma of selected olives.

Read the Point In Large Type

Here's the proposition of James T. Shinn's Liquid Rennet in a nutshell :—

1. It is the cleanest rennet made.
2. It coagulates milk in 2 to 5 minutes.
3. It will not spoil.
4. Every bottle is guaranteed.
5. Jobbers everywhere indorse it.

And last, but not least—this is in large type because it's a large point—it pays 100 per cent. profit. Costs $1.50, sells for $3.00.

Bought Simply. Because She Liked the Glass Package

It's odd what little things make sales sometimes. A grocer told us the other day that the day before a woman had bought a jar of Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa simply because she liked the novelty of the glass package. She didn't ask any questions about the peculiar characteristics of the cocoa; she liked the glass jar and bought.

There is a point in that for grocers who study the public—the useful novelty is usually the seller.

Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa, the only cocoa packed in glass, has a smoother flavor than any other cocoa made. That is because our exclusive process of making takes out certain substances that other manufacturers leave in.

Will you mention the "Grocery World" when you write?

To Display Fruit

The T. & S. Fruit-Display Tree is by far the best thing on the market for showing of fruit and making it sell itself. Solid oak or cherry, revolving top, ball-bearing casters; stands 6 feet 4 inches high.

Dealers have told us this fixture sold 25 to 50 per cent. more bananas for them.

The Barrel Man's the Only Loser

Ninety-nine out of one hundred women would rather buy goods in packages than goods in bulk. Mainly because they think they're cleaner, and so they are.

So that when you ask your trade to pay a fraction of a cent more per pound for Franklin Carton Sugar you are simply doing something which it's their tendency to do anyway. In 99 per cent. of the cases the fraction of a cent advance will cut no figure at all.

Now, when they buy Franklin Carton Sugar look what they do for you. They save you work and they save you the loss of giving them "good measure."

Franklin Carton Sugar is a splendid thing for everybody.

Clean, sanitary cartons that preserve strength and freshness. Two-pound cartons and 2, 5, 10, 25, 50 and 100-pound cotton bags : : :

An Experiment With Peas

The grocer who can get his customers to ask after certain canned goods by brand has laid the foundation for a canned goods business that will extend much more widely than he ever thought possible.

He can easily do it by selling brands that show distinctive quality, like the Olney brand. Olney canned goods are enough different from ordinary brands to stand out vividly from the mass. New York State is famous for its canned goods—Olney goods are the very finest packed, because they are canned in the heart of the growing district.

Taste peas canned an hour after picking, in comparison with peas packed after a day's journey, and you'll know why Olney canned goods are so incomparably delicious.

ANDREW GALLAGHER, GROCER

VANDERGRIFT, PA., Aug. 23, '07.

THE BENNETT REGISTER CO., Lisbon, Ohio.

Gentlemen:—I bought one of your systems some six months ago and am more than pleased with it. I have been in business over 35 years and know your system is the greatest labor-saving system I ever saw. I do not see how I ever got along without it. I can recommend it to any person in business. Yours, ANDREW GALLAGHER.

TALISMAN Codfish in Glass Jars

All Talisman Codfish is superfine; for particular people we have some in glass jars. In these we use smaller, younger codfish than we have in the three-pound boxes—the very tenderest codfish that swims.

Contains no preservative, but pure sea salt, and hermetically sealed by a vacuum process that keeps the fish moist and keeps out foreign odors.

These goods will stand up in any weather without spoiling. Nearest Swift branch or here.

They Wouldn't Imitate It If It Wasn't So Good

The Ramly Cigarette is the finest 10c. Turkish cigarette ever made. It is so good other manufacturers try to make their goods look like the Ramly, but there the similarity ends.

If you want to get a run on cigarettes, get people to go out of their way to come to to you, put in the Ramly. Remember how it is spelled—R–A–M–L–Y.

Ham Confidence

There is a vast difference between merely "ham" and Swift's PREMIUM Ham.

The grocer who just keeps "ham," who buys no special brand, and buys from no particular packer, is just as certain to have a small and irregular ham trade as night is certain to follow day.

But the grocer who sells only Swift's PREMIUM ham, which is always the same and always fine, will have a ham trade that amounts to something. His trade won't care to experiment with other grocers; they're getting what they want and they're getting it all the time.

PREMIUM Hams are tender, delicious and—this is important—well advertised.

U. S. GOVERNMENT INSPECTION OF ALL OUR GOODS

Be Proud of Your Olive Oil

You may remember the recent tests which the United States Government made into all brands of imported olive oil.

Those tests (Government Bulletin 77, page 55) proved Nicelle Olive Oil to be superior to all the other brands tested. Nicelle Oil is made and bottled in Nice, France. It is the highest type of pure olive oil producible.

Sell olive oil you can be proud of. There are so many brands you can't.

THE ONLY WAY WE HAD A CHANCE

We have been endeavoring, through trade paper advertising, to induce you to ask for Murdoch's Laundry and Corn Starch. Many of you have done so, and are selling them regularly to-day.

We hazard the opinion that every grocer who is, is well satisfied that they are the cleanest and the best starches on the market.

They have to be the best, for that is absolutely the only ground on which they could sell. With the market dominated by one concern, what chance would an independent starch have unless it was better than its competitors?

So that there are two reasons why you ought to sell these starches. First—they are independent, Second—they are the best.

Oswego Maize Products Company, Oswego, New York

Eat a Couple Yourself

Why not consider Hoffman House Pickles as a popular priced pickle leader?

They are unusual in several respects. First, they are packed in tin, and second, they are cured by an entirely new method, which removes the acid bite but leaves all the spice.

These little pickles have sold wonderfully well everywhere they have gone. Eat a couple yourself and your enthusiasm will rise at once.

WALKER STORE FIXTURES
—Attract Good Trade—

There is so much to be said to the merchant about to buy new fixtures that we prefer to send our catalogue, which will set him wise on many points that he should know. Our designs and our workmanship are unsurpassed. Our customers write that they are more than pleased with the appearance of their stores.

WE KNOW HOW TO DESIGN ARTISTIC INTERIORS

We are ready at all times to offer suggestions covering any detail. And our catalogue is sufficiently explicit to make it both interesting and instructive. Send for it.

Don't Buy a Cheap Wagon

If you do, you'll remember this advice. A cheap wagon looks nearly as well in the factory as our "J. M.," but oh, what a difference in six months!

The "J. M." wagon is the best delivery wagon made. Only the finest materials go into it, and they're put together right, too.

If we haven't what you want, though we probably have, we'll build it for you.

If 1000 Retailers in Philadelphia Recommended Us, Would YOU Believe in Us?

One of the hardest propositions which confront the retailer is to turn their bad debts into cash. Lots of them have tried different collection agencies, paid retaining or subscription fees and got no results; so it is hard to convince them that any one can help to bring the beats to book.

We show you how to collect your own accounts; nobody handles your money but you. We can give you the names of a thousand merchants in Philadelphia whom we have shown how to get money due them which had been charged off long before they heard of us.

It costs you nothing to find out what our plan is—can you afford not to?

Does the Department Store Take Some of Your Trade?

Do you know why you lose trade to the Department Stores? It's because when these stores are closed at night the windows are lighted and the light shows bargains in groceries. These offerings attract passers and the next day they come in and buy.

You can do the same thing—make your store advertise you while it is closed—light it well, show something in your windows that will attract attention and many of those who see it will come in the next day. One new customer will pay the cost for a week. Write us and we'll show you how to do it.

Less Work and More Money in 1908

If you could do less work and make more money in 1908 than you did in 1907, you'd consider you were having a Happy New Year, wouldn't you?

Very well, sell Franklin Carton Sugar instead of sugar in bulk, and you'll get exactly that result.

Less work by far than you ever had before in selling sugar, and more profit, because none of it will be stolen by "good measure." We do the weighing of Franklin Carton Sugar and your customers get what they pay for and no more.

Suppose you could introduce such a revolution in all your departments?

The Aroma Stays Where It's Put

Every 25-cent coffee is a competitor for our Moco=Mo, and we consequently look up 25-cent coffees whenever we find them. We want to keep posted.

There has never been one that could hold a candle to Moco=Mo. For several reasons it is the best 25-cent proposition on the market by far.

Its quality first. It is a strong, smooth, full-blooded blend that goes straight to the spot.

Second, its unique package. Packed hot in a sealed bag, then the bag in a sealed carton. The aroma simply can't escape until the consumer opens it up. Good talking point, eh?

It's a Hard Job, but We've Done It

You know how hard it is to please all your customers with coffee. It is natural for you to find it harder than we do, because you have a lot of things to do and we do nothing else. Private Estate Coffee is the result of many years' experimenting to please the popular taste, and it does it so well that we don't know of a grocer who has induced a customer to try it who isn't still using it. This is one important reason for your making a leader of it, and another is that we share our profits with you by giving you Universal Coupons with every case.

Further Developments in the Local Conflict

State Now Taking a Hand. Heavy Calls from Retailers for Names of Members of the Wholesale Grocers' Association. Trade Withdrawn in Some Cases. Fight Breeds Sharp Competition Among Cereal Concerns. Retailers' Association Draws New Strength from Controversy.

The local conflict over the cutting off of the retail buying exchanges by the Toasted Corn Flakes Co. and the Natural Food Co. has reached the daily papers. Several of the latter have published more or less garbled accounts of the affair during the week, some of them falsely crediting Secretary Smedley, of the association, with attacking the chain stores at a largely attended meeting of the organization. Naturally nothing of the kind occurred, since the chain stores and the association have worked together since the fight opened.

No other manufacturer has made any move to cut off either the Retail Grocers' Association or the chain stores, and so far as can be learned, no other has any intention of doing so, so swift and heavy have the retailers' reprisals been against the two manufacturers who did attempt it.

The action of the two cereal concerns that cut off the retailers has greatly increased competition among the breakfast food concerns. As soon as the Toasted Corn Flake Co. cut off the association and the chain stores, E. C. Corn Flakes were at once adopted as a substitute, and the sale of that brand has in consequence been very largely increased. During the week H. P. Davies, general manager of the Malta-Vita Pure Food Co. of Battle Creek, Mich., visited Philadelphia in the interest of his concern's new corn flake. This also means greater inroads into the business of the Toasted Corn Flake Co.

There is also a substitute for Shredded Wheat Biscuit about to be introduced, which if it is a worthy substitute will weaken the Natural Food Co's position. Up to this time the concern has had practically a monopoly of the wheat biscuit business.

It has developed during the week that a retailers' co-operative buying organization of Jersey City, N. J., was also crossed off the jobbing list by one of the cereal companies above named. Believing its legal rights infringed, the New Jersey organization at once complained to Attorney-General Bonaparte, who has promised to look into the matter. There is absolutely no hope of relief there, however, as every dealer has a fundamental right to sell whom he likes.

The grocery interests of the State are beginning to take a decided interest in the fight. A list of the jobbers who belong to the Wholesale Grocers' Association has been placed in the hands of Secretary Howes, of the State Retail Merchants' Association, and notices sent to all members that they can have the list if desired. The calls for it are reported to have been very heavy. In some cases known to the writer up-the-State retailers have transferred their trade from jobbers who have supplied them for years to others not affiliated with the association.

During the week several other protests have been heard from members of the two jobbing organizations who though they did not sanction their attitude and do not sympathize with it now, are still being compelled to suffer for it.

There is one thing very plain—that whether the Retail Grocers' Association wins the fight or loses it, the controversy has greatly increased the importance and prosperity of the organization. Its meetings are attended each week by a great throng that overflows the room, it has received a perfectly unprecedented number of applications for membership, and its business has shown an increase of several thousand dollars per week. In addition to that, it is continuing to receive offers of support and aid from manufacturers all over the country, and in some cases concerns that have always refused to sell it, and who were not asked to sell it now, have come in voluntarily and offered goods.

From other sections comes the strongly backed rumor during the week that the Washburn-Crosby Co., of Minneapolis, Minn., had about decided to cut the jobber out entirely and sell the retail trade direct and alone.

The Kirkman soap people are also going direct to the retailer.

Dire Prospects for Brazil Coffee Corner.

Deputy American Consul Analyzes Situation and Shows that the Tremendous Surplus the Syndicate has Bought and Put Away May Break Through and Cause Great Disaster.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Washington, D. C.,
Jan. 30, 1908.

Deputy Consul-General Joseph J. Slechta has written to the State Department from Rio de Janeiro that the effect of the Brazilian Government's attempt to corner the supply of Rio and Santos coffee in order to get a better price has produced a most remarkable and abnormal condition. His statement is so important that I reproduce the salient part of it:—

> The fact is that the price ruling during the first week in last December is the lowest of the past decade and the amount of new coffee entries must be viewed in the light of this feature of the market. Only once in recent years has the price slumped to to the point now reached and then only on two or three transactions at the time of a crisis in some juggling with the market. Every planter is hoping against hope that every crop except his own will be a small one, in order that the efforts of the "convenio" or syndicate may not have been in vain.
> It has been commonly supposed by everyone but the old buyers, and even by some of them, that the large purchases made by the syndicate during the time of the heavy entries last season kept the price at a higher point than could otherwise have been possible. Developments of the last month do not bear out this view of the situation. Some of the wise ones who held the workings of the syndicate in considerable awe are now weakening to the extent of acknowledging that the present quotations are indisputably lower than they could possibly have been had supply and demand been allowed to take their own course in the disposition of the 20,000,000 bag crop of Brazil. There is now every reason to believe that the price for the past six months would have been higher with a perfectly free market.
> With 8,000,000 bags of medium-grade coffee held over the heads of the dealers, and with decidedly uncertain elements entering into the calculations as to just how much coffee is ready to drop into the market from the plantations, the situation furnishes a basis for predictions on the part of the wisest no more certain than that another six months will bring about a situation no less anamalous than the present one and perhaps a great deal more precarious. Without relying at all upon the accuracy of even the best estimates and taking the lowest figures that conservative statisticians have dared to place on this year's crop, it can be readily seen that except for some unforeseen circumstances the gravity of the present crisis has nothing of a temporary character.
> Assuming that production for the rest of the world increases almost not at all, the average may be placed with safety at 17,000,000 bags for the world's production. It will be seen, therefore, that with the consumption of the world increasing about 500,000 bags yearly, not less than four years would be required to overtake production and wipe out the surplus of nearly 8,000,000 bags. That is to say, the world at its present rate of increase in the consumption of coffee will under the most unfavorable circumstances conceivable remain for the next four years absolutely independent of the holdings of the syndicate.
> With the added stimulus given to the planting of coffee in other countries by the continued withholding from the market of the syndicate purchases, four years will begin to bring in results which may prove exceedingly dangerous to Brazil. In much less time than this the coffee held will have begun to deteriorate and the syndicate will have come to a most disastrous end with the further result of having for five years caused havoc in the operations of the laws of supply and demand as affecting coffee.
> Lest it be said that there is no justification for the assumption that the average size of the crop during the next five or six years will not fall below 13,000,000 bags it is well to call attention to the general situation in coffee planting. The government of the State of Sao Paulo has placed very heavy taxes on the extension of coffee plantations and it is frequently said that this will curtail the size of future crops. The effect is almost certain to prove otherwise. Since the planter cannot extend his plantation, he is beginning to intensify cultivation, watch his trees more carefully and replace them at just the right time to secure the maximum results from a given area. Experts whose opinions are not affected by any personal interest whatever, are firm in the conviction that with favorable conditions Brazil may within the next six years produce one or even two crops as great as or greater than the enormous crop of last year.
> The situation is a unique one in many ways. With a "corner" of a quantity of nearly half the world's yearly consumption, probably no other of the world's great food commodities would be offered on the markets at a price lower than the normal, except for a very brief period. Certainly with any other of the great articles of commerce the ill effects of overproduction would be corrected by a corresponding drop in the price much more quickly than in the case of coffee. Perhaps even now it would be an actual saving of money to the backers of the coffee syndicate, certainly to the planters and to everyone but the consumer, if this immense store of coffee were burned or thrown into the sea.

Alaska Salmon Combine's Good Year.

Henry F. Fortmann, president of the Alaska Packers' Association, made his report to stockholders for the season 1907 during the week. In part it states as follows: "The salmon markets of the world have been in a most satisfactory condition and although the cost of production of canned salmon has materially increased, the prices obtained during 1907 were such that the business has earned a substantial profit. In spite of the disturbance in financial conditions, the prices of canned salmon have been maintained and a good consumptive demand is reported from all markets." The gross profits for the year were $831,421, and net $609,646. The association packed 1,100,035 cases in 1907, as against 1,044,696 in 1906. The largest pack of Alaskan salmon on record was in 1903, when the production was 1,334,824 cases.

Heart-to-Heart Talks With Grocery Clerks

"Mutual Aid Sheets" Which a Large Eastern Retail Grocer Tucks in Each Clerk's Weekly Pay Envelope. Some Advice From the Head of the House on Selling Goods and Other Subjects.

[The "Grocery World" has come into possession of a series of "Mutual Aid Sheets," which are weekly little talks issued regularly to its clerks by one of the large retail grocery stores of the East. The talks are typewritten and a copy is enclosed in each clerk's pay envelope. They are so soundly practical and so useful generally that it is this journal's purpose to publish them weekly or bi-weekly for the edification of other clerks as well as other grocers who have clerks.—ED.]

YOUR CONVERSATION.

Let your conversation be business in business hours. Levity is very unbecoming in a store. Talking about the play or about the game or the election is decidedly out of place.

We're banded together to increase the business; our thoughts must be centred on it. Our interchange of ideas must be those that make for efficiency.

COMMISSIONS.

Commissions will be as follows the forthcoming week:—

½ cent a pound on all coffees.

5 cents a pound on all teas from 50 cents up.

3 cents a pound on all 37-cent tea.

½ cent a can on O-O ½s cocoa.

½ cent a can on O-O 12-cent peas.

1 cent on every six cakes O-O soap, 25 cents.

COFFEE CANVAS.

For two weeks we want you to find out from every one that leaves an order whether they use our coffee. Make no comments one way or another. We want names and addresses of those who do not. Don't make any serious business (to them) of it. Just find out in an off-hand way. Leave the names at the office every evening at quitting time.

MACARONI TIME.

Macaroni soup; macaroni and tomato sauce; macaroni and cheese; macaroni pudding. We're right in the macaroni season. Talk it. Tell how fresh and clean ours is. As good as the imported—no question about this. Cleaner, fresher, 50 per cent. Cheaper, 10 cents a package.

SELL JELLIES.

Plenty of women ready to buy jelly by the pound that wouldn't look at a glass. It's the poor man's butter; especially where there's a crowd of young ones. Move some of these 5-pound stone pots of Johnston's preserves. First thing you know fresh fruit will be here, and the preserves, too. We have forty crates in the cellar.

YOUR POWER

is wonderful. There is hardly any achievement that is out of our reach. Guard well your thoughts. Concentrate on the thing you aspire to. Prepare for success. Fit yourself every hour in the day to go higher up by doing the thing at your hand better than it was ever before done.

CEYLON TEA

A Famous Name for a Worthy Tea.

In State House Ceylon Tea we have set a mark for the hosts of other package teas to reach up to some day.

We have adopted a name that should be easily remembered and make our product, with its exceptional quality, as much of a household word as the trade mark.

State House Ceylon Tea is intended to retail at 50, 60 and 80 cents a pound, in 1, ½, ¼ and 10-cent sizes. Trial counter cases of 10 pounds.

Bright Food Show Prospects. Department Store Grocery Departments Deeply Cutting Prices. Foreign Rice Not Allowed to Enter Country Because Coated with Talc and Glucose. The Kirkman and Washburn-Crosby Attitude. Small News of the New York Trade.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

New York, Jan. 31, 1908.

Meetings are held almost daily by the committee which is preparing the way for the Pure Food Exposition of the New York Retail Grocers' Union, to open March 26th. Manager L. J. Callanan is especially gratified because in the last week he has received word from several firms who have never exhibited before under the society's auspices that they will do so this time. Park & Tilford, who have never before taken part in a food show, have reserved space, as have the Acker, Merrall & Condit Co., so that the two firms known for chains of high grade retail stores as well as for their wholesale business will both be represented. The list of firms and companies that are exclusively manufacturers and which will have space will be larger than at any prior exhibit in this city.

It is observed that in the cut-rate announcements of some department stores the grocery features are being emphasized quite strongly of late, and it is said that this is the result of a little overstocking here and there, the heavy stocks not being so desirable as cash in the view of the owners of the stores. This is the season of sales in all lines, but some who have been watching the advertisements say that the grocery "drives" of department stores are more pronounced than usual. "This is the year," remarked a retailer, "when the cut-rate dealers who try to undersell by making heavy purchases at the opening of the season see a little of the reverse side of the picture. The speculative dealer sometimes learns that there is such a thing as carrying a game too far, but the grocers who have bought carefully are not complaining. The regular trade has been of fair proportions since the turn in the year and some are busier than usual."

Reports have it that the present business conditions have cut down about 25 to 30 per cent. the consumption of cigars and cigarettes and that the American Tobacco Co. has curtailed production to that extent. It is further said that the company is making concessions in prices of 10 to 20 per cent. on popular brands.

At the company's offices, although nobody in authority would make any statement for publication, the reports were to some extent substantiated. Some changes of the kind indicated have occurred, although the percentage may not be quite accurate. Several independent manufacturers freely say that they have made material reductions in prices, partly because the domestic leaf tobacco costs less than it did a few weeks ago. Some predict that Havana leaf will also be cheaper.

The Government's Food Bureau has sent back to the consignors in the last week some shipments of two quite different kinds of articles and for quite different reasons. Champagne was sent back to Bordeaux because the bottles were labeled quarts, and really did not contain a full quart of wine in each. Rice was returned because it was coated with talc and glucose and the label mentioned only the glucose as the material in the coating. In these cases the importers desired to amend the labels in this city by adding slips instead of reshipping, but the authorities refused to consent to this.

One of the subjects of discussion among the jobbers this week was a reported intention of the Washburn-Crosby Co. to make a change in selling methods so as to deal more commonly with retailers. Jobbers are said to have caused some irritation on the part of the company because they have been trying to substitute other brands of flour when Gold Medal was desired.

The conditions are compared with those which led to similar action on the part of the manufacturers of Kirkman's soaps. In both instances the manufacturers will be cut off the lists of some of the jobbing houses, it is said, the jobbers claiming that the margins of profit on the articles are so small that the business is not important to them. However, the manufacturers are not complaining of the results of selling direct to the retailers, and the changes will give satisfaction to the greatest number.

The veiled threats to cut firms off the list and the actual cutting off the lists of jobbers do not indicate indifference, it is pointed out. On the contrary, this is the weapon of the jobbers to compel the manufacturers to sell through the middlemen alone.

Railroad companies have a plan in view to reduce the number of deliveries by lighters at the minimum rate to one for each carload. Until now the shipper could divide his carload into as many as five lots, to be delivered at as many piers or to as many boats in the harbor from the lighter. If the new plan goes through extra charges will be made for each additional stop made by the lighter for the purpose of delivering a part of a carload.

Brooklyn was gay Tuesday evening when the Retail Grocers' Association of that borough gave its annual ball. The festivities were elaborate as usual and only those who have attended similar affairs of this society can have an idea of the all-around sociability and genuine spirit of enjoyment that prevailed.

A movement is being started among the trade organizations in Brooklyn in which the grocers will take an active part. It is to get better and cheaper vegetables and fruit for the borough. The disadvantage is in the repeated handling of all Western products which after arriving at the Jersey City terminals are lightered to Brooklyn and then distributed. The aim of the movement is to expedite the lightering and distribution which lag, it is declared, so that the cost is increased and the edible qualities often depreciated by the time the food reaches the consumer. Old residents say that there was a time when Long Island itself could provide a large part of what Brooklyn needed in the way of farm products, but that time has passed and the Long Island contributions to the city's fruit and vegetable supplies are now only a drop in the bucket because of the enormous growth of the city. Of course nearly everything not grown on the island must be sent to the borough by way of Jersey City.

First Food Law Test Case.

Arguments on a demurrer to the information filed against Robert N. Harper, alleging violation of the Food and Drug law, were held last week before Judge Kimball in the United States Branch of the Police Court, Washington, D. C. The information is attacked on the ground of the constitutionality and validity of the act under which it was issued. The prosecution is represented by United States Attorney Baker and Assistant United States Attorney Proctor. This suit is the one which was filed some ten days ago against Robert N. Harper for the manufacture of the so-called "Cufohedake Brane Fude," which the Bureau of Chemistry found to be in violation of the Food and Drugs act owing to its being misbranded and, at the same time, containing dangerous drugs The case is regarded as of peculiar importance as the first test case under the Food and Drugs act, involving a significant phase of the labeling provisions of the law. It will call forth a judicial decision on the question, whether the terms of the law authorize the Department of Agriculture to pass upon the extent which certain remedies or drugs really operate as a "cure" for the diseases which they are represented to remedy.

WE CAN GET YOU ORDERS

We knew when the repeat orders came in from the hotels for Hotel Astor Coffee that we had a blend that would succeed anywhere under all conditions.

Because if a coffee can succeed with the high-grade New York hotels it can succeed anywhere.

We make and sell many brands of coffee, but we're a bit fonder of Hotel Astor than any other. It is truly a delicious blend and there isn't one chance out of a hundred that it won't make the same hit with your trade that it has everywhere else.

We have a special plan getting you orders for Hotel Astor Coffee—may we tell it to you?

Not Ignorance but Guile.

The "National Tribune," of Washington, D. C., takes its place in the gallery of immortal ignoramuses this week through some remarks which it makes upon Pennsylvania scrapple. The subject was an article on "The Story of a Mail-Order Scrapple Business" which recently appeared in the "Grocery World." The "National Tribune," possibly in spite over the fact that one of the best things on earth it seems to have missed, sourly muses as follows:—

> The older States in this country have all their favorite dishes, the merits of which have been described and sung by their writers. New England has her unequaled pies and samp, with Vermont her maple syrup and buckwheat cakes. New York has her exceedingly palatable sausages and apple butter, which are a delight to the soul; Maryland has terrapin; Virginia her justly celebrated corn pone, beaten biscuit and chicken fixings; Louisiana her gumbo fillet; but who ever heard of Pennsylvania scrapple? In spite of this lack of celebrity in story and poem, the Pennsylvanians seem far more atttached to it than any of the rest are to the viands of which we hear so much. Every Pennsylvanian's eye has a brighter gleam when you speak of scrapple, and he seems to rejoice that you even know the word. Yet what is it? The matter is brought to public attention by the advertisements in the magazines of a man who offers to send scrapple to any part of the country east of Denver for $1 for a trial order. So dear to the memory of every Pennsylvanian is this toothsome dish that the man has built up an immense business, and his books on scrapple and advertisements are gustatory poems.

All that the world outside of Pennsylvania knows about it leaks out accidentally from his advertisements, in which he asserts that his product is "made of the choicest meat and the purest Indian meal and buckwheat flour." He says truly that seven-eighths of the inhabitants of the United States never tasted scrapple, in spite of his earnest endeavors to extend his business. Yet those who have once tasted it never forget it, and "high and low, rich and poor, all consider scrapple an indispensable adjunct to the daily menu."

He entitles his book "A Message of Chester County Cheer," and the price-list offers it at 20 cents a pound. He gives lists of customers all over the world, officers in the Army in Cuba, and the Philippines and residents in every considerable town and city in the country. All his testimonials are to the effect that the writers contracted the scrapple habit in their youth, and have never been able to break themselves of it, nor, indeed, have tried to do so. No matter where they have traveled and what foods have been set before them, their minds turn as involuntarily and as strongly to the strictly Pennsylvania food of their childhood as Samuel Wordworth's did to—

> "The old oaken bucket,
> The iron-bound bucket,
> The moss-covered bucket
> Which hung in the well."

All the same, as the advertiser says, seven out of eight of us are absolutely ignorant of this wonderful delicatessen, as the Germans would call it, and would like to have some one give us full information as to it.

There would perhaps be some excuse for an Alaskan being ignorant of Pennsylvania scrapple, but for a resident of the District of Columbia! Really, it is almost incredible! The "Grocery World," after due consideration, cannot bring itself to believe that the "National Tribune" writer really knows nothing of Pennsylvania scrapple. What he is probably endeavoring to do is to egg on some credulous Pennsylvanian into sending him a pound.

Splitting Hairs.

Sooner or later the courts will have to draw the line between statements which constitute only the usual roseate claims which every seller of merchandise has always been permitted by law to make for his goods, and actual misstatements involving a violation of law. This subject has been discussed before; in the present enforcement of food laws it is coming very prominently to the front.

In this issue the "Grocery World's" Washington correspondent tells of a hearing in a flour case held during the week. A whole car of flour had been confiscated in Ohio and prosecutions begun or threatened against the manufacturer. The charge was that the flour was sold as a spring wheat flour, while it really contained 15 per cent. of grain not spring wheat! Details are not at hand, but it is understood that the 15 per cent. was winter wheat.

Now, admittedly a miller who puts 15 per cent. of winter wheat in his flour tells an untruth and makes a false representation when he sends that flour out as a spring wheat flour. But where the public interest is not sacrificed it is legal to exaggerate so far for one's goods that it amounts practically to a harmless falsehood, and any attempt to rule otherwise would be to make a revolution. Is the public interest sacrificed in the flour case? Surely not, when not one consumer out of a thousand knows the difference between spring wheat and winter wheat, and never buys flour from that standpoint. No, there was a falsehood, but it did no practical harm, it injured no one's welfare. The flour was healthy, wholesome, pure. There was no claim that the use of 15 per cent. of other wheat made it any poorer. As a matter of fact even if it had made it better, the technical offense would still be made out.

If such offenses are real violations of law, every dealer of food in the United States is probably guilty. The "Grocery World" is not defending falsehood under any circumstances, but it has been legal so long to tell certain kinds of falsehoods that it is too late to stop.

The Breakfast Food Campaign.

From all appearances, the campaign of the Pennsylvania Dairy and Food Department against various breakfast foods on the charge of misbranding will give the public but slight benefit. The charge in all was the making upon the label of nutritive claims which an analysis of the food did not substantiate. It was fine spun and technical, and while having an undoubted foundation of truth, it still, in most of the cases brought, scarcely warranted penal prosecution.

Take one case for illustration. Upon the label of the brand in question the statement was made that the starch in the grain was made soluble, thus making the food particularly valuable to dyspeptics, and that the food was rich in nitrogen, thus making it a particularly good muscle builder.

A Suggestion—What's Thought of It?

HAGERSTOWN, MD., January 27, 1908.

THE GROCERY WORLD PUB. CO.,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Dear Sirs:—Several days ago I renewed my subscription to the "Grocery World." I had intended to discontinue, being too busy and neglecting reading it. But owing to the good service it had rendered me in past years, I had not the heart to do so. Therefore, after renewing, I decided I must read it, time or no time. It was then I discovered what I had been missing. You should have seen me going over back numbers. I tell you, my fellow-grocermen, you can not afford to do without the "Grocery World," any more than you can do without a bank account.

Whilst the paper is better than it used to be and has broadened and branched out, yet there should be a department added entitled the "Forum," or the "Grocer's Opinion of Public or National Questions." For example, I would like to know whether it is wiser or better to permit the Trusts or Capitalists to pursue their former methods, making lots of money, employing thousands of workmen, paying an increase of wages, facilitating development of all the resources of our great country, maintaining financial stability; or, on the other hand, to agitate, persecute, prosecute, malign, investigate, threaten Capital, thus keeping everything in turmoil, uncertainty, continuing the present chaotic state of our country?

Mr. Editor, what do you think of it?

Very truly yours for light and truth,

ERNEST W. MILLER.

After analysis of this cereal the department charged that the starch was not all made soluble, and that while nitrogen was present, it was not richly present. Now, if these charges are true, there is sufficient liability present to ground an action, and yet let us examine the equities of the matter. Let us admit for the argument's sake that both of the manufacturer's claims are unfounded—that the starch in this product is not made soluble, and that it is not rich in nitrogen. If these claims are untrue they admittedly should not have been made, but has anybody been deceived by them? In this case, as in most cases, the nutritive claims were printed in minute type in an inconspicuous place. It is almost certain that not one buyer of the cereal out of the thousands who use it ever saw the claims or would have bought the brand on the strength of them if he had seen them. The public has grown callous as to manufacturers' claims of virtue, and only where the medicinal element comes strongly into the case are they still influenced. Products like Postum Cereal and Grape-Nuts, for instance, both semi-medicinal, should unquestionably be held much more closely to the strict letter of their claims than an ordinary breakfast food, which in almost every case is bought and used on flavor only.

A Song that is Inapropos.

Secretary John A. Green, of the National Retail Grocers' Association, sings a happy song of satisfaction in his correspondence this week over the fact, as he expresses it, that "It is very satisfactory to note, at the present time, the conditions existing between the retailers and wholesalers of the United States."

Secretary Green chants a beautiful word picture of the wholesaler and the retailer lying down in peace together. "True," he says, indifferently, "buying exchanges have sprung up in different parts of the country." He adds that in most instances this has been brought about by a spirit of unfairness by both, but very often by the wholesaler disregarding the rights of the retailer.

The opinion of the National Secretary is scarcely convincing to those familiar with the fact that the Wholesale Grocers' Association of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware, abetted by the National Wholesale Grocers' Association, is at present engaged in the most cold-bloodedly selfish attack upon the interests of organized retailers ever conceived in this country. The jobbers have set out to enforce the principle that no retailer or set of retailers can buy of a manufacturer, but must in every case pay the second middleman's profit, even though that middleman's normal purchasing power is one-tenth that of the retailer or set of retailers. In other words, the retailer must for all time be saddled with the jobber's keep, not because in many cases the jobber is of any use, but because his name being "jobber" he should monopolize the right to buy of the manufacturer!

Secretary Green also says that the jobber has recognized the retailer's exclusive right to the retail field and has nobly withdrawn therefrom. Read the following from a letter sent the "Grocery World" during the week by a large retailer of Atlanta, Ga.:—

> You are, no doubt, more or less familiar with the conditions existing in the South, and know that for at least the past few years a very earnest effort has been made to have the retailers and wholesalers work in harmony, to have the wholesaler desist from his policy of selling direct to the consumer at the same price that he supplies the retailer, and also to have the wholesaler supply the retailer at the same price that he sells the cut-price chain stores or department houses. The efforts made to accomplish these results have been anything but satisfactory, although a large number of the jobbers have made an earnest effort to make the plan mutually beneficial. I am inclined to believe that these parties have now come to the parting of the roads, and that quite a number of the leading retail grocers of Atlanta will join together in buying their supplies direct.

All of which would seem to show that Mr. Green's little song is out of tune.

AMONG THE TRADE.

Messrs. V. L. Cavanna & Co., raisin seeders, have received notice from the United States Consolidated Raisin Seeders' Co., of California, claiming that the Philadelphia house is infringing upon a patented raisin seeding machine.

Florida grapefruit is still in active demand at $3 to $6 per crate.

The Court's Opinion on the Michigan Sausage Case

Does Not Decide Flatly Against Cereals in Sausage, but Strongly Intimates That that Will be Its Decision. Partial Text of the Decision.

The "Grocery World" has obtained a copy of the court's decision in the Michigan sausage case, which was at first reported to be a flat ruling that cereals could not be used in the manufacture of sausage. A careful reading of the decision shows that the court did not definitely decide against cereals in sausage, but intimated so strongly that that was its attitude that the decision can almost be regarded as made. For instance, the court says: "My opinion is that the incorporation of cereals with meat with a designation of the product so manufactured as sausage would be a clear violation of these provisions." The case is important because it is a judicial construction of language which is embodied verbatim in the Pennsylvania State law, the Federal law, and the food law of almost all other States.

From the copy in its possession, the "Grocery World" reproduces the following portion of the opinion:—

The real controversy between the parties to this case arises over the construction of certain provisions of the so-called "Pure Food Law" of this State. The claim of the Dairy and Food Commissioner of this State is that the use of cereals in the preparation and manufacture of sausages is a violation of that law. Proceeding upon that determination he has notified dealers in meat products in this State that they must not sell sausages containing cereals and that if they do so they will render themselves liable to criminal prosecution. It appears also that criminal proceedings for such alleged violation of the law have been instituted by direction of the Food Commissioner, and that persons have been convicted as a result thereof.

It is admitted by complainants that they manufacture and sell sausages in this State, which contain from one to ten per cent. of cereals but it is contended by them that this is not in violation of the "Pure Food Law."

The Commissioner bases his contention upon certain provisions in the amended act of 1895, section three (3) providing that an article shall be deemed to be adulterated when,

First—If any substance shall have been mixed with it so as to lower or depreciate or injuriously affect the quality, strength or purity.

Second—If any inferior or cheaper substance or substances have been substituted wholly or in part for it.

My opinion is that the incorporation of cereals with meat with a designation of the product so manufactured as sausage would be a clear violation of these provisions. It is practically conceded that a cereal is an inferior or cheaper substance than the meat which forms the basis of sausage.

The complainants, however, contend that these provisions are inoperative so far as sausages are concerned, and that sausages are embraced and protected by a proviso attached to the section referred to.

This proviso reads as follows: "That the provisions of this act shall not apply to mixtures or compounds recognized as ordinary articles or ingredients of articles of food, if each and every package sold or offered for sale bear the name and address of the manufacturer and be distinctly labeled under its own distinctive name, and in a manner so as to plainly and correctly show that it is a mixture or compound, and is not in violation with definition fourth and seventh of this section."

The complainants contend that sausage is a "mixture or compound recognized as an ordinary article of food," and therefore the pure food law does not apply to the manufacture and sale of sausages.

The Bill of Complaint alleges that the complainant manufactures and sells at least fifty different kinds of sausages and that they contain from one to ten per cent. of cereals. The main question, therefore, for consideration is whether these sausages containing from one to ten per cent. of cereals are a mixture or a compound recognized as an ordinary article of food within the meaning and intent of the legislative act.

No authorities are cited upon this proposition and I have been unable to find any. The question I regard as somewhat perplexing in the absence of any evidence or authorities upon the point. Standard dictionaries define sausage as an article of food, consisting of meat, especially pork, finely chopped and highly seasoned. I have examined two and they practically agree in meaning although they may differ somewhat in phraseology. Undoubtedly this was formerly the commonly accepted meaning of the word "sausage."

So manufactured, sausage has been a very favorite food with many people and the material addition of foreign substances, cereal or otherwise, would tend largely to destroy those very features which made it agreeable to public taste.

If the definition of the dictionaries and that formerly assigned by the common understanding of the people be given to the word, any material addition of cereals in the manufacture of sausage would destroy its distinctive character as a meat product. The word in this sense does not mean a compound of various meat and vegetable products, but one which consists practically in whole of meat with sufficient spices or foreign ingredients to flavor it.

It is claimed, however, by complainants that the word "sausage" does not mean what it meant twenty years ago: that the meaning of the word has undergone a change; that the use of cereals in the manufacture of sausages has been in vogue for many years: that this usage existed at the time of the passage of the pure food law and that such fact must have been in the contemplation of the legislative mind when the law was enacted.

I do not think that I can assume from anything that appears before me that these facts are true. They have an important bearing on the case if proved, but they must be established by proof.

My present opinion is that cereals may so far be incorporated with meat in the manufacture of sausage as to destroy its distinctive character as sausage and thereby lower, depreciate and injuriously affect its quality, strength and purity. I shall not decide at present that no cereals can be lawfully added to meat in the manufacture of sausage.

I shall assume for the purpose of the present motion that cereals may be lawfully added to meat in the manufacture of sausage. That proposition must be subject to the condition already named, that cereals may be so far used as to constitute a violation of the law.

National President Counsels Retailers to Get Busy.

Says Dealers Will Never Get Anywhere as Long as they Let the Grafters Do It All. Secretary Green Emphasizes Amicability of Relations between Jobbers and Retailers.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Cleveland, Ohio, Jan. 30, 1908.

President C. J. Kramer, of the National Association, makes the following suggestions to retailers everywhere:—

My attention has been called to the various schemes being devised by the large mail order houses toward the passage of the parcels post bill, and it is surprising how ignorant some people are on this measure. Every movement towards its passage is a detriment toward your home and your own State. You can never expect advancement or improvement until you wake up and get interested on public matters. Don't let the grafter and boodler control everything, for its seems as if the country were in their grasp. Be a booster and work for your home town. Show your people that you can sell goods as cheap as any other concern. You can do it, and if you will only let the people know it with a little printers' ink you will have broken the ice.

It is very satisfactory to note, at the present time, the conditions existing between the retailers and wholesalers of the United States.

The retail grocer, through his organization, has become a factor in the mercantile world which might be truly said was little dreamed of a few years ago.

The wholesale grocers have come to recognize his position, and welcome him, through his organization, to a conference where matters of mutual interest might be discussed. It is not an uncommon thing to have the officers of the retail grocers' association of any State invited to a gathering of wholesale men, and but recently a number of wholesale men in one of the cities gave a banquet to the retailers, the sole purpose of which was to bring each into closer communion and to talk over matters of mutual interest, believing that by a co-operation of these interests, and an open discussion by all, the results would materially benefit both.

The wholesaler at the present time is willing to leave the entire retail field to the retailer, while the retailer has come to look upon the wholesaler as his source of supply.

True, buying exchanges have sprung up in different parts of the country, but in most instances this has been brought about by a spirit of unfairness by both, but very often by the wholesaler disregarding the rights of the retailer.

It is conceded that this position is not to the best interest of all concerned; that where each is taken into the confidence of the other better trade conditions exist than where a spirit of antagonism or a spirit of distrust is continually in the minds of either party.

Everything has been done by the national officers to bring about a spirit of friendship between both that should cement us into a fellowship, whereby each will respect the position of the other, and through this position the trade, which is to a very alarming extent slipping away from both, might be kept in the natural channel of distribution.

JOHN A. GREEN,
National Secretary.

Absorbine Increased Colt's Value Fifty Dollars.

Mr. Joseph Crooker, Kingman, Me., writes under date of November 26, 1907: "I got my local dealer to send to you for a bottle of Absorbine and used it with great results. I had a colt that had a bunch on the hock joint and your Absorbine cured it so there is not a blemish to be seen on her now. My colt will sell for $50.00 more to-day than she would before I used Absorbine."

Now is the time to get your stock in proper condition for the season's work or for sale. A lame, blemished horse can be made sound and smooth with Absorbine, without laying up the horse. No blister, no hair gone.

Look over your stock to-day so that when the horse buyers are searching your country you will have good, sound stock, and get a price accordingly. Absorbine cures lameness, kills pain, removes Bog Spavins, Thoroughpins, Splints, Wind Puffs, Shoe Boils, Enlarged Glands, and similar bunches in a mild pleasant manner. $2.00 per bottle at all druggists or express prepaid upon receipt of price. THE GROCERY MARKETS

Tea.

The tea market is fairly active, though not yet what the large traders would like to see it. Low grade Foochows, Formosas and Congous advanced ½ cent during the week and the market is firm. It is confidently prophesied that later in the season low grades will advance from 1 to 2 cents further. The stock is short in all. As a matter of fact, low grade China, Japan and Formosa teas must rule higher from now on than they have ruled at any time before, as the producing cost in all the countries named has considerably advanced. The demand for tea is fair, and conditions are unchanged except for the three advances stated.

Coffee.

The market for Rio and Santos options has been rather weak during the week, owing to lack of support by the bull interests and a slight increase in the receipts at primal points. Spot coffee is about the same. Roasters are still buying from hand to mouth, on account of financial conditions, but there is a steady movement into consumption, as is always expected at this season. There is no disposition whatever to anticipate trade wants. Mild coffees are steady and unchanged. Java and Mocha are unchanged and in moderate demand.

Sugar.

There has been no change in the sugar market during the week. Raws have remained about stationary, and the situation remains firm, but sales have been made for future delivery at a slight decline. The refiners are still pinched for raw sugar. The consumptive demand for refined sugar, which is unchanged in price, is fair for the season.

Syrup and Molasses.

Glucose rules at unchanged prices. Compound syrup is unchanged in price and in fair demand. The cold, if it continues, will boom it a little. Sugar syrup is moderately wanted at unchanged prices. Molasses is unchanged, and as to high grades, firm. The demand is fair.

Fish.

Both Norway and Irish mackerel have advanced during the week, the average upward movement being about $1 per barrel. Irish mackerel are scarce, on account of the partial failure of the winter catch. Norway 1s and 2s are scarcer than 3s and 4s, but no grade is abundant, and the situation is strong. Cod, hake and haddock are unchanged and in fair demand, which ought to become good if the cold weather continues. Domestic sardines are unchanged as yet and in light demand. Imported sardines are still scarce and firm, with the exception of the Norwegian, which are being largely used as a substitute for the French. Salmon is quiet, steady and unchanged.

Canned Goods.

Some tomatoes are selling, but the demand is not large. It is still possible to buy stock at 80 cents delivered in Philadelphia. Only a small business has been done in future tomatoes as yet. There have been large offers slightly below the price asked, 80 cents, but they have been uniformly rejected up to the present time. Corn is dull and unchanged. Some New York packers have named prices for future delivery, some asking the same as last year, others 2½ cents higher. The latter are not believed to be very strong for their advance, however. Peas are unchanged, the demand being fair on spot and good for futures. Prices are unchanged. Peaches are unchanged, scarce, high and dull. Apples are unchanged and not very firm. The small line of Maryland canned goods is unchanged and dull. California canned goods are unchanged in price and quiet in first hands.

Dried Fruits.

Prunes are selling in a small way at prices that show no change for the week. Peaches and apricots are still dull, on account of too high prices. Currants are quiet at ruling prices. Raisins are very dull, prices showing no change for the week. Apples are unchanged on a basis much below that ruling a few weeks ago. Dates, figs and citron are all unchanged.

Beans and Peas.

Pea beans are unchanged on a basis of $2.20, and marrows $2.15. The demand is very fair. California limas are unchanged and in fair demand. As reported last week, the J. K. Armsby Co. has marketed a very large quantity of lima beans that met some damage

Words and Their Meaning

Pork and Beans are simply words, they don't mean anything in particular—except a variety of goods packed under this title of an equal variety of quality and character.

Snider's Pork and Beans mean much—this name on a can means that your trade will keep coming to you for more. They are put up with one idea—to be so unusually good that nothing else will take their place. This is the reason that grocers everywhere are not asked for Pork and Beans any more, but Snider's Pork and Beans. You will get a good understanding of the reason if you will serve a can on your own table.

from the rains and have been cleaned and kiln-dried. They are selling at a fraction below the market. Green and Scotch peas are both higher, the former being worth $2.20 and the latter $2.50. This price greatly curtails the demand. Yellow split peas are unchanged on a basis of $6.50 and green splits on a basis of $3. The demand is fair.

Butter.

The butter market has advanced 1 cent during the past week, owing to short supply of fancy stock. Other grades have moved up proportionately, and both tub and print butter are firm at the advance. There is a good consumptive demand for all grades and the market will probably remain in its present healthy condition for some time.

Eggs.

The egg market is firm at an advance of 2 cents per dozen. The recent storm, coupled by the extreme cold weather everywhere, has shortened the supply, and future prices depend wholly on the weather. The stock of storage eggs is very nearly cleaned up and is selling from 3 to 4 cents per dozen below fresh eggs.

Cheese.

There is a noticeable increase in the consumptive demand for cheese. Stocks are gradually decreasing, and the market is in a healthy condition, being firm on a basis of unchanged prices. There is not likely to be any change in prices for a few days at least in any grade.

Provisions.

The demand for all smoked meats is about normal. The market is steady and unchanged. Pure lard is firm and unchanged, while jobbers have not yet advanced the price on compound lard. Manufacturers have done so on account of the advance in the price of cottonseed oil. The jobbers will probably follow shortly. The consumptive demand is only moderate. Barrel pork, canned meats and dried beef are slow and unchanged.

Produce.

Yellow globe onions, 75 to 78 cents per bushel; York State, 70 to 73 cents; white, $1.50 per bushel crate; Spanish, $1 per crate, demand fair; Pennsylvania potatoes, 78 to 80 cents per bushel; York State, 73 to 75 cents per bushel, demand fair; sweet potatoes, primes, $1 to $1.15 per basket; culls, 50 to 60 cents per basket, demand fair to good; yellow turnips, 25 to 30 cents per basket; white, 25 to 30 cents per basket, demand fair; Danish cabbage, $8 to $10 per ton, $2 to $3 per 100, demand fair; carrots, 40 to 45 cents per basket, demand fair; horseradish, Western, $5 to $5.50 per barrel; domestic, $3.50 to $4.50 per barrel, demand fair; oyster plants, $3 per 100, demand fair to good; parsnips, $1.25 to $1.50 per 100, demand poor; watercress, $1.50 to $2.50 per 100 bunches, demand fair to good; beets, $1.50 to $1.75 per barrel, demand poor; Pennsylvania celery, 5 to 15 cents per bunch, demand fair.

Green Fruit.

Apples, Bellflower, $3.50 to $4.50; Spy, $3 to $4.50; Spitz, $4 to $4.50; Greenings, $2.50 to $4; Hulbersons, $2.75 to $3.25; Baldwins, $2 to $3.50; Kings, $3.50 to $4.50, demand fair; California oranges, $2.25 to $2.50 per box; Florida oranges, $1.75 to $2.25 per box, demand poor; grapefruit, $2.50 to $6 per box, demand poor; pineapples, $3 to $4 per box, demand poor; lemons, $3 to $3.50 per box, demand poor; bananas, jumbo, $1.75 to $2.25; firsts, $1.25 to $1.75; 8-hands, $1 to $1.75; 7-hands, 75 to 90 cents; 6-hands, 50 to 65 cents, demand poor.

Nuts.

Almonds, 17 to 18 cents per pound; Brazil, 10 cents per pound; filberts, 10¼ cents per pound; pecans, 9¾ cents per pound; walnuts, 12½ to 14 cents per pound; mixed nuts, 11 cents per pound, demand poor; peanuts, choice, green, 4 cents per pound; fancy, 5 cents per pound; jumbo, 6¼ cents per pound; roasted, choice, $1 per bushel; fancy, $1.25 per bushel; jumbo, $1.50 per bushel, demand fair.

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORTS.

Baltimore Canned Goods.

No. 1.

Nothing of a specially interesting character developed in this market during the week. Cove oysters was the leader in point of activity, the attraction being the low prices reached recently because of the cheap prices for the raw stock, on account of the remarkably mild season, which was more like April than January all week up to Friday, when we got

Window-Dressing Articles Wanted

For several months the "Grocery World" has been looking for the right man to take charge of its "Window-Dressing Department" and contribute a good, suggestive weekly article. We have tried several, but none was exactly what was wanted.

We will now attempt to get these articles from our subscribers, probably every one of whom has some technical knowledge of window-dressing. What we want is articles clearly describing window displays that can be made by the average retailer; not necessarily new or original—in fact, those which have been used successfully are perhaps preferable to all others.

For all acceptable articles, the "Grocery World" will pay an average price of $5 each. All matter sent in under this arrangement should be addressed to the "Window-Dressing Department." If drawings are also sent they should be made throughout in black ink (not pencil).

"Skipper" Sardines.

THEY'LL SUIT YOU TO A TEA

MR. GROCER:—Is not an assured minimum profit of 25% worthy of your co-operation?

The following is on our invoices, price lists and order forms.

YOUR PROFITS ARE GUARANTEED

CONDITIONS OF SALE

"SKIPPER" SARDINES are sold with the understanding that the ¼'s and ½'s in Oil will not be sold at retail for less than 15c. and 30c. per Tin, respectively, nor the ¼'s and ½'s in Tomato Sauce for less than 18c. and 35c. per Tin, respectively; and when sold at wholesale, that our limited selling prices be maintained.

"SKIPPER" SARDINES are sold with the understanding that the purchase money will be cheerfully refunded to any purchaser if the Sardines do not give entire satisfaction.

As you must sell sardines, why not sell the best—the kind that will bring and hold trade for you? "Skipper" Sardines will do this.

The special features "Skipper" Sardines possess are—

Delicate and delicious flavor,
Superb quality of pure Olive Oil,
Nourishing properties,
Ease of digestion.

NOTE.—Our new booklet entitled "History of the 'Skipper'" is yours free on receipt of your name and address on a postal. It contains the "Skipper" history, the true history of the sardine, and some choice sardine recipes. You and your wife will appreciate it.

our first taste of real wintry weather, the temperature dropping from 57 to 18 degrees inside of twenty hours, with a snowstorm and high wind prevailing. If freezing weather continues three or four days the oyster market will stiffen up at once. When the fall packing season opened in October the price of standard 5-ounce oysters was $1 and 10-ounce oysters were $2 per dozen, and the other grades in proportion, while to-day they can be bought at 80 cents and $1.60 per dozen. A reaction may come on short notice.

The tomato market is unchanged as to prices and the week was quiet to dull. The constant buying of them in small quantities, single car lots and less, brought the total sales in December and January fully up to the average, if not in excess, of those months, and they were widely scattered. The jobbers are beginning to take an interest in "future" tomatoes at the present prices, as a starter at least, and we received this week our first orders for them. We anticipate an increasing demand from now on for future tomatoes as well as for future sweet potatoes, the selling of the latter article having started for the coming season's delivery.

In the general lines of fruits and vegetables the demand during the week was a repetition of the small orders for assorted lots, and the outlook has not changed either way materially.

No. 2.

There is some business doing on tomatoes and some indications of a larger business than we have had for some time. The business all along has been "hand to mouth." Buyers have been taking hold as they need the goods and paying the prevailing market price at the time they want to buy.

There have, however, during the past few days been offers slightly under the market price for round blocks of tomatoes, and though no business resulted it looks like an encouraging feature.

The demand for futures is light; in fact there is no business of any consequence being done and it looks as though a great many packers will stay out of the market until later on.

Oysters.—Packing is going on here, though not in a very satisfactory manner. While the raw stock has been fairly plentiful and at moderate prices, yet packers are being handicapped in packing by the difficulty in getting sufficient labor. The Baltimore packers are working, for these reasons, far below their capacity.

Small Fruits.—A glance at our quotations in comparison with our quotations of several months ago will show that the market is on a very much lower basis. Stocks here are light and the comparatively low prices are being made by packers merely to clean out some of these lines.

Coffee.

The financial stringency and action of the banking interests appear to have lulled the coffee trade of the world into a state of cataleptic somnolency, or it would wake up to the unusual and startling statistics of the article. We will take a few of these under consideration. The deliveries in the United States and Europe from July 1, 1907, to January 1, 1908, were 8,942,940 bags, indicating an annual consumption of about 18,000,000 bags, which shows the normal yearly increase in the consumption of the world of about 500,000 bags. The increase in deliveries for the six months mentioned being 235,211 bags above the previous year is a fair indication of this yearly increase in consumption.

The receipts at Brazilian ports from July 1, 1907, until January 1, 1908, were only 7,374,000 bags, or 4,745,000 bags less than for the same time 1906-07, and about 400,000 bags less than in 1905-06. As the 1905-06 crop turned out to be 10,227,000 bags, the receipts thus far this crop year indicate a total Brazilian crop of about 10,000,000 bags. Adding this to the mild coffee receipts at the consuming ports, of which 4,500,000 bags is probably rather an over than an under estimate, we have 14,500,000 bags to supply the world from July 1, 1907, to July 1, 1908, and as the consumption as shown above will be in the neighborhood of 18,000,000 bags, this makes a shortage of 3,500,000 bags by July 1, 1908, which amount will have to be taken from the present visible supply of the world.

The visible supply of the world during the month of December, 1907, decreased 152,574 bags, while in December, 1906, it increased 569,096 bags, making a difference of 721,670 bags.

The visible supply of the world July 1, 1907, was 16,399,954 bags. Add the Brazilian crop 1907-08, 10,000,000 bags. Add mild crop 1907-08, 4,500,000 bags, gives us a total of 30,889,954 bags for consumption up to July 1, 1908, but about 8,000,000 bags of these are held by the Brazilian Government under the valorization plan, and are entirely out of the market at anything like present prices, considering that the Brazilian Government has made satisfactory financial arrangement to carry this coffee for a considerable time, leaving us an available supply of only 22,889,954 bags. Out of this we must take the year's consumption of 18,000,000 bags, leaving the available visible supply of the world on July 1, 1908, as 4,899,954 bags, or in round numbers, say 5,000,000 bags.

Now it it self-evident to the veriest tyro in the coffee trade that the available visible supply of the world cannot be reduced to 5,000,000 bags without a violent advance in price from present basis, but undoubtedly long before the world's visible supply should reach 5,000,000 bags the coffee trade would be clamoring for a portion of the coffee held under the valorization plan, and perfectly willing to pay them what is now said as their minimum price of 8½ cents for Coffee Exchange Standard No. 7 with the better grades on the same basis.

But much more startling are the probabilities of the crop of 1908-09. The best authorities estimate the size of the crop at about the same as the present one, or say 10,000,000 bags. Adding this to the probable maximum receipts of mild coffees at consuming countries, say 4,500,000 bags, makes 14,500,000 bags of new coffee available for consumption from July 1, 1908, to July 1, 1909. Adding to this the probable available visible supply on July 1, 1908, say 5,000,000 bags, and the 8,000,000 bags held under the valorization plan, we have a total of 27,500,000 bags as the total visible supply for the year July 1, 1908, to July 1, 1909.

Now, if the owners of the valorization coffee decide to hold their coffee, and can make the proper financial arrangements to do so, we shall have to deduct this unavailable amount, 8,000,000 bags, which would leave us only 19,500,000 bags available for consumption during the crop year 1908-09. Adding the normal yearly increase of 500,000 bags to the present rate of the world's consumption, we should have 18,500,000 bags consumed during the crop year of 1908-09. This would reduce the available visible supply of the world on July 1, 1909, to 1,000,000 bags, but of course long before that figure was reached the coffee world would be clamoring for the valorization coffee at any price that the holders wish to sell it, but if the Brazilian Government should refuse to sell there would be a wilder scramble and a more lurid upward whirl on the Coffee Exchanges of the world than we have ever seen. It is, however, not conceivable that the Brazilian Government should pursue any such policy, as a disastrous corner in coffee was not the purpose of valorization, but it would let the coffee world have its holdings at probably a reasonable advance and profit over what the goods cost, including carrying charges, which would be a basis very much higher than the present price of coffee.

From a consideration of the above you will see that the Brazilian Government has the power to execute the most disastrous corner on coffee that the world has ever seen.

Taking the above facts into consideration, nothing but the present financial stringency could account for the apathy of the coffee world and the present ridiculously low price in the face of such features.

Imported Fish Products.

We are pleased to be able to report a further improvement in the business situation.

Herrings.—There is a better demand and prices are looking up.

Mackerel.—Irish mackerel are decidedly scarce and prices have advanced about $1 per barrel since last week.

Norway Mackerel.—There is a better demand and good inquiry. Prices for all grades have been advanced from $1 to $2 per barrel last week, and some sales have been made. The large buyers are not disposed as yet to grant these advances, but as the exceptionally small stocks of Norway mackerel are held in very few and the strongest hands possible, it is reasonable to suppose that buyers will gradually come to know that if they want stocks they will have to pay for them or go without.

We believe that the present stocks of mackerel are the smallest in many years and the least bit of demand will put prices higher. Some of the buyers who believe as we do, that business will soon improve materially, are taking advantage of the present situation and are putting in their stocks.

Imported Oil Sardines.—French are almost unobtainable, excepting a few boneless and a few very fancy quarters.

Portuguese Sardines.—Very few shipments are coming forward, and they are all taken up before arrival.

Sprats.—Catch seems to be a failure and prices have been advanced from 10 to 20 cents per case since last week.

All in all, the situation looks very much brighter, and as soon as confidence is fully restored we shall see good business again.

Spices.

We can report a very active market. Prices are steady to firmer, with little actual change in values. The future on spices seems uncertain. The tendency, no doubt, is toward higher values.

Pepper.—London is higher on futures. Pepper we consider is on a safe basis at this time. Our market at this writing is the lowest on record. Crops are reported about normal.

Cayennes.—Demand is better; stocks appear limited.

Cloves.—unusually low and should sell at higher values. The future is problematical. Advances may occur or we may see a further decline in values.

Pimento (Allspice).—Practically unchanged during the week. There is a fair demand and we do not look for lower values.

Nutmegs.—Practically a little change during the week. Nutmegs are very safe at present market value and you will do well to buy in a large way.

Cassias.—Quite steady and demand is better. There appears to have been some larger arrivals recently.

Ginger.—In fair demand at steady prices.

Seeds.—Caraway seed made a sensational advance during last week. There has been a reaction in the last day or two and 10 to 10½ cents is the market price. Poppy and coriander are steady, but practically unchanged.

Rubbed sage and sweet herbs of all kinds are still selling in a most satisfactory way.

MARKET NOTES.

Florida oranges are very dull and the price shows no advance over last week. The market ranges from $2 to $3.50, a special size (126) bringing the latter price. The receipts are very light, but the demand is not sufficient to clean up even the small supply.

Florida tangerines range at $4 to $5 per box, and are in excellent demand. The quality is good.

Florida beans range from $2 to $3, and the demand is good, though the average quality is poor.

Florida strawberries are still low, ranging from 35 to 50 cents per quart. The quality is good and the demand light.

Florida tomatoes are still scarce and poor. Hothouse fruit ranges from 22½ to 25 cents per pound and are in fair demand.

Hothouse radishes range from $2.50 to $3.50 per 100 bunches. The demand is slow.

Hothouse cucumbers range from $1 to $1.20 per dozen. The demand is fair.

Michigan rhubarb is even a little lower this week. The range is 50 to 60 cents per dozen. The quality is good, but the demand is slow.

New Bermuda potatoes range from $1 to $1.25 per basket. The demand has not yet become active.

Short Champagne Quarts Held Up.

The latest chapter in the warfare against foreign false labels was the detention of a large number of importations of wine, consisting of champagnes, sauternes, etc., consigned to over a score of importers. This time the pure food experts of the department made the discovery that a "quart" of champagne does not contain a quart at all. Hence the marking on each case, "One Dozen Quarts," is, they claim, a palpable misbranding and an attempt to mislead the public, and the experts therefore issued orders that the offending cases, with their contents, be shipped back to Bordeaux, there to have the word "quarts" planed off and the word "bottles" substituted.

Baltimore City Packed a Lot of Tomatoes In 1907.

Canned Goods Exchange Official Report Shows a Production of Several Hundred Thousand Cases More Last Season Than in 1906 or 1905. Present Stocks Low.

The Baltimore Canned Goods Exchange has sent the "Grocery World" a copy of a statement just issued covering the tomatoes packed in the city of Baltimore during the season of 1907. Comparison is made with the packs of 1906 and 1905, that of 1907 being shown far in excess of either. The statement in full follows:—

The statistics of tomatoes packed in the city of Baltimore during the season of 1907 have been compiled and the result is given below.

For purposes of comparison the pack of 1905 and 1906 is also given:

	1907.	1906.	1905.
2s	1,091,062	569,121	531,690
3s	721,378	603,660	555,173
10s	6,351	7,485	6,456
Special Sizes .	39,022	57,905	15,504
Total ...	1,857,813	1,238,171	1,108,823
Above equals size No. 3..	1,498,360	1,023,253	935,897

The number of cases on hand are not given, as several packers failed to make returns on this important subject. It is well known, however, that the total stock of tomatoes on hand is exceedingly small, as evidenced by the empty condition of our public warehouses, one of which would easily hold all the canned goods now contained in all the warehouses, as stated recently by one of the most prominent warehousemen in Baltimore.

Editor Science of Advertising.

Dear Sir:—We should greatly appreciate your criticism of the inclosed ad. through the columns of the "Grocery World."

The circular sent is a reprint from a newspaper ad. which was a half-page in size. Yours truly,

JAMES M. REYNOLDS.

The circular inclosed was a large affair, being a reproduction of a half-page newspaper advertisement.

This is good advertising and I haven't the slightest doubt that it got results. The head might have been improved and shortened somewhat. For example, I have rewritten it as follows:—

Third Annual Cut-Price Grocery Sale.

Here is another of those unequaled yearly opportunities to buy pure foods at much below the original cost. Why do we do it? Because business is always dull around this time—we want to boom it.

Every word we say in the advertisements of this sale we guarantee to be true; every representation made of goods we absolutely warrant.

We can't afford to charge any of these goods. Prices are cash when delivered.

I have said everything that Reynolds & Son have said, and said it I think as well as they have, but my matter would take only about half their space. Or if the saving of space were not an object, the fact that I used less matter would allow much larger and more conspicuous type to be used. It is not necessary to be so lavish with display type, even in the heading of so large an advertisement.

The body of this advertisement is good. So far as my judgment goes, it is just about as good as it could be. I say again that I feel confident that this advertisement brought good results.

REYNOLDS & SON,

The Valatie Grocers

Wiley Now Condemns Benzoate of Soda.

But Not Officially. Reiterates His Views as to Preservatives and Bleaches Before House Committee on Agriculture. Says Fruit can be Dried and Bleached With Salt Solution.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Washington, D. C.,
Jan. 30, 1908.

Dr. H. W. Wiley reiterated his views on the use of benzoate of soda, borax, sulphur dioxide, sulphate of copper, before the House Committee on Agriculture last week. Prior to that time he had never officially condemned benzoate of soda, but in the hearing referred to he included that drug with the others in his condemnation.

Dr. Wiley said the expulsion from the body of the drugs mentioned is performed almost entirely by the kidneys, and that he is satisfied the term of American life would be lengthened if the use of such drugs in foods were wholly discontinued. He said he was convinced that kidney disease, so prevalent among Americans, is partly the result of constant introduction into the system, by means of food, of such preservative substances as benzoate of soda.

Discussing sulphur dioxide and its injurious effects, Dr. Wiley told the committee of a discovery just made by him that salt solution is a perfect substitute for sulphur in the whitening and drying of fruit. He exhibited samples of apples dried experimentally by the bureau. The sulphured fruit was not so white or tender as the salt-cured.

Sees a Crafty Plan in "Woman's Home Companion" Articles

Pennsylvania Grocer Expresses Strong Belief that They are Inspired by Publishers to Induce Larger Advertising of Package Goods. Selects Sample Sentences to Substantiate Statement That the Magazine's Intention is to Make Housewife Dissatisfied with Everything But Advertised Package Goods.

To me the articles in the "Woman's Home Companion" and "Ladies' Home Journal" on the "Dirty Grocery Store" have never had but one meaning. All the editorials you have printed and all the comments published are amusing because of their utter lack of insight into the true meaning of the said articles.

Go back, if you please, to about two years ago and examine the files of the popular magazines. Commencing at about that time a page of the advertising section of each of this class of magazines was given to instructing the housewife to buy only the advertised articles. These pages intimated that any merchant who tried to sell any article that was not advertised was dishonest, and that all unadvertised goods were not fit to buy.

Some of the statements made by the publishers in these ads. were outrageous and carried in their ridiculous wording the conviction to any who read them that the publisher was going a step too far. The fact that these magazines began printing these ads. in the same month, and all belonged to the Publishers' Association, was pretty good evidence that the association was at the back of it. The object of the publishers being, of course, to secure more advertising.

At the present time, I believe no magazine is devoting advertising space to this purpose. Instead these articles in the magazines for women on the "Dirty Grocery Store" are appearing. It is possible, nay, probable, that the Publishers' Association is paying for the articles being printed.

This has been my conviction since the first article appeared. This conviction is strengthened by the recent article on the package goods. The article in question says the clean grocer handles the package goods when he can, "whose label stands for something, * * * * from the manufacturer who has spent millions to make that label with his name upon it mean something * *." Also, the clean grocer "will not substitute an inferior brand for a standard brand just to lift a dishonestly earned penny from your pocket to his."

I do not care to enter the discussion as to weights of package goods. Every grocer knows what the package goods are. I only want to call attention to the manner of the wording of the article to show the sincerity (or insincerity) of the writer. He mentions rice, stating the package actually held better weight than the bulk pound he bought. But when he bought 10 cents' worth of crackers in bulk and a 10-cent package of crackers he counted the crackers. Why did he not make his comparison by means of the scales as with the rice?

In closing, let me state my honest conviction to be, that the articles now being published in the women's magazines are simply a part of a plan worked out by certain publishers to prejudice the housewives against any and all unadvertised goods, and in that manner increase their advertising patronage.

Spokane, Wash.

Representative merchants of 56 towns and cities in the Spokane country attended the third annual convention of the Inland Empire Retail Dealers' Association in the Moorish room at the Hotel Spokane, January 15th and 16th, when F. E. Goodall, president of the Spokane Chamber of Commerce, and head of the Whitehouse Dry Goods Co., welcomed the delegates, and in behalf of Mayor C. Herbert Moore presented them the golden keys and freedom of the city. M. E. Hay, of Wilbur, Wash., presided, and after a fitting response by B. S. Deffenbaugh, of Sandpoint, Idaho, who also congratulated the people of Spokane on their enterprise and progress, the president's annual report was read, as were also reports by C. E. Meyers, of Davenport, Wash., treasurer, and Philip Carbary, of Spokane, secretary.

Mr. Goodall spoke at the afternoon session upon "The Actual Cost of Your Goods." The address was to have been given by J. M. Comstock, president of the Spokane Dry Goods Co., but he was out of the city. L. S. Tyler, secretary of the South Dakota Retail Merchants' Association, gave an address on the manner in which the South Dakota merchants fight the catalogue houses. The subject of his address was "Montgomery Ward & Co. versus South Dakota Retail Merchants' Association," and J. J. Higgins, of Seattle, secretary of the Washington State Grocers' Association, spoke at length on "Mutual Interests."

Cleveland, O.

The Sunday-closing movement, led by the Cleveland (Ohio) Retail Grocers' Association, is advancing in Cleveland at a rate which surprises its best friends. There is no question that the effort of the grocers and meat dealers to cause entire cessation of Sunday trading has popular support. Labor unions and religious societies warmly support them and the minority who insist upon doing business for seven days of the week appear to be gaining no ground. There are indications that many of the minority who consider themselves obliged by competitive circumstances to sell goods on Sunday are more or less secretly in sympathy with the effort to secure Sunday rest.

Massachusetts.

To keep its members free from trouble with the food law, the Massachusetts Retail Grocers' and Provision Dealers' Association has issued the following letter:—

To members of the Massachusetts Retail Grocers' and Provision Dealers' Association:—

Fellow Members:—Do you know that in retailing cider you must label the package, whether bottle, pail, pitcher or measure of any kind, or in whatever vessel it is delivered to the customer, with the nature and amount of the preservative it contains, the same as is on the barrel as you bought it? Not conforming with this law has cost some grocers $25 each recently.

Of course, you must know that beans and cranberries must be sold by dry measure and yet grocers are constantly being caught on this charge, several the past week paying $10 each in fines.

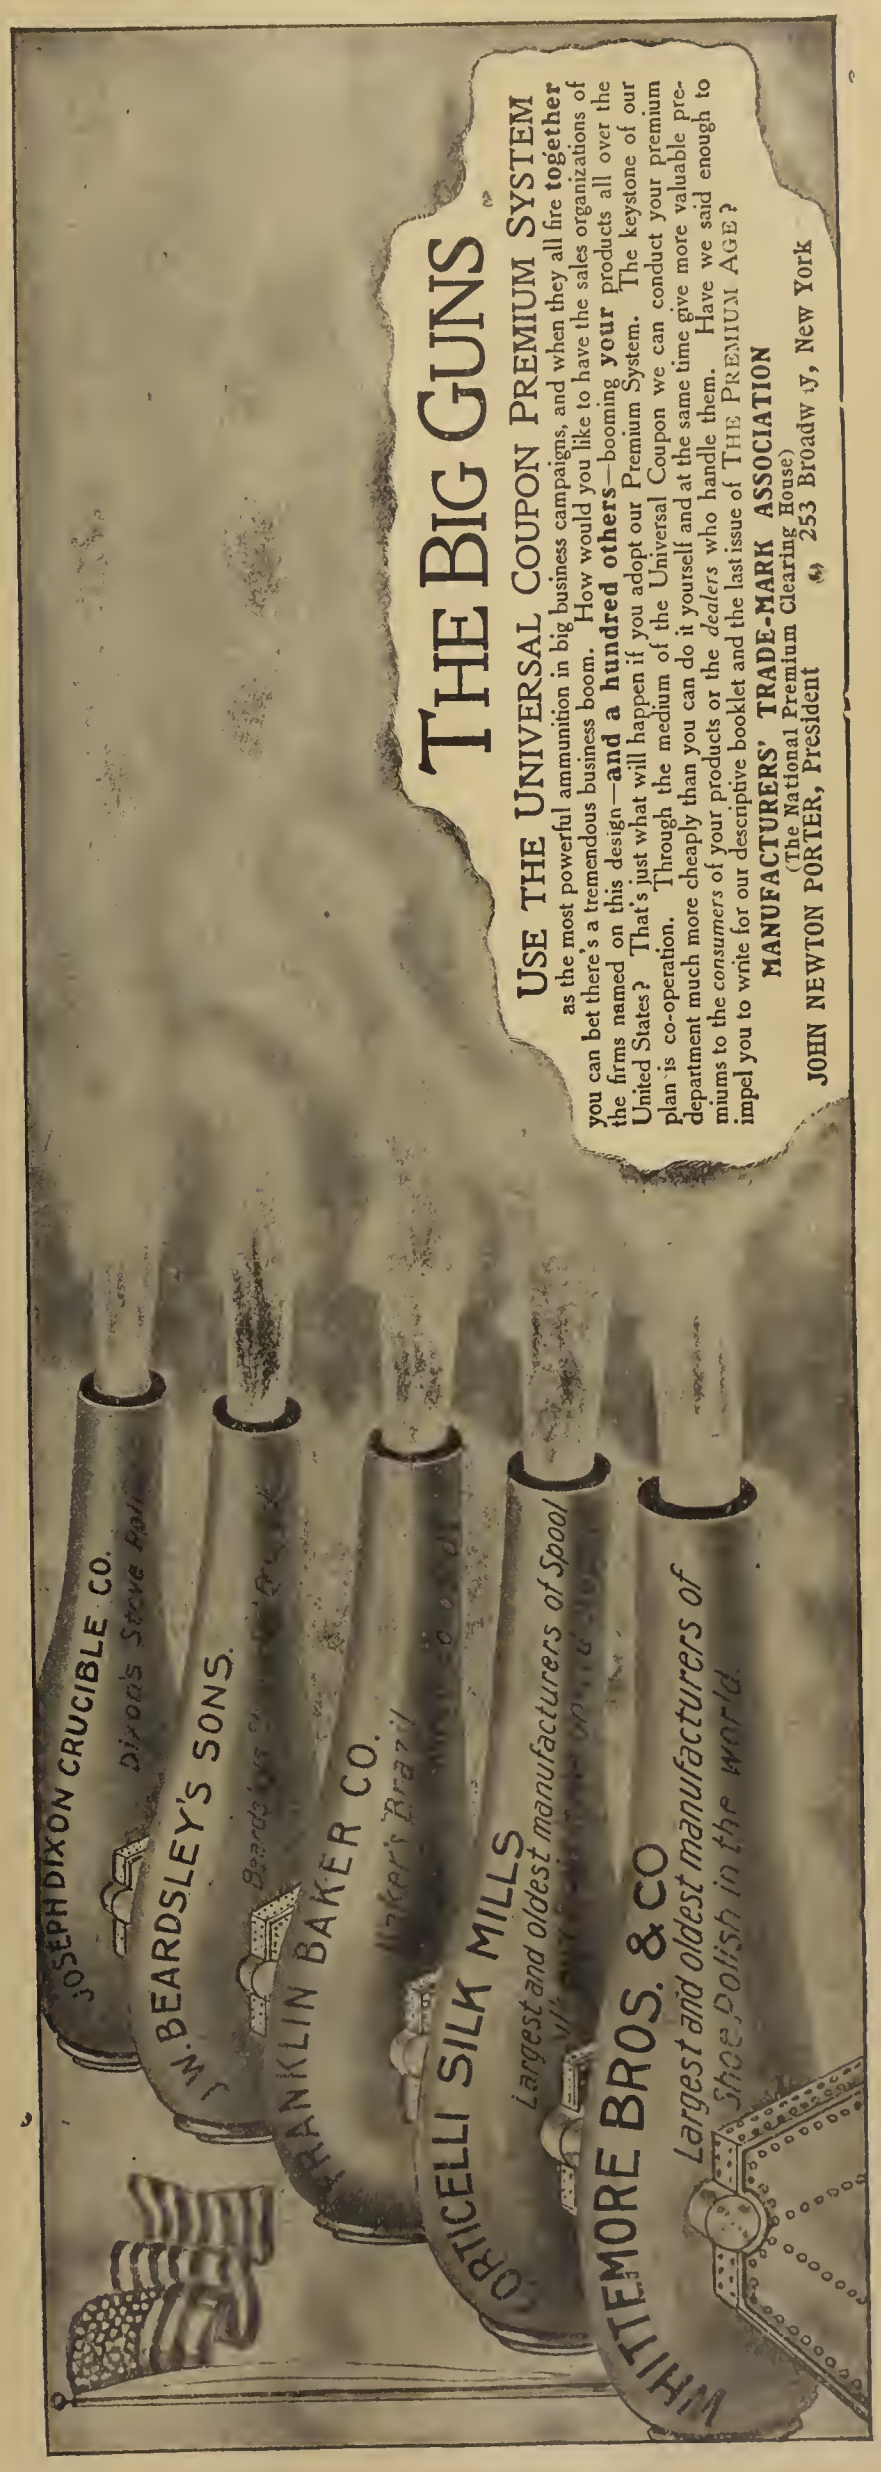
These cases and fines are costly, in money, time, reputation and annoyance. Don't lay yourself liable.

Do you know that retailers are liable for selling lard in short-weight packages without the net weight being distinctly marked on the package? This association is to put a bill in the present Legislature obliging packers to so mark their product, and thus protect the retailer. Will you use your influence with your Representative and Senator in favor of this bill?

Do you know that molasses retailed in jug, bottle, or other package must be labeled with the name of the manufacturer and the place where it was made? Is it possible for a retailer to comply with this law? This association will try to have this law repealed at this session. Will you back us up in the effort?

Have you as a grocer any grievance to present to this association for consideration? Can we help you in any way? Remember this is your association. Write us for any information on food laws or anything else, and we will do what we can to set you right.

Let us hear from you.



Sincerely yours,

A. T. FAUNCE,
Secretary.

Cider Season Dullest For Years.

Very Little Business has been Done as Compared with Former Years. High Prices, Distrust of Preservatives and Prohibition Movement Responsible.

The season which is just about ending has been a most disastrous one for the cider business. All large dealers report an exceedingly small demand both in Philadelphia and New York. In Philadelphia several of the large chain stores, which formerly sold cider very largely, have not handled it at all this year.

One reason for the falling off in the demand for cider has been the high price which has prevailed this year. Another reason is the distrust which many consumers have come to have toward it, on account of the diatribes which have been published against the use of preservatives. Practically all the cider on the market has been preserved with a small quantity of benzoate of soda for years.

Another reason why the cider trade has fallen down this year is said to be the growth of the prohibition movement. Especially has this been the case in the South, where the prohibition movement has been very strong. Cider forms the foundation of many drinks sold throughout the South, such as orange cider, pear cider and so on. All of it is fermented and all against the prohibition laws.

By reason of the lack of demand, the market has gone all to pieces, and at the present time is decidedly in the buyer's favor. This might have helped in the beginning, but it is too late now.

Hundreds of merchants have used Forbes' Coupon Books continuously for many years. They would not have thus used them if the books had not proved an advantage. You need all the advantages possible. If you don't thoroughly understand our proposition, look it up. Send for our booklet which explains our system. (See advertisement.)

The Wolves of Business.

If you met a wolf you'd kill it, if you could, wouldn't you?

All right, that's exactly what we all ought to have the right to do with the wolves in business.

For there's a hen of a lot of 'em around.

They're despicable creatures and they ought to die.

Here's one example:—

There are two concerns moving among the wholesale grocery trade at this minute asking for orders for a certain line of canned goods. Both sell exactly the same thing, except that the labels are different. No two houses could come more directly into competition than these two do.

One of these two houses has had more success than the other, and the latter one is sore in consequence. Let me tell you what he does. He goes about among the jobbing houses, always trying to get there before his competitor if he can. That end of it is all right, of course. If he can get the order then he does it. But if the buyer says he'll wait till the other man comes along and see how they gee on prices, this fellow works this game:—

"Of course I don't know what prices ——'ll quote you," he tells the buyer, "but I'll go 2½ cents a dozen below anything he quotes, whatever it is."

Now, is that competition? No, the man's a wolf; he ought to be choked to death! What chance has a decent house against that?

This fellow belongs to a class of business men—a small class, thank God!—that say "if I can't get the business I'm going to fix it so the other fellow won't make anything out of it."

As a matter of fact, this particular man, I happen to know, said that very thing in about those words in conversation with this competitor one day.

A man like that is a hog and a wolf and several other mean things too numerous to mention. He has no legitimate place in business, and he ought not to be allowed to corrupt the rest of us with the slime of his presence.

This is no personal grudge. He never hurt me any. Such things get me up in the air on general principles.

Here's another wolf:—

This one is a large Philadelphia retail dealer, not in groceries, but in a line close to groceries. He's a very rich man.

This man is a very large buyer and he is noted for such tricks as this:—

He'll buy a great big lot of stuff from a first hands man—the goods are perishable—and will go carefully over it and make every deduction he can. At the end of the month, when he pays his bill, he'll make another deduction of sometimes as high as $15 or $18, on the ground that "he found some more bad stuff." Asked to point out where it was, "well, it was there, and I ain't going to pay for it, that's all." Ten chances to one the stuff's all sold and the first hands man can't demand to see it.

These lying claims come right along with nearly every big bill this creature buys and they're always allowed. Allowed by men who know they're false, who know the fellow's simply picking their pockets. Why?

Simply because the man's a big buyer!

One of them told me about it only the other day. The fellow had just made that sort of a claim from him.

"Good Heavens, man!" I said, "what d'ye let him do it for? He's a thief! He's robbing you! Make him prove his claims before you allow 'em, why don't you?"

"Well," was the answer, "if I did we'd lose his trade, and I'd hate to do that."

What an awful lot of indignities competition makes us stand for!

I'm afraid I'd make a mighty poor business man if I was in business for myself. In a case like that, no matter how good a customer such a fellow was, I'd kick him out like any other thief! He'd have to prove every claim he made before he got 'em allowed by me.

That is, I think that's the way I'd do. If I got in it, and had something at stake, I might stand more than anybody else. But I'd say what I thought about him. It

Slices Everything from 6-pound Knuckles to half-ounce Ends.

IF YOU SLICE DRIED BEEF

you need Johnson's "EVERSHARP" slicing machine. Because it slices dried beef to perfection, and moist freshly cured beef in full-size wafer slices, thin, smooth and delicious, will attract more new trade than any article you can offer.

IF YOU DON'T SLICE DRIED BEEF

you certainly need Johnson's "EVERSHARP" slicer, because you are losing the prestige and profit of the most salable and profitable specialty in the whole line of eatables.

This machine was invented by an experienced retail grocer to correct the faults, remove the defects and improve the shortcomings of all other machines.

It will slice five pounds of dried beef in five minutes, every slice perfect, the full size of the meat, transparently thin, smooth and shining. It will cut the tough sinewy ends in perfect slices. It will slice up every little end. It will save enough time and labor, prevent enough waste, draw enough new trade, and increase the sales of sliced meat, sufficient to pay for itself in a very short time.

Send for a sample of sandwich sliced beef and see the magnet that draws the trade.

The Important Things to Think About on the Breakfast Food Question

Malta-Vita Wheat Flakes and Malta-Vita Corn Flakes

First—Are better quality than anything of the kind you are now selling. We prove this before you buy.

Second—You make a bigger profit on them than any breakfast food you are now selling. We prove this before you buy.

Third—We are working with the retailer because we know him to be the best salesman we can employ. On this account, instead of spending our advertising appropriation this year talking to consumers, we are spending it for Universal Coupons to give the dealer to make it worth his while to talk to consumers about Malta-Vita for us.

We will exchange all old stock on hand for new without cost to the dealer. The new goods will not only be fresh and beautifully packed, but will contain the extra discount in the shape of Universal Coupons.

They Look Alike But Aren't

At first glance all starches look alike, both Laundry and Corn Starches. There is really a heap of difference, though it takes use to bring it out. In other words, if you sell a poor Starch your customer will find it out before you will.

Take our word for it, no Starch has ever been quite so fine and good as Murdoch's Laundry and Corn Starch. With manufacturing improvements of our own, and a genius for the most painstaking care, we are producing goods we are proud of.

Does it commend itself to you that we are independent of any Trust?

Hear Us Boast a Little

Really we think you retail grocers ought to be rather close both to Ralston Health Food and Purina Whole Wheat Flour.

See what we're doing for you?

We're making superfine products which the most careful dealer can freely sell. We're advertising these products to your customers in the magazines at our expense, and we're providing advertising plans which you yourself can use. These:—

When a manufacturer makes a good product and then half sells it by good advertising, isn't he entitled to the retailer's loyalty? More than that, is there any better business for you than selling such goods?

MAGAZINE NOTES.

The Twentieth-Century Jew.

Ezra Brudno, a Hebrew writer of some distinction, contributes an article on "The Twentieth-Century Jew" to the February "Lippincott's" which should be of extraordinary interest not only to his own race but to Gentiles as well. Mr. Brudno calls attention to the tendency of the modern Jew to abandon the old orthodox rites and customs. "The view of the modern Jew is different from that of his fathers," he says. "While the Jew of the past regarded everything as subordinate to his faith, and it was with the eyes of his faith that he looked upon the world, the twentieth-century Jew views life as a man first, and as a Jew last. His desires, ambitions, and hopes are of the nation of which he is a part, not of his race, not of his creed. It is the natural pride of his blood that sometimes makes him strive for recognition as a member of his race, but only as a means of removing the world's prejudice, not with the hope of retaining his Jewish identity." It is quite likely that many of the author's race will take issue with him on some of the ideas and views he expresses, but there is no doubt that he has drawn a masterly picture of Jewish racial characteristics and idiosyncrasies.

Serious Jobbing Campaign Against Quaker Oats Co.

Two Large Associations of Wholesalers Issue Official Statements Attacking Its Goods as a Business Proposition. Charge from Baltimore of Selling Retailers Direct. Impairment of Business Considered Certain if Tide is Not Checked.

When the Quaker Oats Co. denies that there is any serious disaffection against it among the wholesale grocery interests of the country it is singularly misled if it really believes what it says. There is a most decided campaign on against the company by wholesale grocers' associations in various sections, and it cannot fail to noticeably impair the concern's business if not checked.

Some days ago the Wholesale Grocers' Association of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware issued practically to every jobber in the three States the following letter:—

Philadelphia, January 18, 1908.

To Members:—

Are you interested in profits? The following is a comparison of the margin shown on two (2) standard brands of rolled oats:—

Quaker (car lots), jobbing cost, $3.00; jobbers' profit, single case, 35 cents; jobbers' profit, 5-case lots, 30 cents.

Mother's (car lots), jobbing cost, $3.05½; jobbers' profit, single case, 44½ cents; jobbers' profit, 5-case lots, 34½ cents.

Quaker (L. C. L.), jobbing cost, $3.10; jobbers' profit, single case, 25 cents; jobbers' profit, 5 case lots, 20 cents.

Mother's (L. C. L.), jobbing cost, $3.15; jobbers' profit, single case, 35 cents; jobbers' profit, 5-case lots, 25 cents.

Scrutinize these figures closely. They mean dollars and cents to you, and post your salesmen as to which brand they are to push in serving your best interest, and incidentally, in furthering their own.

In connection with profits, and the most profitable of the new schedules above shown, the writer would appreciate an acknowledgment of this letter from you, advising as to which of these schedules is the more satisfactory, and stating whether or not it is your desire, should this be possible, to prevail upon the manufacturer whose brand is not netting the jobber the profit which the latter deserves, to adjust the same to a more satisfactory basis, and if possible, in line with that of the manufacturer whose schedule has apparently been devised on a more liberal and satisfactory basis so far as the jobber is concerned.

Both of these brands sell to-day to the consumer at 12 cents per package. There can be no reason why, provided the jobbers will take a firm stand, their profits on these goods cannot be placed on a more satisfactory basis.

Yours truly,
A. M. GRAVES,
Secretary and General Manager.

About the same time the Baltimore Wholesale Grocers' Association issued a similar letter. The Baltimore letter went further than that issued in Philadelphia, however, in that it charged the Quaker Oats Co. with selling retailers in the Baltimore territory at jobbing prices.

It is understood that several other jobbing associations in various sections of the country have also issued letters to their members along the same line. The results which the work is having may be estimated from the fact that 80 per cent. of the wholesalers in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware answered that organization's letter, all denouncing, in more or less strong lan-

Two Chances To Go Wrong

You have two chances to go wrong when you buy syrup in the ordinary way:—

1. Your own inability to tell whether the syrup is what it purports to be.
2. The similar inability of your jobber, if you buy from one.

Judging syrup is an expert's business.

There are no chances to go wrong when you buy Karo, whether you buy through a jobber or not. Karo is a corn syrup made by us and sealed under conditions that never vary. Neither you nor the jobber needs to judge something you know little or nothing about. We do the judging, we stand behind every tin.

guage, the goods of the Quaker Oats Co. as a business proposition.

There seems to be some reason for expecting that if the Quaker Oats Co. does not succeed in stemming the tide against it, that it may shortly be compelled to do the greater part of its business with retailers direct. Some people profess to believe that it would prefer to do that anyway.

Railroad Will Try to Collect Storage Charges.

Pennsylvania Railroad to bring Several Suits in Pittsburg Against Produce Receivers Who Have Let Their Stuff Remain. Company has Already One Suit Under New Law.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Pittsburg, Pa., Jan. 30, 1908.

There are some interesting lawsuits about to be started here by the Pennsylvania Railroad against certain receivers of produce. The object in all is to collect storage for goods not taken promptly upon arrival. These suits are really based on the opinion of the court in the case of the Pennsylvania Railroad against the M. O. Coggins Co. The suit is a test of the Wilbert anti-storage law. This law, passed last winter, prohibited the railroads of the State making any charge except the regular demurrage charge of $1 a day for cars held on track more than 24 hours.

The suit was an amicable one arranged between the M. O. Coggins Co. and the Pennsylvania Railroad, and the decision of the lower court was against the Coggins Co., which means that the storage must be paid. The Pennsylvania Railroad does not enforce such a rule against grain dealers or grocers or any other receivers here save the produce merchants, nor does it ask storage charges of the produce dealers in any other city in the State. The local courts have decided that the charge is legal and now the railroad company is making an effort to collect.

Nothing Artificial Here

La Toscana Virgin Olive Oil is unique in several respects. One is the fact that its wonderful clearness is not produced artificially or by any chemical. Its pure limpidity and brilliant color are due solely to the perfection of the olives from which it is pressed and to the expertness of the pressing.

No purer, finer olive oil is produced in any of the oil-producing states of Europe than La Toscana.

Manufacturers who have adopted premium schemes to create a demand for their products, have always given the premiums to consumers. Where manufacturers have offered an incentive to grocers to push their goods, the incentive has always been small. It had to be small, because no individual manufacturer could afford to give a grocer from his individual profits anything more important than a silk hat, an umbrella, etc. But when twenty or more prominent manufacturers, whose products are sold by grocers everywhere, set aside a part of their advertising appropriations to put into a fund to buy something substantial for the merchant, that something represents an article of sufficient value to make it worth the grocer's while to take a real interest in pushing the goods of the manufacturers who take this means of showing their appreciation of the grocer's services. That the importance of this matter may be plain to you, figure out the following: The Knickerbocker Chocolate Co., New York, gives you a quantity of Universal coupons with their Hasty Lunch Chocolate, Bedford and Blue Ribbon Cocoa. No better goods ever came into this market. Add these coupons to the ones you get with the products of the following firms and you will find you can save enough coupons in three months to entitle you to a first-class set of harness, a platform scale or a roll-top desk. In six months you can save enough to get a good runabout, in a year a good piano:

The American Preserve Co., Philadelphia; Wrigley Manufacturing Co., Philadelphia; Franklin Baker Co., Philadelphia; the Porcela Co., Philadelphia; McCanna & Fraser Co., Philadelphia; John Scott & Co., Philadelphia; Weber & Loesch, Philadelphia; Wm. Dreydoppel's Sons, Philadelphia; J. W. Beardsley's Sons, New York; Dixon Crucible Co., Jersey City; Sea Foam Baking Powder Co., New York; Flodon Manufacturing Co., Boston, Mass.; Potter & Wrightington, Boston, Mass.

Within a month a number of other big local houses will join this enterprise. Don't you think this matter is important enough for you to push the goods of these firms? Don't you think the manufacturers who have been been first to recognize the grocer's right of consideration should have the grocer's hearty co-operation?

Window Dressing for Grocers

In this department from now on will appear each week suggestive articles regarding the proper use of the retail grocer's window. An endeavor will be made to deal with the subject practically, in other words, to show grocers how they can turn their windows into a money-making feature of their business. Subscribers are invited to make free use of the department by submitting both queries or suggestions.

How We Increased Our Butter Sales 500 Per Cent.

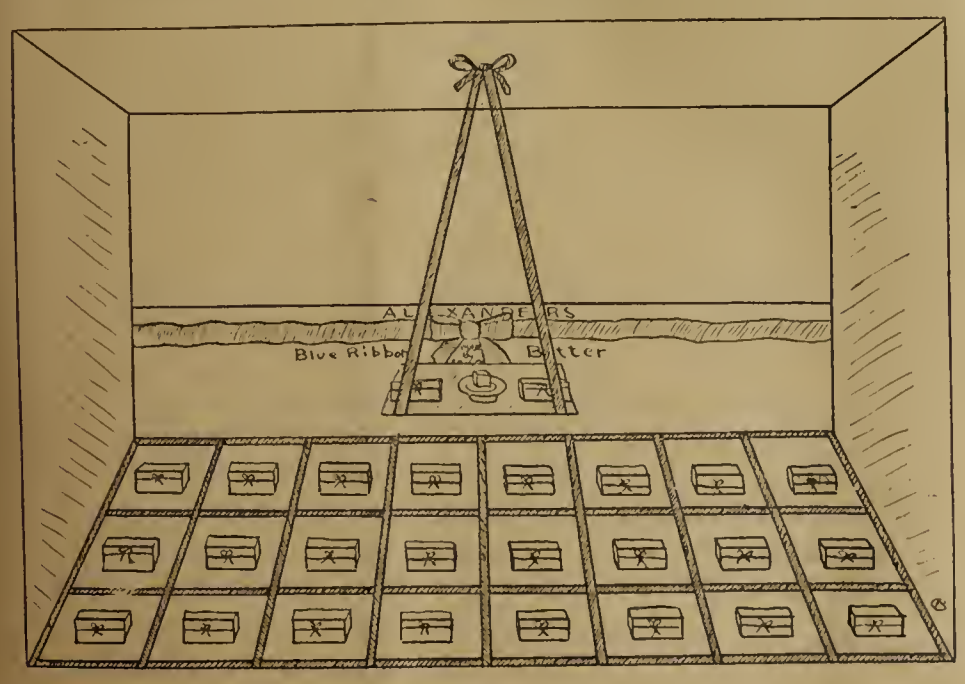
First we found a good creamery butter that could be depended upon. Next we contracted with the Creamery Company by the year, we furnishing the wrappers. The wrappers have a blue ribbon printed across one end with our name and the creamery's name. These do not cost much when buying in large quantities.

We handle several grades of butter, each with a different colored ribbon on the wrapper. But we only push the sale of "Blue Ribbon."

We next had souvenir postals printed and sent out to all of our customers. (These postals were like the pictures in window No. 2.)

Before using this scheme we were selling about 50 pounds of butter a week, while now we average over 300 pounds a week.

Here are descriptions of two of several window displays we used:



WINDOW NO. 1.

The floor was covered with white paper; on this were laid out squares (12 inches) with 1-inch strips of blue crepe tissue paper. Within each square was placed a pound of butter.

We did not use butter, but used blocks of wood cut from a yellow pine scantling the width and depth of a pound of butter. When these were wrapped with butter paper you could not tell them from butter.

For a background we used 30-inch paper tacked on a frame the length of the window. On this was made an imitation of the label on the butter. The letters were of course painted on, but the ribbon was made of blue crepe tissue paper, glued on in spots.

In the centre of the window was a 5 x 30-inch glass shelf suspended from the ceiling by stovepipe wire. In front of these wires were stretched tissue ribbons. On this shelf were placed a few pounds of butter (imitation) and in the centre was a silver butter dish on which was a half pound of real butter.

WINDOW NO. 2.

The picture in this window was 18 x 22 inches (without frame) and was an enlargement of our souvenir postals. On the frame were blue and frosted electric lights. The picture was set up on sticks (nailed on the back) so that the picture was in the centre of the window glass and about 30 inches back. From the four corners of the picture frame were nailed wood strips to the corners of the window frame.

Next were tacked blue tissue ribbon from the window frame to the picture frame. This was covered on all four sides with wrapping paper tacked on the wood strips, running from the picture frame to the window, making an immense frame to the picture.

Erie, Pa., Jan. 31, 1908.

At the monthly meeting of the Lykens Retail Merchants' Association the following officers were elected: President, Charles A. Hoff; vice-president, Jacob A. Bogar; secretary, Jacob M. Miller; treasurer, J. I. Delaney.

The Merchants' Protective Association of Pittston and vicinity has enrolled another free bridge movement, and a petition has been prepared providing for an application to be made to the court for the erection of a county bridge across the Susquehanna River between Pittston and West Pittston free for public travel. The court has been petitioned to appoint viewers. The annual election of officers resulted in the selection of the following: President, Edward T. Messick; first vice-president, Wm. Giles; second vice-president, Philip Rozelle; secretary, D. M. Evans; treasurer, A. E. Case.

The meeting of the Harrisburg Merchants' Association last week was the largest that has been held for some time. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Otto J. Buxbaum; first vice-president, Wm. F. Paul; second vice-president, Wm. F. Burgoon; secretary, R. F. Cook; treasurer, P. G. Diener.

The Northeast Business Men's Exchange held its regular meeting in G. A. R. Hall January 20th. Results of the election of officers were as follows: President, R. B. Southwick; vice-presidents, J. F. Gill, A. P. Cushman, L. B. Yale, Mr. Evans; secretary, E. J. Evans; treasurer, J. F. Lewis.

At a recent meeting of the Bradford Retail Grocers' Association the following officers were elected for the ensuing year; President, A. E. Case; vice-presidents, W. H. Leyman, Joseph Ball, P. H. They Thought We'd Fail

Lots of people said we'd fail when we started to pack Hoffman House Pickles in tins.

As a matter of fact, we've succeeded better than even we expected. There are special reasons why tin makes a better pickle package than glass. And then Hoffman House Pickles are entirely different from other pickles. They are tenderer, daintier, more likable in every way. Special ways of manufacture account for that.

New Guarantee Bill Mostly Hot Air.

Contains No Penalty Clause. Applies only to Labels Printed After its Passage, Which in Itself Would Make it Unenforceable. Believed to be Intended only as a Bluff.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Washington, D. C.,
Jan.

In a recent issue of this correspondence it was reported that Congressman Mann, at the behest of the Department of Agriculture, had introduced a bill forbidding the use of the words "Guaranteed Under the Food and Drug Act, June 30, 1906." This bill has developed some stir, and it has been emphasized that if it involved the destruction of all the millions of labels already printed with those words on them it would work a great injustice to the trade.

It developed during the week from a reading of a copy of the bill, that it simply provides that the phraseology objected to should not appear on any labels printed after its passage. This in itself shows what is generally conceded here, that the bill referred to is not seriously intended by the department to have much weight. Manifestly it would be impossible to follow up every label found bearing the above language in order to see whether it was printed before the law passed or not.

Another significant point is that the bill contains no mention of any penalty. Altogether, there is much reason to believe that the Mann bill is put forth simply as a bluff, intended to coerce manufacturers to cease using a phrase which they are considered as having a perfect right to use, but which for some reason is objectionable to the department. A well-known attorney who visited the department during the week expressed the opinion that the law would be unconstitutional if passed.

Useful Facts About Groceries

The department which will henceforth be conducted under the above head is best explained by the letter which appears below, and which was recently sent to the "Grocery World." In the hope that a little such matter may be of interest and value to "Grocery World" readers, a short educational article along the lines indicated will appear under this head from time to time.

Vermontville, N. Y.

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—I have long wanted a book which would be a sort of encyclopædia, one that would take a certain article, describe it, tell where it grew, how it was prepared for market, what season of the year it was marketed, how it should be stored, whether in a cold or warm place.

Such a book was published once, but as near as I can find out it is out of print now.

I was thinking if the "Grocery World" could devote, say, half a column a week to a work of this kind we would have, in a little while, the long-looked-for work.

But I won't ask for too much, for we are getting good things all the time.

Very truly yours, N. H. BRECKENRIDGE.

Nutmegs.

The genuine round nutmeg sold in the best shops is the kernel of the fruit of the tree known as Myristica moschata, or nutmeg tree. Some botanists call it Myristica fragrans.

It is a native of the Moluccas, and is grown extensively in Hainan, also in the Islands of Banda, East Indies, and in Africa. Nutmeg culture is also becoming a source of much profit in several of the West Indian Islands, especially in Grenada.

In size and foliage the trees resemble pear trees. They do not come into bearing till nine or ten years old. The fertile trees continue to produce fruit seventy or eighty years, and on an average each tree will yield ten pounds of nutmegs, with about one pound of mace, every year; but when highly manured it is said they will produce ten times that amount. It takes nine months for the fruit to come to maturity.

The process of curing the nutmegs for the market is as follows: The ripe fruit containing the nutmeg is nearly a spherical droop, not unlike a round pear or common walnut, and of golden yellow color without and white within. These are gathered up from under the trees every day, except Sunday. The outer or fleshy part of the fruit is rather tough, something like candied lemon, and is in fact often preserved and used as a sweetmeat; but it readily splits in two like a pea, and inside this outer fruit is found a thin but very hard shiny brown shell, tightly wrapped in a bright red network or ligament known as mace. It is inside this shell that the ordinary nutmeg of commerce is found. The mace is peeled off and pressed flat between heavy blocks of wood, where it is left for two or three days, then put into a case and left till it acquires the proper color. The nutmegs, with the shells on, are next put into receptaces with fine mesh bottoms, so that the air can pass around them, and here they are left for three weeks or a month—in fact until the kernel, or nutmeg, begins to shake inside the shell. They are then exposed to the sun for a couple of hours a day for two or three days, and after this they are carefully cracked. Great caution is necessary here, for if the outside shell is struck too hard it makes a black spot on the nutmeg, which affects the value considerably. When cracked the thin shell flies off in pieces, and the nuts are sorted according to size.

Nutmegs being very liable to the attacks of maggots and a species of beetle, which materially injure their odor and taste, all the nuts are at once dipped three or four times, by basketfuls, into a strong lime-like pickle, thick as treacle, composed of calcined shells and salt water. Preserved in this coating and then dried in heaps, they are ready for packing in cases or ordinary flour barrels for shipment.

This liming undoubtedly injures their flavor somewhat, and brown unlimed nutmegs are best; but they are very liable to damage from the insects referred to, and even after they have been treated as described. The best way of keeping them for a length of time is in dry lime.

Of the various kinds usually met with those known as "Penang" are the most esteemed. Next to these rank the Dutch, or Batavian kind, and after these the Singapore nutmegs. In the

Warmed Palates For Years

There's a great deal in grinding mustard. He who thinks that one ground mustard is necessarily as good as another doesn't know mustard.

Stickney & Poor's Ground Mustard has imparted a grateful and appetizing warmth to people's palates for more years than most of us have lived. There are other good mustards, but Stickney & Poor's is just a little smoother, just a little more pungent, just a little more delicately flavored than any other.

Dutch, or Batavian, the exterior exhibits a number of white furrows with brown projections, arising from the liming process adopted.

The female, or round nuts, are the best; they should be large, fresh, moist, heavy, of good smell, and yield oil readily when pricked and not be worm-eaten or corky.

If a quantity of nutmegs be found infested by insects they may be easily got rid of by exposing the nutmegs on sieves to the fumes of burning sulphur, in a close chamber or other suitable vessel.

Okra or Okro.

The unripe fruit or pods of Hibiscus esculentus, known as Bendi-Kai in Southern India, as Gombo in the French Colonies. It is called Okra in the Northern and Gumbo in the Southern States of America. The plant is a native of the West Indies, but is now cultivated throughout the tropics, Southern States of America, and around the Mediterranean. The edible portion is a tapering 5—10 angled loculicidal capsule, 4 to 10 inches long, A favorite dish is made from these young and tender pods, stewed and seasoned with salt and pepper, and served with melted butter.

Hearing over Confiscated Flour.

Miller Permitted to Give His Side in Case in Which Flour is Alleged to Have Been Misbranded.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Washington, D. C.,

Jan. 30, 1908.

A hearing was had here on Tuesday last by Secretary of Agriculture Wilson and the Federal Food Board, in the case of a carload of flour which was recently seized in Ohio, on the charge of being misbranded. The hearing was held in private and decision was reserved.

The flour in question was marked as having been milled from a certain grade of spring wheat, but appeared upon analysis, so it is alleged, to contain an admixture of about 15 per cent. of some other grade of wheat and this, it was claimed, constituted a misbranding under the pure food law.

Two-Minute Sermons for the Retail Grocer

XXVII.—Give Competitors a Square Deal.

Our criminal law says every man is considered innocent until proved guilty.

If the laws of our country look upon every man arrested for a crime in this light, is it any more than fair that you give your competitor at least as good a deal?

The chances are that your competitor will not even demand the criminal's right to be proved guilty, but will prove his innocence of whatever charge you have to bring against him.

If every dealer would consider his competitor to be a good square sort of a fellow, until proved otherwise, and would talk things over with him, he would in nearly every instance find him ready to co-operate in every way to build up their joint community, and especially their own business.

Customers are always telling a merchant something about a competitor which proves about nine times out of ten to not be true. They feel safe in doing this because they know these merchants do not hunt each other up and explain matters. If merchants would but realize that they must work together for the good of the community, and thus add to the prosperity of all in that community, instead of each following a tearing-down policy, and trying to add to his own list of customers by taking away from the other fellow, there could be a feeling of good fellowship created which would make each one feel at liberty to call the other up over the telephone and tell him the latest story started about him, so it could at once be nailed to the cross, and the lying customer spotted out, instead of creating another bunch of hard feelings among competitors for the purpose of making trade wars in which the "lying customer" could benefit to the extent of five or ten cents, or possibly a whole quarter.

Owner going on farm, and will sell at inventory. Some of the fixtures belong to the real estate and are rented with it. Easy terms to good buyer. This store has been established for 15 years.

No. 340.—In West Philadelphia. Groceries, meats and provisions. Size 24x60 feet. Does $45,000 yearly. Three-fourths cash. Stock carried, $2,500. Uses two teams. Actual net profit, 12 per cent. Reason for selling, ill-health. Established 21 years. Price inventory. Fixtures will run about $1,500. Amount required, around $3,800. No dwelling.

No. 341.—In West Philadelphia. Groceries and delicatessen. Size 20x30 feet. Does $300 weekly. All cash. Stock $2,000, but can be reduced to $1,300. Push cart delivery. Net profits, 15 per cent., as family run store. Established 12 years. Owner must sell as death compels him to assume another business. Price inventory. Fixtures will run about $1,500, but can be reduced to $1,100. Amount required, around $3,000. Cash or good security. Dwelling.

No 342—In North Philadelphia. Groceries. Size 16x25 feet. Does $100 weekly, nearly all cash. Stock $600. No team. Business now profitable. Owner wants to leave city. Price, around $600 to $700. Dwelling.

No. 344.—In West Philadelphia. Groceries, meats and provisions. Size 15x27 feet. Does $500 to $600 per week. All cash. Stock only $500, as business handles large amount of meats. Clean net profit 10 per cent. Best reasons for selling. Price inventory. Will need about $1,400, but can be reduced by not taking cash register. Dwelling.

No. 345.—In West Philadelphia. Meats and provisions. Size 15x28 feet. Does about $11,000, three-fourths cash. Mostly sells meats, so stock only averages $250. No team. Actual net profits, 20 per cent. Owner wishes to change business, for reasons which will be explained. Price inventory. Take around $800. Dwelling.

In all of these the cause of selling is good, and the fullest investigation courted. Every one paying.

ONLY STORE IN THE PLACE.

We offer the only grocery store in a high-grade Philadelphia Suburb. Under restrictions no other store can be built there. The owner has another business to which he wishes to devote his entire time, and will sell the place at inventory, asking nothing for good will, though the business is unusually valuable. Store 16x50 feet, with two storerooms, does $33,000 yearly, all gilt-edged. Stock about $2,000; uses three teams. Dwelling connected. Actual net profits 8 per cent. The business is open to the very deepest investigation. Teams and fixtures will inventory around $1000 to $1200, and the stock around $2000.

WARNER & CO.,
927 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

WILL EXCHANGE FOR TRUCK FARM

Grocery located on one of the principal streets of West Philadelphia. Size 25x72 feet. Doing $550 weekly, mostly cash. Stock about $2,000. Nets 10 per cent. Uses one team. The owner is not at home in the grocery business, and wishes to retire from it. Store is very profitable, and will stand the deepest examination. Price inventory, Owner will sell for cash or exchange for good city property or truck farm within 15 miles of Philadelphia. The store will run about $3,500; if property exchanged is worth more will pay the difference in cash.

FOR RENT.

FOR RENT—Large General Store (owned by the undersigned estate) in Quarryville, Lancaster County. Pa. This Borough has a population of about 800. Is the terminus of two steam railroads, a trolley line and two new state turnpikes. It is the only town of any considerable size in the ten lower townships of Lancaster County, and commands a large proportion of their patronage. It has two banks, and does more business in a week than most towns of its size in a month. In fact, during the year of 1907, it is carefully estimated to have exceeded $800,000, not including the money paid out in the borough for tobacco which will amount to about $150,000 yearly. The borough has, besides this store, one large general store, carrying every line, and one smaller general store, one small grocery and a large hardware store. This store has enjoyed a large patronage for half a century. The location is the best in the borough, and in the midst of the town's business activity, within 200 feet of the depot of the Lancaster & Quarryville Railroad, the Lancaster, Oxford & Southern Railroad, the freight station and the terminus of the trolley line. The building is large, well-lighted, and is undergoing repairs; it has a fine cellar. It will be rented on good terms. The opportunity for an energetic man to establish a fine business in one of the best towns of its size is here afforded. A renter will not be handicapped with a stock of old goods, as the building is entirely empty and ready for immediate occupancy. For any further information address George W. Hensel's Estate, Quarryville, Lancaster Co., Pa. tf

Do You Know How They Got Rich?

A great many Italians who have started little fruit stands on corners have gotten rich. Do you know how they have done it? They made it a point, small as they were when they commenced, to buy the finest fruit in the market, because they knew the people would buy it regardless of price.

There isn't a grocer in the land who can't make his fruit and vegetables his best paying department. All that is necessary is to get the right goods, at the right prices, at the right place. Anybody who is posted will tell you that the place to go is

What's in a Name? Lots!

Take "Caricol," for instance—when applied to "Tea" it stands for a blend of which tons have been sold, because it has the peculiar faculty of pleasing almost everybody—and last, but not least, you can make 160 per cent. profit on it, and satisfy your customers that the price isn't too high.

Thomas Martindale & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

PEANUTS—FIVE A BAG

Everywhere you go you hear that cry. Don't you think you should have some of the trade that the peddler has? If you knew that with an you could clear 300 per cent., would you not put one in when you learn that any boy can run it, and that there's nothing to get out of order, and that it will pay for itself in one month's time? We think you will, and we will be pleased to furnish further particulars and prices on request.

ATSATT BROS.
24 Pearl St., Mattapoisett, Mass

Rae's Lucca Olive Oil

An Olive Oil of the purest quality—pressed only from perfect olives and carefully preserved from contact with anything that would hurt its exquisite flavor; beautiful to the eye and agreeable to the taste.

Do you keep it in stock?

H. KELLOGG & SONS, PHILADELPHIA
AGENTS FOR SAMUEL RAE & CO., LEGHORN, ITALY

What's the Difference?

The answer—"the bottom is as good as the top." You know what this means in Evaporated Apples. It means that your customers will keep buying that kind, and we know you will keep buying that kind to supply your customers. APELPI on a package of evaporated apples is a positive guarantee that the fruit is the finest that can be had, and its preparation can't be excelled.

It Made No Difference to Us

No gelatine sold in this country was less affected by the Federal Food Law than Chalmers'.

Our brands complied with the legal standard even before there was one. How could they help it? They were simply unsophisticated gelatine, made of pure unadulterated calves' stock and spring water. There was nothing to change about them, nothing to alter in any way.

We take a just pride in the fact that while the Federal Food Law caused some manufacturers to completely transform their business, it made no more difference to us than if it had never been passed.

Two styles—granulated and shredded.

WHERE the GLASS JAR COMES IN

The glass jar in which Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa—and that only—is packed offers the entering wedge to a sale, because it is unusual.

No woman ever saw cocoa packed in glass before; the sight is novel; she asks about it, and if you help a little, she buys.

Bought once, Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa will always be bought again, for it has a flavor which has never been successfully imitated. Our exclusive making process removes the bad, develops the good, and the result is the smoothest, most delicious drinking cocoa on the market.

Croft & Allen Co.
PHILADELPHIA, PENNA.

Which Wins?

Consider these two grocers—

One is told he can make an unusual profit on a new Laundry Soap, through some free deal or other, and he buys the Soap and starts in to make it, 'though there's no demand.

By working like a slave he induces ten people in a week to buy it.

The other sticks to Babbitt's Best Soap, which has been standard for years, and for which there is a demand. Without any work at all he sells fifty cakes a week at a profit a trifle less than that promised on the new brand, 'though perfectly fair and satisfactory.

Which wins?

Our Scales Stand the Test

The new low platform No. 140 DAYTON Scale

The State of Massachusetts recently passed a new Law defining the duties of the Sealer of Weights and Measures, in connection with the computing devices used on computing scales.

Our modern up-to-date computing scales meet every requirement of the law and test out with greater exactness than any other known style or make.

Greater than this, however, is the test of service between merchant and customer. Merchants use them for the protection of profit and the saving of time. Customers trade where they are used because they know they are sure of a square deal.

Moneyweight Scales are an absolute necessity to the economical and successful retailing of meats and groceries. We build them on all the known principles of scale construction adaptable to all kinds of merchandising.

The increased confidence of the merchants of Massachusetts in our computing scales is shown by the enormous increase in sales since the law went into effect. We are strong advocates of laws which will give the greatest protection to both merchant and customer.

For those who are now using old Dayton Scales or computing scales of other make, and wish to bring their equipment up-to-date, we have a very attractive exchange proposition which will be sent on request.

Do not wait for our agent to call on you, but send for him.

DELAY IS EXPENSIVE.

Date.....

Moneyweight Scale Co., 35 State St., Chicago.

Next time one of your men is around this way, I would be glad to have your No. 140 Scale explained to me.

This does not place me under obligation to purchase.

The Tender Kernels of Fancy Corn

THE CORN WITHOUT HULLS

The Pressing & Orr Company
Norwalk, O.

This introduces to you our WINORR Brand of Canned Corn. In one vital respect it is wholly different from every other brand on the market.

The difference is in the fact that WINORR Corn has no hulls. We use in our canning a device that extracts the meat of the corn, and throws out the tough hulls. Result—a dream of tender corn kernels that your customers will go wild over.

A novelty like this gives a lot of help in selling a new thing.

We also pack canned Sauer Kraut, dry Mince Meat in cartons, and a Salad Dressing which is quite the fanciest thing on the market.

What You Want is Uniformity

When we launched Gurnse fancy print butter on the market we realized that the quality which the grocer most needed in butter was uniformity.

Gurnse never varies. It comes from our own dairies and so is under our supervision from the very beginning. From the churn to the carton it is relentlessly inspected, and when it finally passes the inspection of the Philadelphia Produce Exchange it can be accepted for as near perfect as butter can be.

Wrapped in brine-dipped wrapper.

It's the Cleanest Store in Town

The grocer whose customers say this of his place has accomplished something which will cause those who deal with him to forgive much. They will even pay him higher prices without grumbling just because the cleanliness of his place leads them to believe his goods are worth paying more for.

The grocer's dirtiest job is filling orders for oil and gasoline. He can't turn a faucet on or off, fill a measure and empty it into a receptacle without taking the odor to his counter. With our up-to-date tanks he touches nothing but a clean lever, the receptacle is filled automatically. A clean, sanitary, safe and economical way to handle a dirty job. Our booklet on this subject is an education in itself, would you like to read it?

The GREAT Ramly

Is the one spelled R-A-M-L-Y, the finest Turkish cigarette ever made to sell for 10 cents. So good, other cigarettes are made to look like it, so they will sell on the Ramly's reputation.

If you want to give your customers an ideal smoke, sell them the Ramly. You won't have to tell them about it the second time—they'll ask for it.

What Washing Powder Do You Sell?

Some old and half-forgotten brand, sold only because you always have sold it?

Or Snow Boy Washing Powder, a powder made of pure soap and other cleansing ingredients, quickly cleaning everything water won't hurt; containing none of the skin-eating alkalies that some of the old brands do; carrying beautiful and high-grade premiums to your customers?

There is room in your store for a good washing powder, but be sure that you handle the best.

Good Goods and Good Profits

LAUTZ BROS & CO. = Buffalo, N. Y.

Paste This in Your Hat

You must sell package coffee, for many of your customers won't have it loose on account of the things that get in it, and because of the loss of the aroma.

You can't sell as good a coffee as Ariosa at the same price, because there isn't any.

You don't have to sell Ariosa, we have done that for you—simply hand it out.

You make only your profit on other package coffees and you are not sure to please your trade. Ariosa pleases everybody who buys it and besides your profit you get vouchers with every case--vouchers which we will exchange for almost anything money will buy.

See What You Can Do With This

This W. & D. Special Combination Fixture temptingly displays bananas on the top tree, which revolves, and pickles in the tanks below. A space-saver, a constant salesman, an ornament. Oak or cherry, handsomely finished with nickel bolts and ball-bearing casters. Uses only two square feet of floor space.

Interesting price; write for it to-day.

Look At It and Taste It

The minute you see Nicelle Olive Oil you feel sure it's a high-grade article. The package is unique and exclusive—you can't associate poor goods with it.

Taste Nicelle Oil and you know it's high grade. Nowhere else have you met that rich smoothness, that delicate yet penetrating olive flavor.

Women have told us repeatedly that their salad dressing came quicker and better with Nicelle Oil than with any other brand they ever tried.

Give it a chance for your own good.

WALKER STORE FIXTURES

—Attract Good Trade—

There is so much to be said to the merchant about to buy new fixtures that we prefer to send our catalogue, which will set him wise on many points that he should know. Our designs and our workmanship are unsurpassed. Our customers write that they are more than pleased with the appearance of their stores.

WE KNOW HOW TO DESIGN ARTISTIC INTERIORS

We are ready at all times to offer suggestions covering any detail. And our catalogue is sufficiently explicit to make it both interesting and instructive. Send for it.

No Friends Among the Wheelwrights

Wheelwrights don't think much of the "J. M." delivery wagon; it doesn't make enough money for them. No wagon pays fewer visits to the repair shop, or makes its visits shorter.

The most celebrated delivery wagon made—the best wagon ever built for the grocery trade. Strong as iron, yet easy-running; finest steel tires, and wheels from second-growth hickory.

Stores That Look Like Junk Shops

No matter how hard you try to avoid it, your store will look like a junk shop if its shelves are overcrowded.

Of course you can overcrowd shelves supported by Baines' Brackets, but you won't reach the crowded point until you've got 25 per cent. more goods on the shelves than you can put on the old-fashioned shelves.

Baines' Brackets hold up shelves without the old-time uprights that eat up space. The whole, unobstructed shelf-length is available for goods. We've figured up the gain many times—it amounts to a clear increase in shelf room of 25 per cent.

No Umbrella Wanted

We don't want grocers to hold an umbrella over us.

If Murdoch's Corn and Laundry Starches were not as good as Trust starches, we shouldn't ask you to buy them simply because they were independent.

We do urge their independence, but only in connection with a most positive claim, that MURDOCH'S starches are better than Trust starches.

And we believe the average grocer, all things being equal, would rather buy goods from an independent than from a Trust.

Even Then You'd Make More

Franklin Carton Sugar, as you may know, costs a small fraction of a cent more than sugar in barrels. Do you hesitate to sell it because you fear that your trade might not be willing to pay more for carton sugar than for bulk sugar?

The enormous sales of Carton Sugar shows that you are wrong; but suppose you actually had to sell Franklin Carton Sugar, costing you, as it does, a shade more, at the same price as bulk sugar. We haven't the slightest doubt that even then you would make more money on Franklin Carton Sugar than you do on bulk sugar.

Considering the saving in work, the absence of overweight, and the fact that none of your profit is wasted by "good measure," we believe that there's no doubt about it. Think it over.

Clean, sanitary cartons that preserve strength and freshness. Two-pound cartons and 2, 5, 10, 25, 50 and 100-pound cotton bags : : :

M-A-O-F A-E-S

This isn't a foreign language—it is simply the greatest Baking Powder ever made spelled backwards—hold it in front of a mirror and you will know it's name if your customers haven't told you.

This is the only time this name has ever done anything but GO FORWARD, because, although the price is away below that of the Trust powders, a smaller quantity is a better leavener.

If you will write us we will show you how to get people WHO USED TO BE YOUR customers back to your store again.

FIT MATES FOR THE BEST BREAD MADE

After getting all the business on Freihofer's Bread we could possibly take care of, we sighed for other worlds to conquer, and started to make Macaroni, Spaghetti, Noodles and Pastels.

These goods are fit mates for Freihofer's Bread, and most grocers know what that is. We have done little or no advertising to consumers for them, preferring to spend that money with the grocer to make him friendly to us and really anxious to sell our goods.

So that every case contains Universal Coupons, which will buy any necessity or luxury a grocer can want.

Mr. Orem Scores Jobbers and Packers for Loose Canned Goods Business

In the Principal Address Made at the Canners' Convention He Puts Blame for Unbusinesslike Conditions on Buyer and Seller Alike. Convention Discusses New Ironclad Canned Goods Future Contract. Association's First Year's Accomplishments. Dr. Wiley's Views.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Cincinnati, Ohio, Feb. 7, 1908.

The first annual convention of the National Canners' Association opened in this city on Tuesday morning last, with an address of welcome by the Mayor of the city. The reply was delivered by J. C. Warvel, president of the Ohio Canners' Association.

The first business was the delivering of addresses by the presidents of the three organizations which unite in the National Canners' Association—George G. Bailey, of the National Canners; E. M. Long, Jr., of the Machinery Association, and W. A. Frost, of the National Brokers' Association.

President Bailey reviewed the first year's work of the association, which celebrates its first birthday with this convention. His address was in substance as follows:—

> The first official act of the National Canners' Association was the promulgation of a form of guaranty under the Federal Pure Food act, as to the purity of products sold, satisfactory to both the canners assembled in convention at Buffalo and a committee from the National Wholesale Grocers' Association, who met at Buffalo during convention week. So far as the speaker has knowledge, this guaranty has proven satisfactory to both buyer and seller of canned products throughout the United States since its adoption.
> By a resolution at the last meeting of the National Association, the officers of the past year opened correspondence with proper officials looking to the placing of canned goods on all treaties of reciprocity which may hereafter be adopted between the United States and foreign countries. The correspondence resulted in a letter from Secretary of State Root, in which he said:—
> > An effort will be made to comply as nearly as practicable with the wishes of your association. I should, however, call your attention to the fact that to secure tariff concessions from other countries it is necessary that the State Department should be empowered to give something in return, and, under existing laws, we have practically no power whatever to give any assurance of reciprocal benefit to other countries, except those which may be affected by the very meagre and narrow benefits possible under section 3 of the tariff act of 1897 relating to wines and spirits and their by-products.
> At various times canners' insurance has been under consideration, thoroughly investigated and with the assistance of Dr. Gustav Bissing, of the Chisholm-Scott Co., a plan of inter-insurance has been devised that your executive committee deems satisfactory and in every way more acceptable than any heretofore presented. It is now in full operation under the management of Mr. Lansing B. Warner.
> The association took an active part with other organizations and individuals in the protest against placing in effect until after the shipping season of 1907 the rule adopted by the transportation companies raising the minimum of carload weights. This action was so vigorous and the protest so emphatic that the request was granted and the rule not made effective until January 1st.
> The entire membership of this association should be heard as to the advisability of the demonstration for the purpose of showing the public the nutritious quality, purity and wholesomeness, the availability and economy of canned vegetables and fruits as food.

The chief paper of the afternoon session on Tuesday, and in fact of the entire session, was delivered by Hugh S. Orem, of the Booth Packing Co., Baltimore, Md. The subject was "Trade Ethics of Canner and Jobber." In part the address was as follows:—

> Trade relations between canner and jobber need re-adjustment. Evils exist in both branches. It is an open question whether or not the canner or the jobber is more sinned against than sinning.
> Merchants who knowingly and willingly render null and void their sacred obligations whenever it appears profitable or convenient so to do, are not the ones to manifest surprise and indignation if the one with whom they have had dealings invokes the power and majesty of the law, compelling them to perform that which is just and legally due. I am talking with you, gentlemen, now upon lines most interesting in the conduct of your business, and am confident that four-fifths of the contemplated actions at law, growing out of the refusal to accept the performance of contracts, would never have seen the light of an attorney's office had the buyer but rehearsed unto himself the precepts taught in the Golden Rule. A merchant having sold another merchant an invoice of goods, and upon the buyer refusing to accept them, the measure of damages in an action by the seller is the difference between the contract price and the price for which the seller sold them, or could have sold them, at the time specified. If a merchant declines to deliver to a buyer the full quantity of his purchase, the buyer's measure of damages in an action is the difference between that price at which he bought, or could have bought at the time specified. This is all that is necessary for us to know regarding the law of contracts, at least enough for this discussion.
> Scores of instances have been handed me, in which the canner has been subjected by subterfuge, inuendo and technical evasion on the part of a number of buyers who preferred to imperil their honor for the sake of temporary gain. It is not an answer to the question, how shall we reform these transgressions, to reply we must invoke the power of the courts. There is no lack or inability of the law to redress these wrongs. It is the stigma cast upon us by every jobber unacquainted with the circumstances, believing that goods have been shipped, knowing they were not performing contract requirements. All other jobbers with whom we are anxious to deal look upon the canner as the guilty party unless he can, at an enormous expense, prove himself innocent.
> The jobber, remember, is as anxious to buy the output of the canner as he is anxious to sell it to him; hence a contract should be made without any idea as to how it can be invalidated. The only fact regarded should be that an agreement or understanding has been entered into for the purchase and sale of merchandise, and this alone is all sufficient to one or the other, or both. It is not a question wherein the law makes one perform his obligations, but altogether a matter in which the inherent honesty of the principals engaged in the transaction shudder at the mere thought of doing that which they know to be wrong.
> Every order received by a salesman, every order emanating directly from the buyer—in whatever form he may elect to phrase it—when accepted by both principals in the transaction, becomes a contract, good, sound and sufficient in the eye of the law. It is men who make contracts. The law interprets them when in dispute and uses its power upon either principal who attempts to escape from their stated or implied terms. I boldly state that a contract breathing in its lines that old-fashioned honor for which our fathers stood, is a thousand times more valuable in the conduct of any business than the one couched in the most approved and ample legal style. I hold to the very comfortable opinion that among men there is more fidelity, rectitude and probity than perfidy, deception and trickery. This is neither idealism nor enthusiasm, neither is it the dream of fancy. The whole fabric of trade, commerce and finance is erected upon faith in men.
> We are compelled to say, but always without offense, the canner has contributed in a great degree to the existence of just such irregularities which he is most anxious to annul, by a position he has from time to time assumed, which cannot be commended for that sterling rectitude which he demands from his friend, the jobber. He frequently sells the fruit of the soil before the seed is planted or ere a blossom appears upon the vine, or a leaf upon the tree. He has been reckless and extravagant in promise; his performance has been incomplete and unfinished. Not content with the competition between man and man, he raises himself to sublime heights and enters into competition with Divine Providence. Oblivious of the potent fact that to make a rabbit stew he must first catch the rabbit, he widens the breach, keeps open the wound and lifts the lid of a veritable Pandora's box, out of which escape a thousand ills, by the indiscriminate selling of what is commonly known as "futures." This method of trading though it often occasions regret incites anger, provokes remorse, stirs up strife, creates dispute thrusting buyer and seller into a state of malevolence and mutiny, has a fascination and enchantment, into the whirlpool of which canner and jobber are continually drawn. Unmindful of its unhappy results, nor the arguments which have been presented against the custom, it goes steadily on with the years, and no signs are observed that it will be discontinued.
> Richard Roe traded largely in tomatoes during the season of 1907. He sold in March of that year, to various buyers, a total of 100,00 cases. When he began to pack the goods he also began to make sales at a lower figure than his future contracts stipulated Out went the goods, with not a single case laid aside to fill the orders accepted before the packing began. "It's time," says Richard, "to fill these future orders," and he progressed fairly well by shipping up to this date the full quantity ordered to each firm who had furnished him shipping instructions. Suddenly he discovered the end of the season was in plain sight, and that it was beyond human possibility to complete his contract of specified quality. Richard had an inventive mind. He sends samples to the remaining buyers of a quality greatly inferior to that which was purchased, with high-sounding phraseology in a letter, that the accompanying samples are sent for approval in order that no discussion will ensue as to quality after the tomatoes are received. "We decline to accept such trashy goods," writes the buyer, and Richard promptly told them they were in error as to the quality—that was all right; and since they had declined to receive that which he would ship, a cancellation of the contract had been asked, and he accordingly had acceded to the request, and the contract for the number of cases entered for their account had been cancelled. A broker in Chicago characterized Richard as a "welcher," whatever that means.
> Richard Roe, a canner, made large sales of future fruits, not a single tin was delivered; his entire pack, however, was sold at higher figures during the packing season to other firms than those who had bought prior to maturity of the fruit. His defense, or excuse, was that on account of unusual scarcity he could not pack the fruit except at a much greater cost than he had sold. He seemed to regard his default as a special reason for glorification, as it was impossible for any buyer to recover in an action at law because he was not possessed of any tangible assets. "Futures!" "Futures!" What crimes are committed in thy name.

Brooklyn Retailer's Organization Sued for Restraining Trade. Said to Have Tried to Have Non-members Cut Off. Rumpus Among Meat Companies. Local Option Movement Curtails Liquor Business. Small Items of Trade News.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

New York, Feb. 7, 1908.

An organization of retail grocers and other merchants in East New York is accused of conspiring to the injury of trade and commerce, and a hearing on the charge is set down for Tuesday next in the Jersey avenue court of Brooklyn. The association is the Retail Grocers' Protective Association. The president, M. Joroff, is to appear at the hearing in response to the complaint which is made by M. Lowenthal, who has a retail grocery store at Blake and Georgia avenues in Brooklyn.

Mr. Lowenthal obtained a summons yesterday, basing his case on a section of the Penal Code of this State. He claims that because he refused to join the association its officers are trying to break up his business by inducing wholesale dealers of various lines to refuse to sell him supplies. The officers, he claims, threaten the wholesalers with the loss of the trade of the members of the association unless such wholesalers cease their sales to him.

The association is said to have several hundred members, all in a suburban section of Brooklyn, which is built up like a separate city and officially known as East New York and popularly as Brownsville. The great majority of the population and of the business men are Hebrews. After the grocers formed the association, a few weeks ago, they decided to admit others besides retail grocers, so that it now comprises wholesalers of that part of the city, bakers, milk dealers and others.

The fact that the East New York grocers had formed an association did not attract any attention elsewhere until the present case was started. The prevalence of cut-rate methods of selling groceries in that part of the city is given as the main reason for organizing, the purpose being to devise means for getting the business upon a plane that would be more profitable and satisfactory all around.

According to the complainant, the association has been trying to prevent the 40 or 50 dealers who are not members from getting supplies through the usual wholesale channels. He says that the association has even tried to have him blacklisted by the big jobbing houses in New York and that as a result he has been put to much difficulty in making purchases.

A general denial of the charges as to doing anything in violation of the law is made by the officers of the association and the exact nature of the defense will doubtless be made known at the hearing.

The relations between Swift & Co., Schwarzschild & Sulzberger and the New York Butchers Dressed Meat Co. were ventilated in the Supreme Court yesterday when Justice Greenbaum handed down a decision refusing the application of Frederick Joseph and others for a mandamus permitting them to examine the books of the Sulzberger Co. Joseph was a former officer of the Sulzberger Co., who retired from that concern some time ago. In opposing the application, Sulzberger charged that while Joseph was an officer of the company he sold his stock to Swift & Co. and was engaged as a spy in giving information to the Beef Trust. Joseph's object in asking for a mandamus, it was charged, was to enable him to get further information for the Trust.

In denying the application, the justice says that he could not resist the conviction that the applicants desired the writ to further their interest in a rival company and for an ulterior purpose. The rival company is the New York Dressed Meat Co., whose stockholders are also in litigation, as related in a recent letter, one faction charging that the other is trying to turn over control of the business to the Trust.

Prohibition and temperance propaganda—upon the wine, liquor and beer interest, to which attention was called in a recent letter, has been quite extensively discussed by some of the papers here in the last week. A curtailment in the wine and liquor business has taken place it is admitted, and there have been some reductions in prices, especially of the higher priced brands. Some claim, however, that the business has not been curtailed any more than most other lines have been since the recent financial panic and that the Prohibition laws enacted in several of the States of late and the rules against drinking laid down by the managements of various railroads and other enterprises have not hurt the business, which, according to this view, will begin to boom again as soon as any other.

Some observers in the grocery trade see in recent developments indications that the application of the Federal food law will, for a time at least, turn even more than had been supposed on the matter of labels. It is claimed that the natural temptation of the manufacturer, who wishes to get around the law in some way, is to juggle with the label and defend his action by making fine distinctions. The officers charged with the enforcement of the law are said to have the opinion that such efforts are being made and will be made more and more persistently unless checked by the Government with firmness.

This is now given as a reason which led the President to start the scientific commission so as to leave the regular food bureau practically free to look after the routine and to pass on the labels. It is said to be less easy, however, to separate the question as to the quality of the product from that as to the accuracy of the label than had been anticipated.

Rudolph H. Kaht, the manager of a milk, butter and egg business at 49 Eighth avenue, filed Tuesday a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, showing liabilities of $10,765 and no available assets.

The Isaac W. Rushmore Co., of Brooklyn, was incorporated this week to deal in eggs, butter and cheese with an authorized capital of $100,000. Isaac W. and Robert Rushmore, of Plainfield, N. J., and Thomas Robinson, of New York, are the directors.

Quite a large representation from the West Side wholesale district has been in Cincinnati this week attending the convention of the National Canners' Association.

An effort will be made during the present legislative session at Albany to have the State garnishee bill so amended that it will be applicable to cases where the wages are $12 a week. At present the law applies only when the wages exceed $12. It is recognized that a large number of those who buy groceries on credit are paid $2 a day, and the argument is advanced that they should come within the provisions of the law, thus making it easier for them to get proper credit and at the same time protecting the merchant. Other changes are proposed for the purpose of extending the application of the law to some other lines besides groceries, including dental, surgical and medical attendance furnished, house rent, and possibly jewelry. While the grocers are not especially interested in the latter amendments, yet they must look to the amendments as a whole in order that nothing may creep into the law that will be detrimental to their interests or undo any part of what they have already accomplished. The law has been of great benefit to the grocers, as it stands, and the legislative representatives see that much care must be exercised in looking after amendments, so as to maintain the present advantages and to get further protection against dishonest debtors according as it seems practicable to do so.

Brazil Protests to United States Over Coffee Corner Charge.

Says Consul Slechta, Whose Statements Recently Appeared in the "Grocery World," Was Intemperate, False and Undiplomatic.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Washington, D. C.,
Feb. 7, 1908.

International complications between the United States and Brazil may result from the statements recently made regarding the Brazilian coffee corner, made by Deputy Consul-General Joseph J. Slechta, and reported in this correspondence of recent date. Formal protest has been made by the Brazilian Government to the State Department against the alleged, "intemperate, false and undiplomatic" reports made by Mr. Slechta as to the coffee situation and against his declaration that Brazil was trying to "corner the coffee market."

It is possible that Mr. Slechta will be asked to resign. Herman Sielcken, of the coffee firm of Crossman & Sielcken, of New York, has been appointed special commissioner by the Washington authorities to report on the matter.

Pittsburg (Pa.) Produce Combine Loses First Round.

Court Decides That It Must Go to Trial. So Far a Victory for the Retailer Who Began the Suit Against It for Controlling Food Prices.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Allegheny, Pa., Feb. 6, 1908.

The Pittsburg Produce Trade Association, against which W. H. Arbour, a local retailer, recently filed a bill in equity, alleging it to be an organization formed for the purpose of controlling food prices and maintaining a blacklist, must go to trial to disprove the contentions. The association, through its attorney, demurred to the bill, but the court has overruled the demurrer and on Tuesday entered an order compelling the association to file an answer within 30 days. It probably will be placed on the trial list in March.

In his suit against the association and the members individually Arbour asked to have the by-laws and the blacklist maintained by the association declared illegal. He asserts that every dealer in Pittsburg who buys a bill of goods from a member of the association must settle for it in full on the Monday following the purchase. If not paid the delinquent is placed on a blacklist.

It is alleged that these lists are prepared at noon of each Monday and sent to all of the members. Under the rules of the organization no member may sell goods for cash or credit to any delinquent until he pays his bill in full, it is declared. The association declares that the organization was formed for the purpose of protecting itself against persons who will not pay their bills. Arbour says he was refused credit from one of the members because it was alleged he had not paid his account, whereas he had paid it and held receipts to show that it was paid.

New Pennsylvania Grocery Concern.

Application will be made to the Governor of Pennsylvania, within the next few days, for a charter of a concern to be called the "Pennsylvania Merchandise Distributing Company." Its character and object, to quote from the charter, is "to buy, sell and deal in groceries, meats and provisions and other foodstuffs."

Inconsistency and Selfishness.

There is much reason to believe that great pressure is being brought to bear upon the Natural Food Co., manufacturers of Shredded Wheat Biscuit, to constrain it to relieve itself of the grossly inconsistent position in which it has placed itself in Philadelphia. As is generally known, the company, in defense of the principle that only jobbers should buy of it direct, cut off the Philadelphia Retail Grocers' Association, but continued to sell all the local chain-store concerns! From every quarter have come condemnations of this illogical course, many of them being from sources whence would have come only praise had the company cut off all members of the class alike.

Naturally every concern has a right to its own opinions, and in consistence with those opinions to conduct its business. The Natural Food Co. has a perfect legal and moral right to cut off all retail buyers if it likes, but whether it was good business to do so in the case at issue is another question. The Retail Grocers' Association and the chain stores all held the limited price on shredded wheat biscuit, and they distributed an enormous quantity of the goods. More, the holding of the limited price made their competition perfectly fair and harmless so far as regular jobbers were concerned. That emphasizes again the cold selfishness which has dominated the jobbers' attitude from the very beginning. One can excuse a merchant who plays a swinish trick to rid himself of a competitor whose competition he cannot meet, but to underhandedly attack a competitor who has deliberately sacrificed the advantage of selling below him is a filthy thing to do.

Backbiting.

There is a vast deal of vicious backbiting among some of the local jobbers just now, over who is really responsible for the attacks upon the organized retail trade. The affair has unusual complications. To begin with, there is the Wholesale Grocers' Association of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware, to which belong all Philadelphia jobbers except three or four, and there is also a local league of jobbers, which has no connection with the other association, but which comprehends practically all Philadelphia jobbers, including the few not members of the Wholesale Grocers' Association.

As asserted in a recent issue, both these organizations are working to have the retailers' buying exchanges cut off. That is, a few ringleaders of each are. The great bulk of the membership did not authorize the campaign, do not sympathize with it and repudiate it wherever they can. That is where the backbiting comes in—the salesmen of the really responsible ringleaders of both concerns have religiously circulated among the retail trade the fact that all the jobbers were members and all tarred with the same stick. That was in order to save themselves trade, but it has not worked. In several cases known to the writer, salesmen for the leaders in the jobbers' movement, in order to conciliate angry retailers and save threatened trade, have vigorously denied that their employers had anything to do with the matter. On the strength of this defense orders have been given, but instantly revoked on later true information.

The jobbers are unfortunate in having among their leaders certain men whom nobody trusts, who will betray even their co-workers whenever profit pleads and who even now are dealing a double hand. This sort of a thing will disrupt any campaign.

The Sausage Decision.

The tentative decision by the Michigan Court on the sausage case is a most interesting pronunciamento. What it says in substance is that sausage in its original form comprehended only chopped meat and seasoning, and all efforts to cause it to depart from that form—in a direction which surely meant no improvement—are to be combated.

It is greatly to be deplored—this tendency on the part of manufacturers to depart from the good old sterling ways of preparing foods. Some of these ways are ways of improvement, but the addition of cereal to sausage is not one of them. For many years it has been used almost everywhere as a filler, but only to suit the manufacturer's convenience and save him money, not at all to improve the quality of the product.

In some States the use of cereal in sausage is permitted, but in no case can the product be sold as "sausage." In New York State, for instance, the label where cereal is present must read "Pork, Beef and Flour" or "Pork and Beef Sausage, Cereal Added." Naturally, so labeled the cereal acquires a legal status just as glucose in a syrup that is labeled "compound."

The Tomato Pack Questioned.

In a recent issue the "Grocery World" reproduced some rather severe remarks by the Chicago "Canner" upon the "American Grocer's" estimate of the pea pack, in which it was charged that the latter journal had understated the 1907 pack by nearly a million cases! Considerable skepticism is now being expressed throughout the tomato industry over the estimate of the last tomato pack which both the "American Grocer" and the "Canner" agreed upon, viz., about 13,500,000 cases. A well-known Chicago canned goods broker sent the following letter to tomato authorities in every packing district:—

Chicago, Jan. 16, 1908.

Gentlemen:—We would like to have your opinion as to the trade paper statistics of the 1907 tomato pack. The estimate of 13,500,000 cases seems to us greatly exaggerated in view of the fact that early in the season the prospects were very unfavorable for even a medium pack, and that no progress in packing was made until two or three weeks before the close of the season.

You will remember that early in the season the market ran up to $1.00 and even $1.05, and Indiana was reported very short, with packers buying to cover their contracts. This extraordinary estimate made by the trade papers is rather confusing to us and we would like to have your opinion on it.

Are there any tomatoes still in the hands of the packers, or have they been pretty well shipped out? Are there any stored in the warehouses of Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York?

W. J. Tilghman & Company.

Replying to this came letters from all parts of Maryland, New Jersey, New York and Philadelphia, some strongly questioning the truthfulness of the figures, others flatly denying them, none agreeing with them in toto. In every answer it was agreed that the stock of tomatoes in packers' hands is smaller than for many years. From this it was argued that such a condition could have been caused only by one or both of two conditions: 1, a small pack, and 2, an unusual consumption. It is known definitely that there has been no unusual consumption, and that packers' stocks are extremely light, so that with these two conditions existing at the same time the pack simply could not have been as large as it was reported.

It is just another evidence of the worthlessness of pack report figures.

After Tobacco Trust's Coupon Scheme.

Representative Tawney, of Minnesota, chairman of the Appropriations Committee of the House, during the week reopened his fight on the Tobacco Trust by reintroducing his bill to impose a Federal tax on the issuance of all prize coupons accompanying cigars and packages of tobacco in whatever form, also snuff. The object of the bill is not to raise revenue for the Government, but to put a stop to the prize-giving practice by which the Tobacco Trust is enabled to eliminate competitors from the field. The bill is offered purely in the interests of the independent tobacco men.

Mr. Orem Scores Jobbers and Packers for Loose Canned Goods Business

These instances are clear enough to demonstrate the part the canner has played in creating a resentment in the minds of the jobber, inducing him to bide his time, awaiting an opportunity to repay in the same kind of coin, regardless if the canner be innocent or guilty, or, if, indeed, any business has ever been transacted with him. Consumed with rage at the uncharitable treatment received, he strikes, not always where he means to land, but at the harmless and inoffensive, who, in consequence return the blow. And thus, back and forth, like a bounding ball, the merry war goes on.

There is no law that can be enacted which will prevent a man from stealing; the law only punishes offenders and makes examples of them, to restrict or restrain the growth of crime. Our suggestion to punish is offered, not with a desire to injure, but only as a matter of protection to ourselves. Self-preservation is the first law of nature. Hence, when a jobber subjects himself to condemnation by the flagrant violation of his agreement, every canner in the United States, member of this association, should be so advised. A detail of the transaction should be written, accompanied by an affidavit certifying to its facts, and sent to the executive committee. This committee, after impartial judgment and deliberation, finding the facts true as represented, shall, in some manner, not contrary to law, inform the membership. I am informed that such a proceeding is not in the nature of restraint of trade, and that these methods are pursued by any number of exchanges throughout the country trading in grain, provisions, cotton and other lines.

How shall we correct the habit of rejecting goods upon arrival and refusing to accept at contract price when the market declines? I answer at once. "By arbitration." Two years ago I recommended this in convention. I believed it then; I am convinced now. It is, therefore, recommended that we immediately get into close and harmonious business relations with the jobber, in the effort to agree upon a contract acceptable to both. The salient points of which shall be that Richard Roe sells to John Doe the minimum quantity specified fruits or vegetables for delivery within a limited specified time, at a certain price and terms guaranteed to comply with the National Food and Drug Acts, said delivery to mean every case nominated in the contract. Then the usual proviso as to the destruction of place of business by fire or flood, or any other act of God. Concluding with the clause that in the event of the buyer or seller declining to perform this contract for any reason set forth the same shall be referred to a board of arbitration for settlement. Each party to deposit a fixed sum to cover the expense of said arbitration. The whole expense to be borne by the one against whom a decision is rendered, said decision to be final and absolute. The deposit to be returned to the one in whose favor the decision is found.

As to futures, please remember it is the indiscriminate selling which causes the breach of contracts. We would restrict their sale. A canner contracting to sell a certain number of cases of fruits or vegetables must know that the entire quantity sold must be packed and supplied no matter what the crop may be. His delivery must be full, complete and entire 100 per cent. It appears to me to be foolish that a contract for the sale of 10,000 cases of peas should contain a proviso, "if 75 per cent. of the quantity stated shall be delivered the contract is thereby fully performed." Contracts with this proviso are quite popular in many States. It does not require the logic of Aristotle to demonstrate that the canner must in any event deliver 7,500 cases on this contract. He knows he must; he believes he can. It is incomprehensible to me that a man will agree to deliver a certain quantity of merchandise provided his buyer will agree to accept a certain quantity less.

The address of E. M. Lang, Jr., president of the Machinery and Supplies Association, was devoted to an exposition of the rapid development of the canning industry through the improvement of canning machinery.

At the second day's session the most interesting feature was an address by Dr. H. W. Wiley, who is popular with the canners. The address in part was as follows:—

In considering canning methods and progress, first of all is the problem of raw material and its proper selection that food which needs sterilization and Pasteurization for its proper preparation for consumption. The great Appert discovered the process, but it remained for Pasteur and others to show that he was in error in supposing the exclusion of air was the secret of it all. Now it is pretty clearly established that foods may be preserved with all their natural succulence retained so as to be available throughout the entire year. Chief in the essentials is care in selection of raw materials. I do not believe as some do that only one grade, the highest, should be allowed to be packed. Nature herself has provided various grades, and it is proper that the consumer should have a scope for selection; but it is necessary that these goods be so packed as to make it possible for the consumer to distinguish between qualities. In the past it may have been possible for the manufacturer with expert information to distinguish the first from the inferior grades, but the consumer was entirely in the dark. If this is done there should be no objection to the saving of all nutritious portions of the material and their preparation into foods. Tomato skins and cores and the broken heads and stems of French mushrooms are canned and sold quite properly, but it was wrong, as formerly prevailed, to sell the mushroom stems and broken heads as "hotel mushrooms" to deceive the customer.

Don't waste anything, but put it up under its rightful name, was the doctor's demand. If tomato pulp can be sold at 75 cents and $3.25 a barrel, there is room for both grades. But the consumer should be enabled to distinguish between them.

Tin, which is iron or steel with a tin coating, is unquestionably the best and cheapest package containing material available and in this material great progress has been made. No longer is loose solder found in the can. No longer the results of galvanic erosion due to the action of acids in the foods upon the imper-

If You Want Dividends From Our Money

Here is what we honestly believe to be the very best line of tinned meat products packed—the "Veribest" line.

There is strength in a full line. It is not only a good deal more systematic to handle one manufacturer's line, instead of the corned beef of one and the ox tongue of another, but it is self-protective.

You are dealing with one concern instead of four or five.

This is true always, provided it is a good line. The "Veribest" line has to be good. Even if we weren't good enough business men to make it as good as it could possibly be made on general principles, the Government inspection would.

These are superfine products, and they always will be superfine. To sell them is to get dividends from the most extensive meat advertising in the world.

fectly coated metals of the can; but either a sanitary coated tin or one with a mechanically sealed container perfectly homogeneous in its surface, it is a step forward.

All these materials which go into the container are steadily advancing, and it is a matter which affects the canner, trader and consumer alike. Cheaper materials for containers must be found and are steadily being found by improved processes and study. Glass would be ideal but for its cost and susceptibility to breakage. For larger packages of bulk, wood containers may be practical, but are not available for serving the consumer. My laboratory has succeeded in putting up forty or fifty gallons of fruit juices in barrels and by sterilization kept them perfectly sweet and free from fermentation, while California wine producers had reported having kept unfermented grape juice for fully five years. But tin is to-day the most convenient package for the consumer, and the supply should be conserved, old tins reclaimed and every effort made to keep the cost down within reasonable limits Stirring and the application of a reasonable degree of heat which would not destroy the natural flavor of the fruit have superseded the old method of heating till the sterilization slowly worked from surface to centre and practically destroyed the natural flavor of the food. The nearer to natural the food manufacturer can produce his goods, the better will be their sale and their success. The age of canned goods is not the important subject. The consumer has a preference for goods which are comparatively fresh.

I do not believe, as some do, that properly canned goods which may happen to be more than one season old are unfit for use, but so long as the consumer pays the bill he is entitled to consideration and has a right to expect that what he buys today shall be the product of the 1907 crops. To equalize supply and demand carrying over surpluses is admittedly essential from a mercantile standpoint, but the consumer has a right to know the facts. I believe that, in spite of the manufacturers' established prejudice against dating canned goods, a step forward has been taken in this respect.

Next, there is the mutiplicity of food laws, established in 46 or 47 distinct sovereignties. No one would change the individuality of such States, but the interest of the manufacturers demands that when they all pass laws they shall endeavor to make them comparatively uniform in order that a legal standard or a definition of adulteration or misbranding in one State shall also be that in the others. Personally, I regret that the various States have been so eager to re-enact the Federal law before it had been thoroughly tried out or passed on by the Supreme Court. I hope it was wise law, but when, after two years of constant study, I am unable to read it without discovering each time a new point on which to make more trouble for the manufacturer, I do not believe it was altogether wise to absorb it at once. I would like to have had at least one legal test of it. However, I believe that the fight for uniformity has already been a step forward. Another important factor is the food official, who has come with the new laws. There are in the country to-day, outside the Federal departments, not less than two hundred or three hundred food officials and with the departments considered about one thousand. These officials should be considered. They have their rights, just as the manufacturer and the consumer have. Yet there is decidedly too much criticism. The speaker frankly declared that if manufacturers and others ever expect to have the food laws amended they will not accomplish it by abuse. Personally I am not disturbed by and have lost no sleep nor missed any meals, but some of my colleagues were thinner skinned and are disposed to sit up and take notice of the attacks on them and it is not likely to be favorable notice of those who assail them. In fact, it retards the end which the critics aim to have accomplished. These officials have come, and have come to stay.

During the morning session President Bailey announced the appointment of a committee to confer with the committee of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association regarding a uniform contract for canned goods. This committee comprises L. A. Sears, of Chillicothe, Ohio, as chairman; J. P. Olney, of New York; C. I. Bentley, of California; L. J. Risser, of Illinois; J. W. Cuykendall, of Iowa; W. R. Roach, of Michigan; W. O. Hoffacker, of Delaware; S. F. Sherman, of New York; C. T. Moses, of Maine, and Charles Stevens, of New Jersey.

A hot discussion developed over the proposed adoption of a canned goods contract which shall also be adopted by the National Wholesale Grocers' Association. The discussion developed the fact that there is an element in the Canners' Association opposed to the adoption of any uniform contract at all.

On Wednesday a committee from the National Wholesale Grocers' Association appeared before the convention and offered the following form of contract which had been approved by the National Wholesale Grocers' Association:—

This form was laid on the table, and the committee whose appointment is above reported will try to reach some compromise with the wholesale grocers.

Apropos of the question of contract, Mr. Walter O. Hoffacker, president of the Tri-State Packers' Association (Delaware, Maryland and New Jersey) made an address which was in effect a plea for arbitration between packers and grocers in enforcing canned goods contracts. He stated first that his association was opposed to the form of contract proposed. In part his address was as follows:—

> At a meeting of the Peninsula Horticultural Society two weeks ago, the great Pennsylvania Railroad corporation sent a committee asking that it appoint a committee on arbitration, to meet a like committee representing their corporation, to settle all questions of differences touching the shipment of fruits and other products. Upon what times have we fallen, gentlemen, when a great corporation like this shall send a committee to a horticultural society meeting with such a request. I hail this action as a good omen.
> The question may be raised, why the need of arbitration if all canners and all buyers, jobbers and wholesale grocers, retailers, etc., were honest and square in their business relations with each other. Well, this ideal condition does not yet exist, and if it did, it would not necessarily preclude the possibility of a difference between seller and buyer, which difference could be adjusted by arbitration.
> Let us suppose a case: A packer sells A an invoice of tomatoes as extra standards. On arrival A claims they are not extra standards, but only ordinary standards. The packer affirms they are what he obligated to deliver, namely extra standards. A is emphatic in his opinion, and mark you, honestly so, that they are not what he bought and declines to receive them. The packer is equally emphatic in his opinion and equally honestly so, that they are just what he sold. I submit whether I have not stated a perfectly reasonable illustration, and one, too, that not only can happen, but does happen over and over again. How can these two equally honest, sincere and square men settle this differences? One or the other must yield, or there is no settlement. Who is to be censor, as our business is now conducted, in deciding what constitutes a standard tomato?
> A standard tomato in Cincinnati should be a standard tomato in Chicago, New York, Baltimore, everywhere in the United States, and this applies alike to all the staple articles of canned goods. Some basis upon which to stand should be fixed. It is so with other products and commodities, why should it not be so with canned goods? We present the anomaly of goods sold as standards and the various gradations therefrom, with no clearly defined basis to constitute a standard from which to establish these various grades. The wonder under such conditions is, not that we have rejections, but rather that rejections are so few.
> I confidently believe, Mr. President, if we would put this principle of arbitration into actual practice, the great body of splendid men who constitute the distributers of our products would meet us in a like spirit, and a great step in advance will have been taken. I submit that the time for action is ripe. I believe the canning industry is on.

President Walter A. Frost, of the National Canned Goods and Dried Fruit Brokers' Association, argued for a uniform contract which should contain a clause providing for arbitration.

Another interesting address was that by Lansing B. Warner, of Chicago, advocating a plan for mutual fire insurance among the canners. The claim was made that the old line companies were charging the packers exorbitant prices.

From a technical standpoint a most instructive address was delivered by Albert T. Bacon, of Chicago, on the great importance of each packer knowing the cost of his goods in the finished form. His paper dealt with this and with the best methods of securing this information.

On Thursday, practically the convention's final day, the uniform contract to govern canned goods sales was again taken up and turned down finally.

This matter of uniform contract has been recognized as the most important matter to come up before the convention, and the whole country has hoped that uniformity would be secured, but when immediately after it was brought up in the convention here on Tuesday the canners from various sections came out so forcibly against it and a committee known to be hostile to any such plan was chosen to confer with the committee of National Wholesale Grocers it was practically a foregone conclusion that nothing would be accomplished. Since then several conferences have occurred, but without success. At Thursday morning's session the canners' committee reported that it had not approved the grocers' suggestion, and a form which it presented to the convention had been rejected by the wholesalers' committee.

The convention did, however, adopt a form of contract, but it amounted to nothing because not acceptable to the Wholesale Grocers' Association.

The last address was by C. H. Bentley, of the California Fruit Canners' Association, which dealt with the tariff and the canned goods industry. He said in part:

> It has been the intent of our Government to encourage foreign trade not merely to increase our wealth and encourage employment of labor, but to bring the greater stability in the market that comes with the wider distribution, and to secure the comparative safety from contraction of trade and panics in our domestic market. With this in view the Government has given up the "drawback" law which enables a manufacturer who exports a product in which an imported dutiable article has been used to secure a refund of a larger portion of the duty originally paid on such articles. While this has given a measure of encouragement, the law does not offset the disadvantages of a high tariff, even so far as securing foreign trade is concerned.
> In the canning industry to secure drawback on tin and sugar, the manufacturer must anticipate long in advance the volume of his export business in order that his cans may be made of imported plate and the goods packed with imported sugar. He must file an affidavit in advance, showing what goods he intends to manufacture for export and must present affidavits and vouchers covering the exact importations of the tin and sugar from which the materials were drawn, tracing its ownership to himself beyond the peradventure of a doubt in the mind of the Treasury officers. As the Government only refunds a portion of the duty in drawback, and as there is more or less trouble, delay and expense involved in its collection, the packer who exports directly must take a long chance on the market, for if the foreign trade does not materialize the goods packed with the more expensive imported sugar and tinplate can only be sold at a loss to the domestic trade.
> Coming to the exporting commission houses and wholesale grocers, on whom we largely depend for the distribution of our products, the drawback law is of little value for the reason that their foreign trade can hardly be anticipated—the parcels are small—making the trouble and expense of collecting drawback almost prohibitory, while the technical rules created by the officials of the Treasury Department have in many cases destroyed the evident intent of the act of Congress.
> It is the plain duty of Congress—as it should serve the commercial and social welfare of the nation—to appoint in the present session of Congress an expert non-partisan tariff commission, which shall prepare a revision of the tariff schedules and a consistent tariff policy. The work should be done as speedily as will be consistent.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Charles S. Crary, of Hoopeston, Ill.; first vice-president, L. A. Sears, of Chillicothe, Ohio; other vice-presidents—the presidents of the various allied societies; executive committee, the above and W. R. Roach, of Hart, Mich.; H. S. Orem, of Baltimore, and G. G. Bailey, of Rome, N. Y.; secretary and treasurer, Frank E. Gorrell, of Bellair, Md.

The next convention will be held at Chicago.

The following resolutions were adopted on the last day:—

> Whereas, The National Canners' Association in convention assembled desires to express the sincere thanks and appreciation to Dr. H. W. Wiley, Chairman of the Board of Food and Drugs Inspection, for not only his excellent address which was delivered yesterday, but as well to recognize the genuine and hearty support that he has given the canners in producing pure food, food which, while not only nutritious and appetizing, is taken by the consumer without question as to its healthfulness.
> Since we first met Dr. Wiley two years ago, there have been numerous occasions when representatives of this body have been before him in their official capacity, and his opinions have always been given so cheerfully and in such a plain manner that there was no possible reason to misunderstand the attitude of the Department on any given question; therefore, be it
> Resolved, That we desire to add our unqualified indorsement of the efforts of those who are charged with the enforcement of the pure food law, and that it is the sense of this convention that we again go on record as most heartily approving this law; and
> Resolved, That it is the sense of this convention that our Executive Committee get in touch with those States of the Union that are at present contemplating the passage of pure food laws and urge upon them the necessity of following Dr. Wiley's excellent suggestions in making them conform with the national law.

The National Brokers' Association elected the following officers

Window-Dressing Articles Wanted

For several months the "Grocery World" has been looking for the right man to take charge of its "Window-Dressing Department" and contribute a good, suggestive weekly article. We have tried several, but none was exactly what was wanted.

We will now attempt to get these articles from our subscribers, probably every one of whom has some technical knowledge of window-dressing. What we want is articles clearly describing window displays that can be made by the average retailer; not necessarily new or original—in fact, those which have been used successfully are perhaps preferable to all others.

For all acceptable articles, the "Grocery World" will pay an average price of $5 each. All matter sent in under this arrangement should be addressed to the "Window-Dressing Department." If drawings are also sent they should be made throughout in black ink (not pencil).

on Friday: President, Walter A. Frost, of Chicago; first vice-president, E. Clay Shriner, of Baltimore, Md.; second vice-president, F. L. Deming, of Chicago, third vice-president, F. A. Alpin, of New York; secretary, J. L. Flannery, Jr., of Chicago; treasurer, H. C. Gilbert, of St. Louis; directors, one year, Joseph L. Durney, of San Francisco, and Mr. Buse, of Pittsburg; two years, Harvey M. Holt, of Boston, and B. P. Boswell, of New Orleans; three years, William Silver, of Aberdeen, Md., and C. S. Jones, of Peoria, Ill.

The National Food Manufacturers' Association also met and elected officers as follows: President, Louis Hirsch, of St. Louis; vice-presidents, Walter H. Williams, of Detroit; T. J. Riordan, of New York, and Frank R. Meyer, of St. Louis; secretary, E. C. Johnson, of Boston; treasurer, William H. Ritter, of Philadelphia; executive committee, T. J. Carroll, of Gloucester, Mass.; W. P. Anderson, of Rochester, N. Y.; Fred. Field, of South Easton, Mass.; E. O. Grosvenor, of Detroit, and H. H. Logan, of Boston.

The Machinery and Supplies Association held its annual meeting on Friday, which closed the convention.

Last Year's Salmon Pack Below 1906.

The pack of canned salmon during 1907 for the whole coast was 4,015,169 cases, as compared with 3,817,316 cases for 1906. There was a decrease of 161,873 cases of Red Alaska as compared with 1906, also of 137,427 cases in Sockeyes. The pack of Pinks and Chums Alaska was 457,450 cases larger than last year and exceeded that of any previous year. The pack in Alaska has been exceeded in only one other year, that of 1902, when the big Pacific Packing and Navigation Company was in its palmy days, the output that season being some 260,000 cases higher.

Heart-to-Heart Talks With Grocery Clerks

"Mutual Aid Sheets" Which a Large Eastern Retail Grocer Tucks in Each Clerk's Weekly Pay Envelope. Some Advice From the Head of the House on Selling Goods and Other Subjects.

[The "Grocery World" has come into possession of a series of "Mutual Aid Sheets," which are weekly little talks issued regularly to its clerks by one of the large retail grocery stores of the East. The talks are typewritten and a copy is enclosed in each clerk's pay envelope. They are so soundly practical and so useful generally that it is this journal's purpose to publish them weekly or bi-weekly for the edification of other clerks as well as other grocers who have clerks.—ED]

STICK TO THE "LETTER" OF THE ADS.

In other words there must be no juggling, no twisting things around. When a no-profit price is advertised let it go. Don't push your commission goods instead. Don't run down the very thing we're using as a business bringer. Don't you see that by doing this you kill the very spirit of the ad. That's where many cut-price stores show their weakness.

TEA BLUNDERS.

You make a mistake when you push your Ceylon tea on an Oolong drinker, and vice versa. Be very careful about this. Find out the kind of tea your customer uses. In our opinion no tea grows that possesses the character of the selected Ceylon. Yet to the uneducated palate it's simply rank. It's up to you to find out her kind. Suit her. That's one of your big duties—individually.

THE QUESTION OF SOAP.

You can sell more of our own soap at 6 for 25 cents. That's the people's price. We have a full-size cake and we have a piece of goods that's right in every respect.

BAKING POWDER.

Under our own brand we are selling a pure cream of tartar powder. It is positively the same as Royal. People call for Royal out of habit. Meet the habit. You're taking no chances. It depends on how much earnestness you put into your argument in order to divert the baking powder business our way.

TALK TOMATOES.

Talk canned spinach; talk peas and beans. People really want these things. It's the season for them. They're on everybody's table. If ours aren't represented on these tables the fault isn't with the eaters—the fault is with us.

"BE READY."

Being ready is a great thing. No matter how busy you may be in reality give the impression to the customer that "you're ready." If she has the money and the order drop your other work. She has in her pocketbook the material that keeps the business alive—the real fuel.

POINT OUT THE CASHIER.

We note occasionally that a customer doesn't know where to turn when you hand over your check. This is wrong. In every instance point to the cash desk.

Get the habit. Say "thank you" when you give her the check.

Mail Order Action Over Black Book Dismissed.

Judge William Lochren, in the Federal Court of Minnesota, sustained the demurrer brought by nineteen defendant lumbermen to the indictment brought at the instance of fifteen retail mail-order houses charging conspiracy to defraud by use of the United States mails. The decision brought to a close the cases resultant from the publication of the "little black book." The defendants were discharged and the bondsmen released. The decision was not based on technical flaws in the indictment, but on the merits of the case itself. The court held that the twelve letters and post cards alleged in the indictment to have been sent the complainants with the purpose of effecting a conspiracy could not legally be interpreted as having had that intent. There could be no fraud without misrepresentation, the court held, and there was no evidence of misrepresentation proved in the communications mailed the catalogue houses asking for catalogues, price-lists and samples.

AMONG THE TRADE.

Mr. W. D. Peck, formerly local manager for the Diamond Match Co., has been appointed Philadelphia representative for the Ohio Match Co. Mr. Peck is considered one of the best posted match men in the entire East. The Ohio Co. is the Trust's principal competitor.

Not many of the local trade went to the Cincinnati Canners' Convention.

The incorporated concern of James & Washington, merchandise brokers, has reorganized on account of the death of T. A. James. The James interest has been disposed of. Samuel B. Haines has acquired some stock and has been elected vice-president. M. L. James, a brother of T. A. James, is secretary and treasurer, and George S. Washington is president and active manager.

Hothouse tomatoes are scarce and command 25 cents per pound. The demand is good.

It Pays to Be Square.

Five or six years ago the writer was in the vicinity of Sixteenth and Catharine streets, this city, when he saw a sign over the door of a little converted private dwelling which read, Miller & England, grocers' and drug fixtures. Never having heard of such a concern, he went in to look around. He found two young men, Messrs. Miller & England, who constituted the firm, with overalls on covered with wood dust, working as hard as any of their little staff of men. Today these two young men have a big factory at Seventieth and Woodland avenue, and they are called upon by the biggest and most particular concerns in this city when they want fine woodwork and artistice fixtures. Their success has been due primarily to two things, one a thorough working knowledge of their business, and their square dealings with their customers.

Any grocer, in fact anybody, who wants artistic fixtures or woodwork of any character done right, at a reasonable price, is absolutely certain to be pleased with an association with this firm.

THE SCIENCE OF ADVERTISING

This Department is devoted to the criticism of advertising matter sent in, to the devising of new advertising ideas for special occasions, upon request, and to the suggesting of original advertisements when data is supplied. All communications sent in for this Department should be addressed to the Editor of Science of Advertising. They will be filed in their order and taken up according to strict rotation.

There has been sent into this department a grocery circular prepared and issued eighteen years ago. The firm issuing it was Charles H. Wessels & Son, who at that time conducted a retail store at Twelfth and Diamond streets, Philadelphia. They are long since out of business. I am asked to say how the circular compares with those issued under present conditions. It is an 8-page affair, very well printed on good quality paper, and as a matter of fact is rather a catalogue than a circular. The only reading matter in it is a few lines on the eighth page which read as follows:—

Housekeepers are frequently perplexed as to what to have for meals.

By keeping this list for reference it will somewhat lessen the difficulty and also aid them in making up their orders.

Jobbing orders or quantities for monthly supplies, subject to discount.

While this circular is extremely well gotten up, it does not constitute good advertising, in my judgment, except so far as any simple price-list can constitute good advertising. The circular, as a matter of fact, well illustrates the progress retail advertising has made in the last twenty years. To-day almost no purely neighborhood grocer would go to the expense of issuing a simple price-list as elaborate and expensive as this. His advertising is now usually of a totally different character—a few prices, perhaps, but usually with some reading matter in connection. Modern grocery advertising has an element of persuasiveness about it that was wholly lacking in the old style, and this has been brought about in my judgment just as much by growing competition as by the growth of advertising as a science.

I think very likely it would be interesting to reproduce some of the prices quoted in this circular, in order that the readers hereof may make mental comparison with their own present prices:—

Must Declare Cereal in Sausage in New York State.

The following notice has been sent out to the Government meat inspectors doing duty in New York City:—

Your attention is also called to the instructions on page 5 of "Instructions Concerning Trade Labels under the Meat Inspection Law and Regulations," dated September 12, 1906, as follows:—

"If any flour or other cereal is used, the label must so state. If any other meat product is added the label must so state; for example, 'Pork and Beef Sausage,' 'Pork, Beef and Flour' (or other cereal); or 'Pork and Beef Sausage, Cereal Added.'"

Wherever local or interstate shipments of sausage or other meat food products containing cereal are packed in closed boxes which bear the meat inspection stamp and no trade label is used, you will see to it that each box bears a stencil showing that cereal has been used. It is noted that the labels on samples taken for chemical examination by the collector do not always show whether a cereal has or has not been used in the preparation of the product. Inspectors will be expected hereafter to inform the collector whether or not cereal has been used in the preparation of the products collected for chemical examination, and to see that the Regulations and Instructions concerning the use of cereals are enforced.

Doesn't This Date Tell You Something?

This is the date Knight's Cooking Extracts first decorated grocers' shelves. Time, skill and experience combined have added to the perfection of these goods each year. If an old lady or a child is sent for a cooking extract without being told to get a certain brand, they'll ask for Knight's by instinct. FIVE PRESIDENTIAL ADMINISTRATIONS DRANK OUR COFFEES

This house was established in 1796, while Washington was President, and it is therefore the oldest coffee house in the United States.

We have supplied the White House with coffee during five administrations.

All of which we cite simply to show that we are worthy of your confidence.

We were the first house to pack coffee in one-pound tins, and in that form we pack Sterling coffee, which in all our long experience has proved acceptable to more classes of trade than any other blended coffee we have ever known. A rich, mellow, fragrant coffee, full weight, and with all its strength retained by the air-tight tin.

Other leading brands are Victor, Delmonico Blend and Somerset Club. They range from medium and choice grades to strictly fancy, high-grade Private Estate. More about these brands in future advertisements.

I Called Him a Liar.

I've been a lot interested in what the "Grocery World" has printed lately about the fact that it's legal to tell little lies in the course of business.

In the way of bragging up your goods and all that.

You know it's an old theory of mine that modern business couldn't be carried on if every man told the strict truth. I've brought that out several times and every time some fellow comes forward and tells me I ought to be ashamed of myself; that business can be done without lying, and so on.

All the same, I know I'm right.

I gave a turn the other day to an old merchant that I can afford to get fresh with occasionally. He's a third cousin of my wife's and he and I have always been chummy.

He's an all-right old fellow. Don't do much with religion but is as straight as a string. Prides himself on giving everybody a square deal and does it. Wouldn't lie to save a thousand dollars.

My old cousin's store is in a busy little place about two hours from Pittsburg. There are several other grocers in the place. I often go there and I know the town pretty well.

I was in the store last Wednesday, while he was waiting on some customers. He has a peculiarly full, heavy voice, and you can hear him talking as far as you can see him.

Cousin Ben sells a certain package Ceylon tea that he has packed for him under his own label. It's just an ordinarily good tea—any grocer who has a good trade can get it.

He was selling some of this tea to a woman while I was in there.

"Yes, indeed, ma'am," the whole town doubtless heard him say, "that is the very finest grade of Ceylon tea grown."

She said something I couldn't hear, probably that the other local stores sold Ceylon tea, too, judging from his answer.

"But none of it's like this, Mrs. ———," he said, "this is really a very superior article, my word on it."

She bought some and went out. Cousin Ben moved over to another customer. She wanted some large prunes. He sold her some. They looked like 40s or 50s, and while he was digging 'em out she commented on their fine appearance.

"Finest prunes grown in California this year!" he said. "I've never seen anything like them before."

The same woman wanted a broom. Cousin Ben brought some out, bent down the corn both ways to test 'em, and went through the usual stunts.

She wanted a cheap broom but was a little afraid of the quality at the price.

"Think it's all right at that price?" I heard her ask him.

"That's the best broom in ——— for the money," said Cousin Ben. "You'll make no mistake in taking that broom."

Then the store cleared out, and we went back in the office together.

"Cousin Ben," I said, when we had got seated down, "you're a liar."

He looked at me a minute a little nonplussed.

"What did you say?" he asked.

"I said you're a liar," I repeated.

He didn't know whether it was a joke or not—we have a good many jollies together—and he continued to eye me severely and uncertainly.

"I don't know in the least what you mean," he said finally, "and I can't say I care—your conversation don't as a rule amount to much. How's Milly?"

"What I meant by saying you were a liar was this," I said, refusing to be diverted. "I heard you tell three lies within five minutes. All to your own customers, too, that you ought to befriend instead of betray. I say again, you are a liar, Cousin Ben."

"What were the three lies?" he said, still eyeing me with suspicion.

"You told one woman there was nothing like your ——— Ceylon tea in the town," I said. "As a matter of fact ——— has exactly the same thing—gets it same place you do—only his is under the packer's label, while yours is under your own. You knew that, too."

"Oh ——," he started to say.

"Wait a minute," I said, "you told another woman those prunes you sold her were the finest prunes grown in California this year and you'd never seen anything like them. Have you seen all the prunes grown in California this year? You couldn't possibly have any foundation for a statement like that, and a statement made recklessly without any knowledge to back it is a lie. More than that, I'll bet a dollar you've seen just as good a hundred times before."

"Say ———," Cousin Ben began again. I held up one hand.

"That broom you sold," I continued, "you said it was the finest broom in town for the money. Have you gone to all your competitors to compare it with their brooms for the same money? That was like the prune story, wasn't it—you didn't know whether it was the best or not—you just said so and didn't care whether it was true or not."

When I finished I turned on the same sad and reproachful voice that I use to convince my wife that I am not the worst man that ever lived.

"See here," said the old man, "you play the idiot so often I don't know now whether you mean what you say or not."

I assured him in the same voice that I did. I further told him how I regretted that a previously honored member of the family into which I had condescended to marry had seen fit to do that which had forfeited my good opinion. Etc., etc., etc.

"All I'm going to do with you," he finally said, "is to ask you one question. "Do you never brag up the goods you're sent out to sell in that same way?"

"Even if I did," I said, "would that excuse you?"

"It's all right," he said, "every man in business to-day exaggerates. You with the rest of 'em. Maybe you could even say we all lie. I catch myself doing it a hundred times a day. I've got to do it! Why if I told my customers the truth, nothing but the truth and all the truth they'd think I was crazy. They'd leave me!"

"What's trade compared with the knowledge that you're a perfectly truthful man?" I probed.

He sniffed and lit his disreputable old pipe.

"I've said all I'm going to," he said, "how's Milly?"

There you have it.

Lining Up for Mercantile Tax Repeal.

Local Association Making Plans to Elect Only Legislators Pledged to Repeal. Pittsburg Fruit Dealer to Fight Sidewalk Ordinance. Small News of the State.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Erie, Pa., Feb. 7, 1908.

The following resolution was adopted at the last meeting of the Jeanette Business Men's Association:—

Resolved, That our Association hereby pledges each and every one, to use all honorable means to have nominated and elected to State Senate and Legislature, persons who are honestly interested in the repeal of the present obnoxious Mercantile License Law, and any other uniform laws for good of our citizens.

President Tringle will appoint additional committees at their next meeting.

The 140th affiliation was organized by State Secretary A. M. Howes, at Sheffield, Pa., on January 29th, and will be known as the Business Men's Association of Sheffield and vicinity. Over twenty representative business men met in Odd Fellows' Hall, and the organization starts with sixteen charter members. A constitution and by-laws were adopted. Adequate dues will be provided and the following officers were elected: President, E. Hinkley, butcher; first vice-president, Dr. H. B. Russell, physician; second vice-president, C. E. Nelson, grocer; secretary, L. F. Schweitzer, harness maker; treasurer, H. F. Schade, general store.

A fruit dealer named J. M. Wilson, of East Ohio and Sandusky streets, Pittsburg, will test a city ordinance prohibiting the obstruction of sidewalks with stands for the sale of goods. Suit has been entered by Assistant Ordinance Officer Charles L. Dettmar. The ordinance fixes the maximum fine at $20 per day as long as the alleged violation is maintained.

Officers of the Turtle Creek Valley Business Men's Association have been named on a special committee to secure relief for the needy in the Turtle Creek Valley, which will co-operate with relief committees appointed by the various churches in providing aid to many residents who are suffering from lack of employment and illness. More than half a hundred families have applied for aid. The work will be confined to the Turtle Creek Valley, including Turtle Creek Borough, New Town and the smaller settlements in the hills around Turtle Creek. Residents of this district depend for employment almost entirely on the Westinghouse Works. Several benefit entertainments are being planned.

James Foust, Food Commissioner of Pennsylvania, addressed the merchants of Lebanon at their annual banquet on January 30th in the Sons of America Hall. The event was commemorative of the third anniversary of the association. Over 225 people were present.

Absorbine for Shoe Boils.

S. Farnsworth, Lunenburg, Mass., writes April 4, 1907: "Last Fall I sent to you for a can of Absorbine. My horse had a large shoe-gall. I should say as large as a quart measure, and Absorbine took it all down, and I have used only half of the can. I should not be afraid to recommend it to anyone." Absorbine is a mild and pleasant remedy to use. It is prompt and positive in its action and will remove blemishes, cure lameness and pain without blistering or removing the hair. Horse can be used. Send to address below for free book, "How to Remove Blemishes." Absorbine is $2.00 per bottle at dealers, or express prepaid upon receipt of price. W. F. Young, P. D. Slices Everything from 6-pound Knuckles to half-ounce Ends.

IF YOU SLICE DRIED BEEF

you need Johnson's "EVERSHARP" slicing machine. Because it slices dried beef to perfection, and moist freshly cured beef in full-size wafer slices, thin, smooth and delicious, will attract more new trade than any article you can offer.

IF YOU DON'T SLICE DRIED BEEF

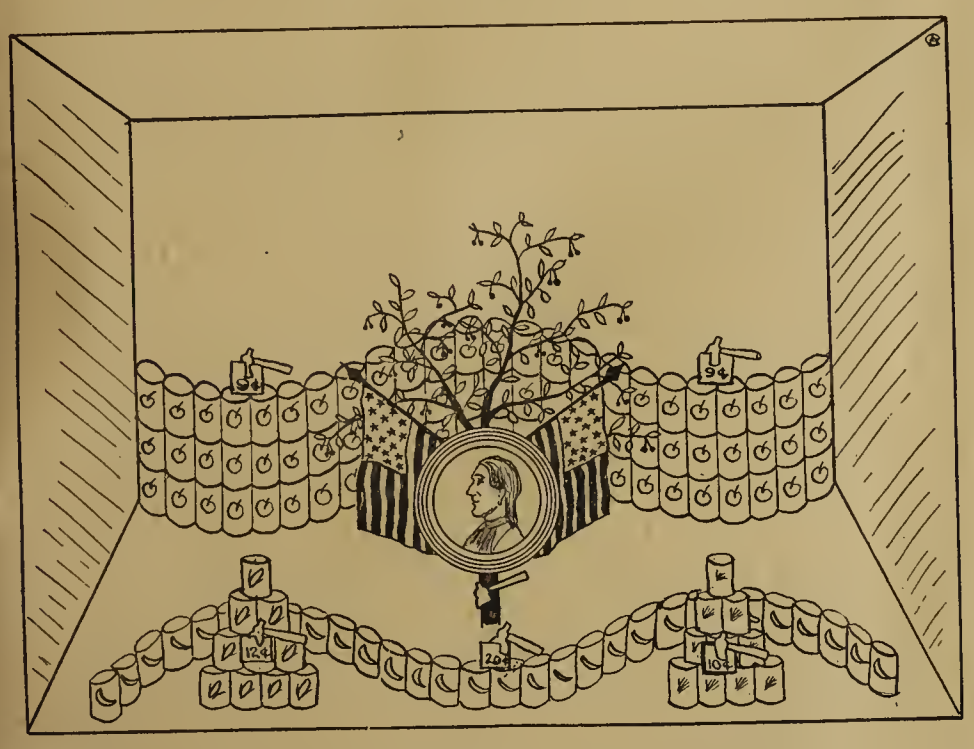
you certainly need Johnson's "EVERSHARP" slicer, because you are losing the prestige and profit of the most salable and profitable specialty in the whole line of eatables.

This machine was invented by an experienced retail grocer to correct the faults, remove the defects and improve the shortcomings of all other machines.

It will slice five pounds of dried beef in five minutes, every slice perfect, the full size of the meat, transparently thin, smooth and shining. It will cut the tough sinewy ends in perfect slices. It will slice up every little end. It will save enough time and labor, prevent enough waste, draw enough new trade, and increase the sales of sliced meat, sufficient to pay for itself in a very short time.

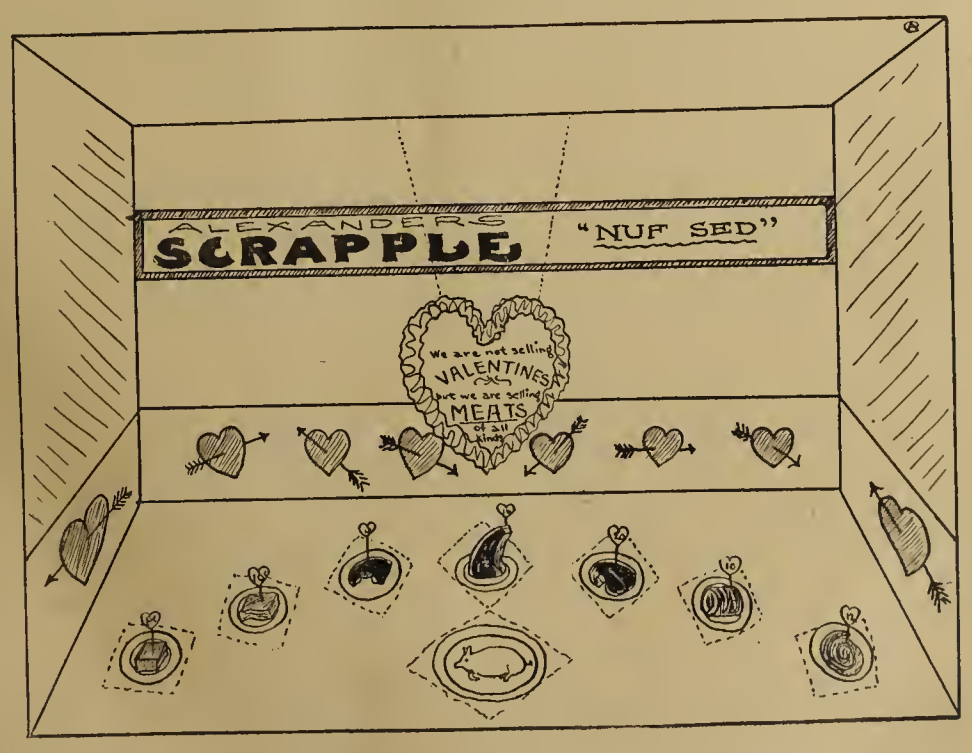
Send for a sample of sandwich sliced beef and see the magnet that draws the trade.

A. W. JOHNSON, New Brunswick, N. J.



Window Dressing for Grocers

In this department from now on will appear each week suggestive articles regarding the proper use of the retail grocer's window. An endeavor will be made to deal with the subject practically, in other words, to show grocers how they can turn their windows into a money-making feature of their business. Subscribers are invited to make free use of the department by submitting both queries or suggestions.



Cut Prices for February 22d.

The centre piece for this window is a cherry tree. Get a limb off a cherry tree and decorate it with artificial leaves and cherries, which are not expensive.

Suspended by twine from the ceiling is a large heart. This is sawed out of a box lid and is 28 inches high and 28 inches wide. This is covered with white paper and around the edge is a border of shirred red cheese cloth. In the centre is a sign reading:—

We are not selling
VALENTINES
but we are selling
MEATS of all kinds

The scrapple sign above is painted on wrapping paper and tacked across the window.

Upon this tree hang a picture of George Washington, back of which cross two flags.

The price-cards are blue cardboard 6 inches square and lettered with white. On each card is a cardboard hatchet painted red. There is a nick in each card in which the hatchet is placed and glued.

A St. Valentine Meat Window.

The floor is covered with white oilcloth or paper, or if you have a marble top off an old counter that will be still better.

Around the sides and back is a strip of 20-inch wrapping paper on which are hearts, painted with red water color.

The meats are placed on plates arranged in a semi-circle. Under each plate is a "St. Valentine" paper napkin. In the centre you can place a clay pig on a plate, or if you cannot get this a pig's head will do.

The price-cards are cut out of red cardboard and lettered in white.

Dr. Wiley's Salt Scheme Worthless.

A Berkeley, Cal., report quotes Prof. E. J. Wickson, of the California University, as saying relative to Dr. H. W. Wiley's discovery of a salt solution as an acceptable substitute for sulphur in the curing and bleaching of fruit:—

> The recourse to salt solution was suggested and experimented with in California about fifteen years ago and found to be unsatisfactory. While salt prevents oxydization and discoloration to a certain extent, it does not produce the light shades which the trade demands, and purchasers' tastes have to be considered by the producer.
> The salt dip can be used with only a few fruits, even admitting that purchasers will accept the darker coloration produced by the method. It will not do for peaches, nectarines, apricots, nor for apples and pears cut in halves, because the salt dip retards subsequent evaporation, instead of advancing it, as sulphur does. In this way the proposed salt dip prevents the California method of curing fruits in large pieces, to preserve its natural form.
> The proposed method is abominably dirty also, for it concentrates the dust and other impurities as it is progressively used and becomes a method of befouling freshly cut fruit surfaces, instead of being a cleansing agency.
> No analogy can be drawn between the handling of fruits which are cured in the natural form the pulp protected by the unbroken skin as in the case of the curing of prunes. The same conditions do not obtain. For this reason I consider the salt dip inferior to the dry sulphuring method, and impracticable for trade uses in this country.

Never Heard of Scrapple.

Coryville, Pa., Feb. 3, 1908.
Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—Your leading editorial in the issue of February 3d, in which you roast the "National Tribune," we think you take yourself entirely too serious in this matter of the widely known, so State "scrapple."

The writer has read your magazine for several years and has spent seven years in the retail grocery trade of Pennsylvania, having operated stores in Warren, Potter and McKean Counties, and never heard of the article scrapple or saw the word until recently read in the "Grocery World." We have traveled over practically all of New York State as "a knight of the grip" and never had anything served up to us under such a title. We suspect that had you stated the fame of this wonderful food was well known to the Southeastern Dutchman you would have come nearer the fact.

Yours truly,

THE GROCERY MARKETS

Tea.

There has been no change in the tea market during the past week. The demand is fair for the season, which means about half what it reaches at other seasons. Prices show no change for the week. The market is strong so far as low grades are concerned, and probably will be throughout the balance of the season.

Coffee.

The market for Rio and Santos coffee has been stagnant during the greater part of the week. The demand has been light and prices about unchanged. Mild coffees are steady to firm and in quiet demand. Mocha and Java steady and moderately active.

Sugar.

The sugar market shows no change for the week. Raws are unchanged. The Cuban season is going right ahead, but the production is over 100,000 tons behind last year. Naturally the receipts are a little better, and this relieves the scarcity of raws to a certain extent. The demand for refined sugar is dull. There has been no change in price. All refiners are now on a par, but the Federal is expected to decline in order to get some business.

Syrup and Molasses.

Glucose is unchanged for the week. Compound syrup is in good demand, especially for tinned goods. Prices are unchanged. Sugar syrup is scarce, by reason of the present small production of sugar. The demand is moderate. Molasses is unchanged for the week. The season is about over in Louisiana and the production of molasses tallies up relatively much smaller than the production of sugar. Fine molasses is not abundant and high.

Fish.

The mackerel market is still firm. Irish mackerel are exceedingly scarce, and those who have any are holding around $19 and $20. Shore mackerel are coming forward to some extent, at a shade off the prices previously asked. They are mostly the wrong size for the present trade wants, however. Norway mackerel are firm and show a nominal advance, but sales have been made during the week at the old figure. The demand for mackerel is good. Cod, hake and haddock are dull, in spite of the cold season, at unchanged prices. Domestic sardines are not only not advanced, but are rather weak than strong, as there are plenty to sell from second hands at the first hands price. Imported sardines are scarce and firm. Salmon is steady in price and in light demand.

Canned Goods.

Tomatoes are not active. There are some selling at 80 cents delivered and 80 cents f. o. b., but the demand is not abundant. Future tomatoes are selling in a very small way only. Spot corn is extremely dull, at nominally unchanged prices. The market is not especially strong, and active buying would probably get concessions. Some packers have named prices on future shoepeg corn of 65 cents for standard and 70 cents for fancy, which is 2½ cents above last year. Other packers are asking as much or 80 cents for fancy. No future prices have yet been named on Maine corn, for which there would be a demand. It is expected that prices will open around 85 cents, which was last year's price. Peas are unchanged on spot and quiet. Futures are still selling. Peaches are dull and unchanged. Apples show no change from previous reports, and are only wanted in a small way. California canned goods are unchanged in price and very dull in first hands. The small Baltimore line is dull and unchanged.

Beans and Peas.

Pea beans are now quoted at $2.35 to come forward, but on spot the market ranges from $2.15 to $2.25, according to quality. The demand is fair. Marrows rule about $2.25, both on spot and to come forward. California limas are unchanged and in fair demand. Dried peas of all grades are unchanged, green and Scotch being as formerly reported, scarce and high.

Dried Fruits.

Prunes are much demoralized. Size 30s have sold at 7½ cents in the East during the week, which is a 3½-cent bag basis, as against a 5-cent basis a few weeks ago. Other sizes are ruling proportionately, all premium on 30s having disappeared. The Eastern markets are below the coast parity. Peaches are unchanged as to the coast, though sales have been made in Eastern markets at a cent concession from former prices. Apricots are dull and unchanged. Currants are active at ruling prices. Raisins are still very weak and dull, and sales of fancy seeded have been made during the week at 8 cents. Apples are quiet and easy. Citron, dates and figs are all dull at unchanged prices.

Butter.

The butter market has advanced 1 cent per pound during the past week, both as to solids and prints, all grades being affected. The advance is due to the extra light supply and the good demand both local and for export. The stock of storage butter is getting very low and the market is healthy throughout on the present basis. As the price is above the normal for the season no further advance is looked for in the immediate future.

Cheese.

The cheese market is about unchanged from a week ago. There is a better demand reported from neighboring markets, and if there is any change in price it will probably be by way of a slight advance. Stocks of cheese are lighter than usual for the season, with the consumptive demand about the same.

Eggs.

The egg market rules about the same as a week ago, fresh eggs being cleaned up every day on arrival. The receipts of eggs are gradually increasing, but the market is very firm. Storage eggs are getting very close to the bottom of the box, so that they can no longer be depended on to save the market from the advancing effect of cold weather. The future market therefore depends upon weather conditions almost solely. From now on there will probably be an increase in the supply of fresh eggs.

Provisions.

The market for smoked meats is unchanged. There is, however, a slight increase in the demand, owing to large stocks. The present low prices are likely to hold during the next few days at least. Both pure and compound lard is unchanged, and the market is reported steady, with the demand about normal. Canned meats, barrel pork and dried beef are unchanged and in fair demand.

Produce.

Pennsylvania potatoes, 85 to 90 cents per bushel; York State, 80 to 85 cents per bushel, demand fair; sweet potatoes, primes, $1 to $1.10 per bushel; culls, 50 to 60 cents per bushel, demand fair to good; yellow globe onions, 90 cents to $1 per bushel; York State, 90 cents to $1 per bushel, demand good; white onions, $1.25 per bushel crate; Spanish, 90 cents to $1 per bushel crate, demand fair; yellow turnips, 35 cents per basket, 60 cents per bushel; white, 35 cents per basket, demand fair; Danish cabbage, $1 per barrel, $11 to $12 per ton; Savoy, $1 to $1.50 per barrel, demand fair; carrots, $1.50 to $1.75 per barrel, 40 cents per basket, demand fair; horseradish, domestic, $3.50 to $4.50 per barrel; Western, $4 per barrel, demand fair; oyster plants, 2½ to 3 cents per bunch, demand fair; parsnips, $1 to $1.50 per barrel, demand poor; beets, $1.50 per barrel, demand slow; Pennsylvania celery, 10 to 15 cents per bunch, demand good.

Green Fruit.

Apples, Hulbersons, $3.25 to $3.50; Greenings, $3 to $4; Bellflower, $2.75 to $3.50; Spy, $2.50 to $3.50; Spitz, $3 to $4; Baldwins, $2.25 to $3.75; Kings, $3.50 to $4.25; Russets, $2.50 to $3, demand fair; California oranges, $2.50 per box; Florida, $2.25 to $2.75 per box; India River, $2.75 to $3.25 per box, demand fair; grapefruit, fancy, $4.50 to $5.50; choice, $3 to $4, demand fair; pineapples, $2.75 to $3.50 per box, demand limited; lemons, $2.75 to $3.50 per box, demand slow.

Nuts.

Almonds, 17 to 18 cents per pound; Brazil, 10 cents per pound; filberts, 10¼ cents per pound; pecans, 9¾ cents per pound; walnuts, 12½ to 14 cents per pound; mixed nuts, 11 cents per pound, demand poor; peanuts, choice, green, 4 cents per pound; fancy, 5 cents per pound; jumbo, 6¼ cents per pound; roasted, choice, $1 per bushel; fancy, $1.25 per bushel; jumbo, $1.50 per bushel, demand fair.

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORTS.

Spices.

The market continues active, with a firm tone for nearly all grades. Futures are in most instances quoted higher than spot stock. Stocks are small, and from all accounts crops are about normal. We therefore look for a gradual increase in prices.

Pepper.—Futures are higher. There has been a large demand for spot goods during the last week. Small advances in spot values are in order for the next 60 or 90 days.

Cayennes are firm but practically unchanged.

Cloves.—The crop is a very large one, 170,000 to 180,000 bales, so there is practically no reliance to be placed on predictions as to what the market will do.

Pimento (Allspice) is very steady, with very good demand. Prices, however, are practically unchanged.

Nutmegs.—We can only repeat what we have said in recent letters pertaining to the present market being safe. The prices during the week are firm and the demand has been fair.

Cassias are very steady and in fair demand. Futures are quoted at higher prices.

Gingers.—Demand is notably better, especially for old dry root.

Seeds.—Caraway is now held at 9¾ to 10 cents. Poppy and coriander are steady but unchanged. Same may be said of celery and mustard seed.

Rubbed sage and sweet herbs are unchanged and in very fair demand.

McCormick & Co., Inc.
Baltimore, Md.

MARKET NOTES.

Florida tomatoes are coming forward in bad order, and the market has a wide range—75 cents to $2.50. There are some fair tomatoes among the receipts, but most of them have to be repacked. Anything repacked and strictly fancy brings $3.25, but the

BACON
AS A BREAKFAST FOOD

There are dozens of breakfast foods on the market but none of them can take the place of Bacon; nothing is so thoroughly satisfying and nothing adds so much zest to one's life as a breakfast, the foundation of which is

Burk's "Butternut Bacon"

This Bacon is selected from corn-fed hogs, specially cured with granulated sugar, mild and of exquisite flavor and taste.

It is put up in narrow strips, strung with white cord, cut absolutely square, making any waste impossible; wrapped in highly glazed and parchment paper and embellished on two sides with an attractive blue and white label. A red seal is attached to the cord, stating the specific merits of this bacon, which is also known to the trade as the "Five B" Bacon, because of its name

Burk's Butternut Boneless Breakfast Bacon

This Bacon was first introduced at the National Export Exposition, held in Philadelphia in 1899. It has had a steadily increasing sale each year, and today is the best known and most used Bacon in Philadelphia.

Burk's Lard

Is guaranteed to be absolutely pure and to contain nothing but what results from the rendering of good, wholesome hog fat and to contain all its original properties, none of which has been extracted.

Many brands of Lard are "pure," but the rich oils have been extracted so that the manufacturers can make a larger profit.

Such Lard is not to be compared with Burk's, because it lacks richness, and while cheaper in price is in reality dearer because a larger quantity must be used to produce the result.

Florida oranges are a little firmer, but the price is unchanged —$2 to $3.50 per box. The receipts show an increase.

Florida peppers seem to be wanted at $1.50 to $1.75 per crate.

Michigan rhubarb is now exceedingly scarce and is hardly seen in the market at all.

New Bermuda potatoes range from $1 to $1.25 per basket and are in very slow demand.

Hotbed spinach from near-by points ranges from $2.50 to $2.75 per barrel. The quality is good and the demand fair.

California celery ranges from 60 to 65 cents per dozen. The appearance, as usual, is fancy, and the demand is excellent.

How to Get a Roll Top Desk Free.

The Knickerbocker Chocolate Co., of New York, have made an arrangement with the Manufacturers' Trade-Mark Association, the big premium clearing-house of New York, which enables them to substantially reward retailers who show an interest in increasing the sale of Barker's Hasty Lunch Chocolate, Bedford and Blue Ribbon Cocoas.

These goods are so fine that it is hard to sell anything else to consumers once they have had them; so besides the reward the Knickerbocker Chocolate Co. give grocers for pushing them, they are certain to please their trade.

Suppose, for example, a grocer needs a new roll-top desk, a safe, a cheese cutter, a computing or platform scale; instead of drawing on his bank account to pay for them he pushes the sale of the Knickerbocker Co.'s goods with his customers, saves the Universal Coupons packed in every case for him and adds them to those coming to him from other manufacturers, and in a short time he will have collected enough to entitle him to any of the articles named.

The Manufacturers' Trade-Mark Association issue a handsome illustrated catalogue which they send free to grocers, showing an almost unlimited array of useful articles of merchandise which they will send grocers in exchange for the Universal Coupons, together with a list of all the manufacturers throughout the country who give these same coupons to the grocers.

The Knickerbocker Co. is the only manufacturer of chocolate and cocoa from whom a grocer can get these Universal Coupons; so grocers who want valuable free merchandise as well as their regular profits will concentrate their efforts on the sale of the Knickerbocker Chocolate Co.'s goods.

The little round cracker with "Exton" stamped on it. It has been on the market over half a century, and no consumer will use any other oyster cracker if she can get the Exton, because no oyster cracker can take its place in the esteem of those who know the difference between fair and good.

Two-Minute Sermons for the Retail Grocer

XXVIII.—Holding Local Money at Home.

The more places there are in town for a man to spend his money, the more of his money you are likely to get.

This does not sound like it was possible, but it is good logic just the same. Most people want to see all they can, and are generally willing to pay for the privilege, and if they cannot see everything they want in your town they will go to some other. When they go to some other town to see a good show, or for whatever purpose it may be, they will spend their money at that point, probably for goods in your line, and at any rate they spend it; and as all money spent there is to be spent again it will reach the merchants in your line sooner or later, and would have reached you if spent at home.

Many merchants swear because some attraction comes along and "takes all the money out of the country." They had better put forth every effort to add to the permanent attractions of the town, where money can be spent at any time, for the more there is of them the more of the people's money will be spent at home and the more people will come to see them, and this money will soon reach the merchant, even if not spent with him first.

What every town needs is enough attractions of every kind to satisfy the people of the community so they will not need to go elsewhere. Then the young people will not leave home and go to the larger cities just as soon as they are able to take care of themselves. They will be content to stay where things look good to them already. They will not be constantly hearing of the sights they have never seen, to toll them away, and how many communities are to be found to-day in which the population would not be at least doubled if all the young people had remained at home?

FOR RENT.

FOR RENT—Large General Store (owned by the undersigned estate) in Quarryville, Lancaster County. Pa. This Borough has a population of about 800. Is the terminus of two steam railroads, a trolley line and two new state turnpikes. It is the only town of any considerable size in the ten lower townships of Lancaster County, and commands a large proportion of their patronage. It has two banks, and does more business in a week than most towns of its size in a month. In fact, during the year of 1907, it is carefully estimated to have exceeded $800,000, not including the money paid out in the borough for tobacco which will amount to about $150,000 yearly. The borough has, besides this store, one large general store, carrying every line, and one smaller general store, one small grocery and a large hardware store. This store has enjoyed a large patronage for half a century. The location is the best in the borough, and in the midst of the town's business activity, within 200 feet of the depot of the Lancaster & Quarryville Railroad, the Lancaster, Oxford & Southern Railroad, the freight station and the terminus of the trolley line. The building is large, well-lighted, and is undergoing repairs; it has a fine cellar. It will be rented on good terms. The opportunity for an energetic man to establish a fine business in one of the best towns of its size is here afforded. A renter will not be handicapped with a stock of old goods, as the building is entirely empty and ready for immediate occupancy. For any further information address George W. Hensel's Estate, Quarryville, Lancaster Co., Pa. tf

What's in a Name? Lots!

Take "Caricol," for instance—when applied to "Tea" it stands for a blend of which tons have been sold, because it has the peculiar faculty of pleasing almost everybody—and last, but not least, you can make 160 per cent. profit on it, and satisfy your customers that the price isn't too high.

Thomas Martindale & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

Do You Want to Make $300 More Every Year?

It is a mighty nice thing to be able to increase your profits by such a tidy sum as $300 a year on an investment of less than $20, but that is what you can do if you will put in an Acme Peanut Roaster (equipped for kerosene, gas or gasoline), the simplest and cheapest automatic roaster made. Anybody can operate it. There is nothing to get out of order and little or no expense in running it.

Give your customers a chance to buy freshly roasted peanuts and you will make from $1 to $3 a day. We would like to tell you more about it.

ATSATT BROS.

Rae's Lucca Olive Oil

An Olive Oil of the purest quality—pressed only from perfect olives and carefully preserved from contact with anything that would hurt its exquisite flavor; beautiful to the eye and agreeable to the taste.

Do you keep it in stock?

H. KELLOGG & SONS, PHILADELPHIA
AGENTS FOR SAMUEL RAE & CO., LEGHORN, ITALY

WE HAVE THE BEST OF REASONS FOR TALKING ABOUT IT

We make a point of exploiting the fact that you will find "The Bottom as Good as the Top" in Apelpi Evaporated Apples, simply because usually the top is very much better than the bottom. We pride ourselves on this particular brand, have built up a big demand for it on its quality alone—you can do the same thing.

"Is This What I Made?"

If the cook who invented Baked Beans with tomato sauce were to come back and open up some of the cans labeled Baked Beans he would go gladly back to oblivion.

For "Baked Beans" doesn't always mean baked beans any more. In most cases it means beans boiled or steamed, dampened with a little cheap catsup and packed. The result is an attempted fraud on the palate of him who knows the real thing.

L. & S. Baked Beans are really baked in the good new way. We guarantee that absolutely. Baking makes the bean over. Instead of swelling and mushing it up like steaming or boiling, it leaves it just as firm but mealy and melting.

And our tomato sauce is tomato sauce made by an expert.

HERE IS YOUR QUESTION ANSWERED

Why put in Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa when you are selling five brands now? Well, because it is different from the rest, for one reason. It is the only cocoa packed in glass. It stands alone, and you know how novelty helps a thing to sell. The grocer who infuses a little novelty into his business is the grocer who succeeds.

Another thing, Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa is better than the rest. That isn't a bluff, honestly. We take out of our cocoa, in the making, a substance which other manufacturers allow in, greatly to the injury of the flavor of their goods.

Now do you know why you should sell it?

Will you mention the "Grocery World" when you write?

Do You Know What Ramly Stands For?

We'll tell you—the finest Turkish cigarette ever made to sell for 10 cents. It is the one that is so widely imitated by our competitors.

If you want particular smokers to come to you, put the Ramly in stock.

Wouldn't You Like to Be Sure?

¶ If you once had the satisfaction of knowing exactly what your purchase of future canned goods were going to bring in—whether you were going to get 25 per cent., 50 per cent., or all, you would never buy again on the old indefinite basis.

¶ You can get that satisfaction by buying Blue Bell or Clover Farm canned goods. They are sold on 100 per cent. delivery contracts and are about the only canned goods that are.

¶ Your jobber can get them.

Deliver by Automobile

Don't think before you look into the Lindsley Car that the Automobile delivery proposition is too expensive for you.

The Lindsley Commercial Car will save money for every merchant who uses team delivery. If he uses two teams he can under some conditions save as much as $1,000 a year.

A boy can both run this car and keep it in order. It carries 1,500 pounds, and will carry 1,000 pounds up a 30 per cent. grade. Runs 30 miles on one gallon of gasoline.

You can't afford not to investigate this car.

If You Haven't a Cash Register We Will GIVE You One

We have a particularly fine brand of cigar in the General Macomb. Every time we get a smoker to try them he keeps buying them. To get more grocers to buy and push them we are giving away a handsome Cash Register. If you need one write.

FAVORITE CIGAR COMPANY, Detroit, Mich.

They're Tired of the Imitations

Don't you think your trade are about tired of the rainbow-hued imitation gelatine that desire for novelty has given some vogue during the last few years?

Don't you think they'd like some real gelatine—the pure, fresh, old-fashioned gelatine made of fine calves' stock, clear spring water and nothing else.

You'd probably be surprised at the eager welcome Chalmers' Gelatine would get from your customers. Try it. Granulated or shredded.

Watch the Insects Swarm to the Light

Almost every living thing is attracted by light—particularly is this so with the greatest of living things—human beings. The store-keepers who do the biggest business keep their places working for them after business hours. They put goods in their windows at bargain prices, then "turn on the light" so people can see them. One person attracted, who becomes a customer, pays what the light costs, the rest are extra profit. Write us and we will show you how to make your store work for you while you sleep.

The Olney Brand Forever

Thousands of grocers refuse to handle any canned goods but those of New York State, than which there are no better in all the land.

Many of these have handled the OLNEY BRAND for years and seem to feel that it was a lucky day for them when they started with it.

OLNEY is a brand that means something; it stands for the most succulent canned products packed in New York State—packed in canneries purposely planted in the heart of the growing district.

If you once tie up with this brand you will probably stick to it forever, because the goods packed under it get better, if it's possible to make them so, from year to year.

Wanted—Bad Debts

You don't want them, but you've got them, most of you, and we want them—to collect.

We can't collect all, perhaps, but we can collect some, probably most.

No matter how many we collect, you'll be so much ahead, because you can't collect them.

We can find the weak spot in the dead beat's armor—it's always there.

Do you know how cheap Electricity is? Ever think of using it to Grind Coffee? Ask the Manager of the nearest Power House. He will post you on the convenience and economy of Electricity in your business. An will save your clerks' time, your customers' time, and advertise your store. Write for catalogue describing our various Electric Mills, with capacities for granulating from four ounces to nine pounds of coffee per minute.

The illustration shows our double mill No. 08712, with motor for direct current; one mill fitted with grinders for granulating, and the other for pulverizing. Each iron hopper holds six pounds of coffee. There are two speeds, fast and slow, which can be instantly changed from one to the other; at fast speed this mill granulates three pounds of coffee per minute. Fitted with ¾ H. P. motor for direct current, or with ½ H. P. motor for alternating current. The latter for slow speed only. Can be regulated while running for grinding either fine or coarse.

We will gladly give any information desired about these mills.

If 1000 Retailers in Philadelphia Recommended Us, Would YOU Believe in Us?

One of the hardest propositions which confront the retailer is to turn their bad debts into cash. Lots of them have tried different collection agencies, paid retaining or subscription fees and got no results; so it is hard to convince them that any one can help to bring the beats to book.

We show you how to collect your own accounts; nobody handles your money but you. We can give you the names of a thousand merchants in Philadelphia whom we have shown how to get money due them which had been charged off long before they heard of us.

It costs you nothing to find out what our plan is—can you afford not to?

The Consolidated Law Association, Inc.
1325 SOUTH FIFTY-EIGHTH ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

We Pay You According to the Work You Do for Us

Besides the regular profit on Ariosa Coffee we give you an additional profit according to the amount you sell. The vouchers which we give you with every case of Ariosa are exchangeable for almost anything you want. You can use them instead of cash and as you get them for nothing and your cash don't come that way, you will see the importance of securing as many of them as possible. The values of the free merchandise you get from us each year depends of the amount of Ariosa Coffee you sell.

SOLVING HAM PROBLEMS

All of the problems of your ham department are solved by selling PREMIUM HAMS — the same yesterday, to-day and forever. We can and do control our raw material, and so PREMIUM HAMS steadily maintain the same perfect quality.

And the advertising we do for them brings a steady stream of trade to the grocers' door.

If you could see some brands of rennet made, you'd never offer them to your customers in a thousand years!

Filthy, unclean and nasty! We wouldn't sell such rennet if we had to work in the streets!

James T. Shinn's Liquid Rennet is guaranteed to be perfectly and absolutely clean. It's the best in other ways, too—strongest, purest and most profitable.

It makes you 100 per cent.

SHINN & KIRK, 1400 SPRUCE ST., PHILA., PA.

How to Answer Their Questions

Put a box of I-V Washing Tablets on your counter. They will be such a novelty that every woman who comes in will ask what they are and what they will do. Tell them this:—

1—They contain no acid of any sort.
2—They wash clothes without rubbing.
3—They make clothes beautifully white;
4—They can be used in hard water;
5—They take stains from table linen without any rubbing whatever.

Any one of these points would sell a package—just see the women's eyes glisten when you name them all.

WALKER STORE FIXTURES
—Attract Good Trade—

There is so much to be said to the merchant about to buy new fixtures that we prefer to send our catalogue, which will set him wise on many points that he should know. Our designs and our workmanship are unsurpassed. Our customers write that they are more than pleased with the appearance of their stores.

WE KNOW HOW TO DESIGN ARTISTIC INTERIORS

We are ready at all times to offer suggestions covering any detail. And our catalogue is sufficiently explicit to make it both interesting and instructive. Send for it.

Losing Your Weights?

Get a Troemner No. 24 Ball Scale

Greatest Improvement in Rapid Weighing

Does away with weights absolutely. The balls are placed in the holes, thus weighing from one to fifteen pounds, with the sixteen ounces in fractions on the side beam, giving a total weighing capacity of sixteen pounds.

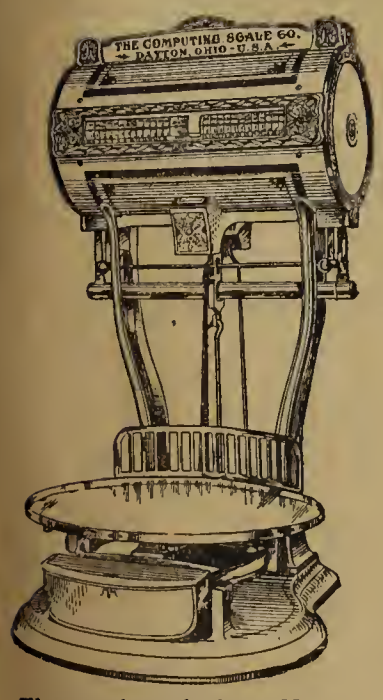
That Fraction of a Cent

Franklin Carton Sugar appears a safe, certain, easy and profitable way of escaping one element of the drudgery of the retail grocery business.

We don't ask you to trade an old-established and lucrative custom for a new one of doubtful utility. Franklin Carton Sugar not only saves you work and time but it will literally make you more money, because it saves you all overweights.

Franklin Carton Sugar costs a fraction of a cent more than bulk sugar, but to weigh that fraction against the advantages is, we respectfully submit, shortsighted to a pronounced degree,



Don't you think it is yourself?

Clean, sanitary cartons that preserve strength and freshness. Two-pound cartons and 2, 5, 10, 25, 50 and 100-pound cotton bags : : :

Our Scales Stand the Test

The new low platform No. 140 DAYTON Scale

The State of Massachusetts recently passed a new Law defining the duties of the Sealer of Weights and Measures, in connection with the computing devices used on computing scales.

Our modern up-to-date computing scales meet every requirement of the law and test out with greater exactness than any other known style or make.

Greater than this, however, is the test of service between merchant and customer. Merchants use them for the protection of profit and the saving of time. Customers trade where they are used because they know they are sure of a square deal.

Moneyweight Scales are an absolute necessity to the economical and successful retailing of meats and groceries. We build them on all the known principles of scale construction adaptable to all kinds of merchandising.

The increased confidence of the merchants of Massachusetts in our computing scales is shown by the enormous increase in sales since the law went into effect. We are strong advocates of laws which will give the greatest protection to both merchant and customer.

For those who are now using old Dayton Scales or computing scales of other make, and wish to bring their equipment up-to-date, we have a very attractive exchange proposition which will be sent on request.

Do not wait for our agent to call on you, but send for him.

DELAY IS EXPENSIVE.

Diamond Match Co. Seemingly Not Giving Jobbers Square Deal

Evidence that in Order to Steal a March on Principal Competitor, Trust is Giving Extra Rebate to Two Local Jobbers, While Permitting Them to Sell Independent Matches, a Privilege Granted No Other Philadelphia Jobber.

There is much reason to believe that the Diamond Match Co. is not giving the local jobbers a square deal under its rebate contract.

It is generally known that the Diamond Co. ties up all the wholesale grocers it can with an exclusive contract which gives them an extra 10 per cent. rebate provided they handle only Trust matches. This 10 per cent. represents much of the jobber's profit, so that the wholesalers argue that they are forced to sign the contracts if they expect to make anything adequate on the brands which constitute the bulk of their match business.

Naturally the wholesale grocers would not so much resent the humiliation of being compelled, virtually, to sign such a contract if all of them were in the same boat. There is much reason to believe, however, that all of them are not; in other words, that certain favored jobbers are being given the extra rebate while still being permitted to sell independent goods.

The evidence of this condition is as follows:—

In Philadelphia Reeves, Parvin & Co. and Alfred Lowry & Bro., both large and representative jobbers, have for months been on the outs with the Diamond Match Co. through insisting upon their right to sell independent matches. And both concerns have sold large quantities of independent matches, upon which they claim to have made a much better profit than they could make on Trust matches, even with the latter's 10 per cent. rebate.

Several days ago the announcement was made that Mr. W. D. Peck, former local manager for the Trust and an extremely well equipped match man, had been appointed to represent the Ohio Match Co., the Trust's leading competitor. The announcement was coupled with the statement that the Ohio concern had rented a large local warehouse for three years and was about to open an aggressive campaign to get some of the local business. The very next day the Diamond Match Co. sent emissaries to both Reeves, Parvin & Co. and Lowry & Bro. and renewed relations with them, but without requiring either firm to sign the exclusive contract. Both concerns deny that they signed or would sign it, but state that the only thing the Trust required them to do, before restoring them the 10 per cent. rebate, was to promise to "push" Diamond matches. They are thus apparently given a privilege denied to every other jobber—that of handling independent matches, and both firms are selling independent matches today. Furthermore, they say that nothing would induce them to give them up, owing to the better profit they involve.

Two New Parcels Post Bills In.

Principal One Makes Rate Five and Two Cents Per Pound. Limitation in Favor of Dealers. Second Bill Names Higher Rate. New Oleo Bill Also Introduced.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Washington, D. C.,
February 14, 1908.

Two bills of interest to the grocery trade were introduced this week, both in the Senate and House. One was a new oleo bill, the other a parcels post bill.

The oleo bill emanated from Representative McHenry, of Pennsylvania, and it prohibits the use of butter in the manufacture of oleomargarine and making a violation a misdemeanor punishable by fine or imprisonment. Section 2 of the bill provides that any violation of the Anti-Oleomargarine Law of 1902, of which the bill is amendatory, shall be a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of from $100 to $500 or by imprisonment of not more than one year. These penalties are applicable to any one who violates, knowingly or unwittingly, any provision of the 1902 law or the amendment to it, and provides that all cases must be prosecuted in the courts to a finish.

The parcels post bill was introduced in the Senate by Senator Burnham, of New Hampshire. It provides for a rural delivery parcels post for merchandise and other articles actually mailed on rural delivery routes.

The bill provides, in brief, for the establishment of a domestic rural parcels post, at special rates of postage, for the delivery of foodstuffs, dry goods, drugs, books and other merchandise. The rate of postage shall be 5 cents for the first pound and 2 cents for each additional pound, or fraction thereof, and on parcels weighing less than one pound, as follows: Two ounces or less, 1 cent; more than two and less than four ounces, 2 cents; more than four and not exceeding eight ounces, 3 cents; more than eight and not exceeding twelve ounces, 4 cents, and more than twelve ounces and less than one pound, 5 cents.

An important limitation is placed on the use of the proposed parcels post by the provision that only such parcels shall be received for delivery at the special rates of postage as are offered by bona fide merchants or dealers whose regular places of business are on rural delivery routes covered by the act, in the ordinary and regular course of their business, and by residents on such routes in their individual capacity.

Senator Kean, of New Jersey, also introduced a parcels post bill, but providing for somewhat higher rates of postage.

HOLT.

Maine Farmers to Open Co-operative Stores.

A big co-operative system to extend over the entire State of Maine, with stores in practically all the trade centres, is one of the schemes of prominent grangers. These stores will serve in the capacity of a clearing house for the farmers, for produce will be taken to them, where it will be held for sale, either in local or outside markets, at the highest possible prices, and the margin of profit after deducting a certain per cent. will be divided equitably among the stockholders, who will be principally grangers. The stores will do a general retail and wholesale business, not only in farm produce and the like, but will also deal in farm implements, fertilizers, etc. Big storage sheds will be built for potatoes and apples which will be held for the choicest markets and sold at the right moment to make the biggest profit.

Canned Goods Packers Swinish Over Canned Goods Contract

They Reject a Form which Gives Buyer and Seller Equal Privileges and Makes the Transaction Amount to Something, in Favor of One Giving the Packer All and the Buyer Almost Nothing. The Two Contracts Compared and Analyzed.

A close comparison of the forms of uniform canned goods contracts favored by the National Wholesale Grocers' Association and the National Canners' Association shows a wide variance of opinion between the two interests. It further seems to show that the canners are not so anxious as they have pretended, to adopt a contract which shall surround the sale of future canned goods with the same legalities which surround the making of any other legal contract.

As stated in last week's report of the canners' convention, the packers refused to adopt the form of contract which had been agreed to by the National Wholesale Grocers' Association, but adopted a form of their own. The gist of each form appears below:—

GROCERS' FORM.

Quantity guaranteed as follows: The seller agrees to deliver not less than 75 per cent. of the quantity stated under this contract, and the buyer agrees to accept the same in full settlement of this contract, without liability except as hereinafter stated. If seller should deliver less than 75 per cent. of the quantity stated under this contract, then it is agreed the seller shall pay the buyer..... cents per dozen on such shortage under 75 per cent. of the original purchase, but must deliver not less than.....per cent. of the original purchase. The buyer shall have the same privilege of reducing the quantity named in this contract to 75 per cent. of the original purchase, without responsibility for loss or damage to the seller, and shall also have the privilege of further reducing the quantity on the payment of.....cents pe. dozen, but must accept not less than.....per cent. of the original purchase. In case either buyer or seller wishes to decrease the quantity below 100 per cent. of the original contract, notice must be given in writing not later than.....

.....

Prices guaranteed.....

Swells guaranteed until July 1, 19...

Cases must be made of lumber, free from shakes and loose knots, and of material not less than ⅜-inch sides, tops and bottoms and ¾-inch ends, for No, 1, No. 2, No. 2½ and No. 3 cans; ½-inch sides, tops and bottoms and 1-inch ends for No. 8 and No. 10 cans, and of corresponding heavy material for other sizes.

Factory shipments in less than car lots to be made without charge for marking or shipping.

Seller guarantees these goods in accordance with Food Law Guarantees adopted by National Wholesale Grocers' Association and Canned Goods' Packers' Association, in convention 1907, and also in accordance with the State Food Laws of.....

In case of destruction of place of business of either party by fire or the elements, such buyer or seller shall have the right to cancel this contract by giving the other party written notice of the same within reasonable time.

CANNERS' FORM.

Seller guaraniees these goods in accordance with food law guarantees adopted by National Wholesale Grocers' Association and Canned Goods Packers' Association in convention, 1907.

All disputes arising under this contract to be arbitrated in usual manner with promptness and convenience as to place. The decision of the arbitrators to be final and binding, the aggrieved party to be entitled to such equitable damages as may be shown to have been sustained; cost of arbitration to be paid by party against whom decision is rendered and spoils guaranteed until ....., same to be held subject to seller's orders. In case of destruction of buyer's place of business by fire or the elements before shipment such buyer shall have the right to cancel this contract by giving seller written notice of same within five days, but this privilege is not to apply if shipment shall have been made prior to the receipt by seller of such notice. In event of seller's having short crop, fire, or other unavoidable causes preventing seller from executing contract in full, delivery upon same is to be made pro rata with other contracts that may be entered.

Broker, ——.
Accepted, ——.
Seller, ——.
Buyer, ——.
Date, ——.
Year, ——.

Analyzed, the two contracts show comparatively as follows:—

The jobbers' form would compel the packer to deliver at least 75 per cent. of his contract. If he delivers less he must pay the buyer, as damages, a certain sum per dozen. Only in case of the destruction of the plant by fire or the elements is the contract cancelled.

The packers' form would compel no specified percentage of delivery whatever. If the crop is short, or in case of fire, or in case of "any other unavoidable cause," the packer is then permitted to deliver pro rata. This is practically the objectionable condition that exists now. Under the clause "in case of any other unavoidable cause" the packer can always slide out of filling his contract when it pays him to do so and if he has the inclination.

The jobbers' form does not provide for the settlement of disputes between buyer and seller by arbitration, although it does not exclude it.

The packers' form does provide specifically for settlement by arbitration and makes the arbitrator's decision final.

Another important difference is in the status of the buyer. Under the jobbers' form he is given the same right to reduce his acceptance of delivery to 75 per cent., as the packer has to reduce delivery to 75 per cent. In other words, the packer need not deliver more than 75 per cent. and the buyer need not take more than 75 per cent. The buyer can even take less than 75 per cent. of the contract, but if he does he must pay the seller a certain sum per dozen as damages, just as the packer must pay him so much per dozen if he fails to deliver 75 per cent. In this respect the contract is directly mutual.

The packers' form gives the buyer no right whatever to reduce his contract, while it does give the packer, under the indefinite "or for any other unavoidable cause," the opportunity to deliver precisely what he likes.

No More Private Labels.

Messrs. William Numsen & Sons, the Maryland packers, have issued notice that they will henceforth not pack goods under private labels. The explanation accompanying the announcement was as follows:—

> In the first place, some jobbers fail to send labels for their goods until several months after the purchase of same, thus tying up shipments.
> Secondly, our goods comply with the requirements of the pure food law, whereas some jobbers, buying from a half dozen packers all using the same make of cans, may receive some goods that would not comply with the requirements of said law, and in view of this fact it is very likely that claims would be made against us in error, necessitating the trouble and expense of investigation on our part, and perhaps require us to defend every case that might arise.
>
> Again, we pack good goods, and we naturally wish to preserve their identity and receive due credit for same.

The New York Letter

Canners' Convention Leaves Packers and Canners Still at Odds. A Plan to Protect Horses. Sunday Law Amended. Small News of the Trade.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

New York, Feb. 14, 1908.

That the differences between packers and grocery jobbers were not lessened at the convention of the canners in Cincinnati last week is the conclusion drawn from remarks made by members of the New York delegation since they returned from their Western trip. The attempt to put through a form of contract agreeable to both jobber and canner was a failure, as far as this convention is concerned, and the jobbers made no progress in getting exclusive privileges not based on quantities sold.

While many pleasant things were said at the convention as to the relations of packer and jobber, some of the packers, since the meeting, have spoken of the middleman as a factor whose importance is declining. One fault that is found with the jobber by the packers is that he is constantly asking for concessions, but is seldom willing to grant any himself.

To the mind of the packers, the jobber is often a man who keeps asking for larger and larger discounts, who tries to hold the manufacturers strictly to their contracts, but who likes to have a loophole through which he himself may escape when a contract becomes irksome. There is, of course, another side to this, as may be ascertained by a few minutes of talk with almost any of the jobbers.

The circumstances under which the contracts may be modified or cancelled are the cause of much of the existing trouble. The packer is inclined to insist on quite a lot of freedom of action in cases of short crops, fires and other unavoidable causes that may interfere with the making of deliveries in specified quantities and qualities at specified times. The jobber also seeks channels to get away from the contract in cases of fires and changed conditions of various kinds.

It is likely that negotiations will be continued between the national officers of the canners and of the wholesale grocers' associations with a view to agreeing upon some of the points on which there are now differences, and so facilitating the conduct of business. One of the chief obstacles, it is admitted, is that the jobber, while he tries to get exclusive privileges, is not willing to withdraw from the manufacturing side of his business and so is often a real competitor of the very manufacturers whose output he wishes to control. This situation makes some observers here predict that the changes of the past in the methods of the grocery business are only a prelude to other important developments.

Grocery jobbers and retailers are interested in a movement begun this week by the Vesey Street Business Men's Association to have something done to protect the horses on downtown streets that are paved with wooden blocks and asphalt, especially the latter. The grade on some of the West Side streets in the grocery districts makes them particularly slippery and dangerous to horses whenever the roadways have any snow, slush or moisture, which is most of the time during the winter.

The association has compiled some statistics on the number of horses that are killed and maimed, trying to draw loads on these roadways, but anybody who walks through the streets where there is heavy traffic and sees the poor horses falling or straining themselves in trying to get a foothold needs no further evidence. The association will not be contradicted when it says in the petition that it prepared that humane sentiments, if nothing else, should come to the relief of the horses.

As to the delay caused by the constant congestion of traffic with the frequent blockades, this loss

Michele Pollini, who has a grocery store at 519 East 13th street, was picked out by the Black Hand as a mark several days ago. He received a letter asking him to carry $200 to a specified street corner and to turn it over to a representative of the society who would meet him there. He notified the police, who told him to hand a folded newsaper to the man and they were then to seize him. The grocer did as directed, but the detectives assigned to make the arrest made a mistake in the time of appointment and were not there. Seeing this the grocer pursued the man, firing at him until the fellow dropped with a wound in his arm. Then the supposed Black Hander was arrested, but said in court that he knew nothing as to the identity of the man who sent him to get the package. He was held on the charge of blackmail.

The New York Association of Manufacturers' Representatives was organized here during the week. It is an organization of brokers' and manufacturers' agents similar to that recently formed in Philadelphia. The object is to secure better treatment from jobbers of specialty orders, of which 40 per cent. turned in to jobbers in New York are not filled. The officers are: President, J. T. Austin, representing the T. A. Snider Preserve Co.; vice-president, E. D. Wellwood, of the Porcela-Radax Manufacturing Co.; secretary-treasurer, A. C. Monagle, Egg-O-See Cereal Co. Executive Committee (three more to be elected), G. Garrettson, Postum Cereal Co.; Drew Wade, Williams Bros. Co.; R. W. Smythe, Armour & Co. There are about fifty members so far.

"Oleomargarine is composed of pure and wholesome ingredients," said Prof. John C. Olsen, one of the United States Food and Drug Chemists, in a lecture delivered Tuesday before one of the sections of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences. He added that oleomargarine is highly nutritious, but that it is not so readily digested as butter and lacks the latter's delicate flavor. The lecturer dealt with the food value of fats and oils. He explained the high food value of food containing oil and fat and explained the popularity of butter as due to it being the most easily digested form of fat and to its agreeable qualities.

Fruit, flowers, confectionery, newspapers, drugs and medicines may also be sold all day.

The Hotel Patrons' Demand

A coffee that satisfies on a hotel table is a good coffee and will stand up under any test you can give it.

That's because hotel patrons are supercritical. They expect more than they get at home; in fact they expect perfection.

Hotel Astor Coffee is the year-in-and-year-out brand of some of the most exclusive hotels in New York City. They never think of buying anything else — they wouldn't dream of it.

The success of this coffee under this exacting test is really the reason that led us to push it through the grocery trade. We have a plan to increase your high-grade coffee trade. May we tell you about it? A postal request is enough.

As to Private Labels.

The statement in another column from one of the largest canned goods packers in Maryland that no longer would he pack goods under private labels is important, if it means the beginning of a movement to end a custom which has become an important phase of the canned goods business.

Almost every wholesale grocer to-day and every large retail grocer as well buys unlabeled canned goods and puts his own label on them. He does that in order to gain the prestige of the private brand. From his standpoint it is a good idea, though the food law has destroyed much of its value by forbidding the use of the dealer's name as packer and ordering his name to appear simply as distributer.

But from the packer's standpoint the custom is bad, for the goods lose all identity. The consumer is never educated to call for them; he calls for the private label, which may never cover the same goods two successive years. Under this custom a packer may be in business fifty years, and the public know no more about his goods, by name, at the end of that time than it did before.

The "Grocery World" has long expected a general movement among packers to refuse private label business, and it should not be surprised if the attitude of the Maryland packer noted elsewhere is the beginning thereof.

Paying for Goods Before Inspection.

In the course of a statement sent to the State Department by Consul Felix S. S. Johnson, from Bergen, Norway, regarding the importation of American groceries into Norway, there is a criticism which needs some discussion:—

> A severd drawback to the extension of American trade abroad is the requirement of payment for goods before shipment; this method of doing business ought to be changed, for it obliges the importer to receive goods if they arrive in damaged condition. An importer at Bergen suggests that it would be a much wiser plan to have part payment made when the order is sent in, and the balance on receipt of goods. No European exporter demands cash payment; as a rule a credit of from three to six months is given and frequently the time is extended with a fixed rate of interest.

Very likely this is a drawback, but it is precisely the drawback which handicaps the American buyer when he imports foreign food products. In most lines of imported food products the American buyer must pay for them before he sees them—and run his chances of getting satisfaction from a seller 4,000 miles away if the goods are bad. This is even the case in buying Norway mackerel. It is wholly oppressive and indefensible, whether done by foreign sellers against American buyers or vice versa. Every buyer's right is to inspect his purchases before paying for them, and he should not be confined for protection to an action against a concern on the other side of the world.

As to a Future Canned Goods Contract.

In another column the "Grocery World" places the form of canned goods contract desired by the National Wholesale Grocers' Association side by side with the form suggested by the National Canners' Association. Both contracts have been brought forward by their respective partisans as suggestions for ending the present highly loose fashion of selling and buying future canned goods.

There is no comparison between the two forms at all. The canners' contract makes almost no improvement in the present situation. Holding the buyer with an iron hand which is only relaxed when his plant burns down, and not then if even one case of goods has been shipped, it would nevertheless continue to give to the packer all of his present pretexts to escape the honest fulfillment of his agreement. The jobbers' form, on the other hand, binds the seller and the buyer in exactly the same degree. The packer is denied the subterfuge of avoiding delivery on "unavoidable causes," so called, and is required to deliver or settle for at least 75 per cent. of the contract.

The packers refuse to sign a contract binding them to deliver 75 per cent. because at the time future goods are sold they cannot tell whether there will be any crop at all; hence the injustice of asking them to deliver what may not even be grown. Very true, and no better illustration is needed to show the irrationality of dealing in future canned goods at all. Selling tomatoes in January for delivery in September—what can it possibly amount to? The packers, by refusing to make a binding contract, say practically that it can amount to nothing. Yet they continue to do it. Why?

Because the jobbers will buy futures, and selling them costs the packer nothing if the goods are not delivered, while it brings him an advantage. In other words, to the packer, selling futures leaves everything to gain and nothing to lose. The advantage which future sales bring the packer is that he can borrow from the banks against his future orders. Some packers, were this not possible, would hardly obtain sufficient capital to run their business.

We say that the jobbers will buy futures—why? Simply because competition makes them afraid not to. One jobber during the week vehemently attacked the whole plan of handling future canned goods, but admitted that he was obliged to do as his competitors did. Otherwise, if he waited to sell canned goods until they were packed, he would find that the retail trade had been filled up with futures long before. Only by unity of action, therefore, could the sale of future goods ever be discontinued, and unity of action among the jobbing trade is an iridescent dream.

A guarantee of a positive, specific delivery would greatly advance the situation, but the packers refuse to give it. A very few do; this is their time to get very busy.

Expected Olive Oil Decline May Not Materialize.

Early Prospects Indicated Large Crop and Lower Prices, But Later Developments Greatly Stiffened the Market.

Before the gathering of the olive oil crop the cables reported an abundant crop and a tendency towards lower prices. Since then things have gone from bad to worse and prices are advancing daily, so that American representatives in Italy write that they are wondering where they are going to land. They say that a decline at the present moment is entirely out of question in view of the situation, and that we may take it for granted that all hopes for a sharp decline have vanished and there is absolutely no chance of the market going much lower.

According to the news received from Spain things there are even worse. It appears that olive oil in Spain is advancing at a still quicker pace than in Italy. This applies specially to the fine qualities of olive oil, which are extremely scarce in Spain this season. Spanish competition therefore is practically eliminated for the moment, especially for better qualities, which are decidedly scarce.

The unexpected advance in price for the new crop of olive oil is undoubtedly to be found in the fact that more olive oil is used now than ever before. Formerly a lot of mixed oils were used, while now under the pure food law the consumer exacts and gets pure olive oil for the same price which he paid formerly for mixed oils. The pure food law has worked wonders in this respect.

How Does This Appeal to You?

Those of you who are up-to-date here is something strictly new, codfish in the form of steak. Talisman Cod Steak is strictly a fresh fish, cooked ready to eat cold or can be made into a salad and when so made its flavor is such as to very strongly resemble lobster. It can also be served hot and makes a very acceptable fish course for a dinner. It is packed in one-pound tins and can be obtained from Swift & Co., Gloucester, Mass., or any of the Swift branch houses. This is a novelty that will appeal both to you and your customers.

Canadian Grocers Will Meet Americans to Discuss Trade Evils

An International Confab Arranged by the Two Leading Associations of the Two Countries. Pending Amendment to Bankrupt Law Will Defeat Grocery Dead Beats. How Western Grocers Fight Box-car Competition.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Cleveland, Ohio,
February 14, 1908.

At its recent annual convention, the Dominion Board of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, the following highly important resolution was adopted:—

> That in response to a request, this convention take into consideration the advisability of appointing a committee from the Dominion Board of this association to meet a similar committee from the Retail Merchants' Association of the United States for the purpose of interchange of views on subjetcs of common interest to the retail trade of both countries.

This will be done by the National Retail Grocers' Association of the United States.

The bill introduced in Congress by Representative Swagar Shirley, of Kentucky, to amend the bankruptcy act to the extent that none can take advantage of the act unless they owe more than $300 will protect us to a very great extent from the dead beat who so readily takes advantage of it to defeat collection of a bill for the necessaries of life.

In all parts of the country debtors owing but small sums, and that largely for the necessaries of life, have taken advantage of this act to escape such debts.

While we would very much rather have had a larger amount stipulated than $300, yet this should protect us to a very large degree, and it seems almost impossible that any of the undesirable class of trade could secure credit to exceed $300 for necessaries.

Federal Label Regulations Revised.

Food and Drug Board Now Makes Suggestion Regarding Principal Label Instead of Command. Text of Amendments to Regulations 17 and 19.

The Federal Food and Drug Board has issued during the week several amendments to Regulations 17 and 19 regarding misbranding. The regulations as revised are as follows:—

MISBRANDING.

REGULATION 17. LABEL.

(Section 8.)

(a) The term "label" applies to any printed, pictorial, or other matter upon or attached to any package of a food or drug product, or any container thereof subject to the provisions of this act.

(b) The principal label shall consist, first, of all information which the Food and Drugs Act, June 30, 1906, specifically requires, to wit, the name of the place of manufacture in the case of food compounds or mixtures sold under a distinctive name; statements which show that the articles are compounds, mixtures, or blends; the words "compound," "mixture," or "blend," and words designating substances or their derivatives and proportions required to be named in the case of foods and drugs All this information shall appear upon the principal label and should have no intervening descriptive or explanatory reading matter. Second, if the name of the manufacturer and place of manufacture are given, they should also appear upon the principal label. Third, preferably upon the principal label, in conjunction with the name of the substance, such phrases as "artificially colored," "colored with sulphate of copper," or any other such descriptive phrases necessary to be announced should be conspicuously displayed. Fourth, elsewhere upon the principal label other matter may appear in the discretion of the manufacturer. If the contents are stated in terms of weight or measure, such statement should appear upon the principal label and must be couched in plain terms, as required by Regulation 29.

(c) If the principal label is in a foreign language, all information required by law and such other information as indicated above in (b) shall appear upon it in English. Besides the principal label in the language of the country of production, there may be also one or more other labels, if desired, in other languages, but none of them more prominent than the principal label, and these other labels must bear the information required by law, but not necessarily in English. The size of the type used to declare the information required by the act shall not be smaller than 8-point (brevier) capitals: Provided, That in case the size of the package will not permit the use of 8-point type, the size of the tpye may be reduced proportionately.

(d) Descriptive matter upon the label shall be free from any statement, design, or device regarding the article or the ingredients or substances contained therein, or quality thereof, or place of origin, which is false or misleading in any particular The term "design" or "device" applies to pictorial matter of every description, and to abbreviations, characters or signs for weights, measures, or names of substances.

(e) An article containing more than one food product or active medicinal agent is misbranded if named after a single constituent.

In the case of drugs the nomenclature employed by the United States Pharmacopoeia and the National Formulary shall obtain.

(f) The use of any false or misleading statement, design, or device appearing on any part of the label shall not be justified by any statement given as the opinion of an expert or other person, nor by any descriptive matter explaining the use of the false or misleading statement, design, or device.

REGULATION 19. CHARACTER OF NAME.

(Section 8.)

(a) A simple or unmixed food or drug product not bearing a distinctive name should be designated by its common name in the English language; or if a drug, by any name recognized in the United States Pharmacopœia or National Formulary. No further description of the components or qualities is required, except as to content of alcohol, morphine, etc.

(b) The use of a geographical name shall not be permitted in connection with a food or drug product not manufactured or produced in that place, when such name indicates that the article was manufactured or produced in that place.

(e) The use of a geographical name in connection with a food or drug product will not be deemed a misbranding when by reason of long usuage it has come to represent a generic term and is used to indicate a style, type, or brand; but in all such cases the State or Territory where any such article is manufactured or produced shall be stated upon the principal label.

(d) A foreign name which is recognized as distinctive of a product of a foreign country shall not be used upon an article of domestic origin except as an indication of the type or style of quality or manufacture, and then only when so qualified that it cannot be offered for sale under the name of a foreign article.

One of the principal changes is in the sentence in Paragraph b, regarding the form for the label. In the original this read as fol-

In the amendment the reading is as follows: "All this information shall appear upon the principal label, and should have no intervening or explanatory reading matter." The added words "and should have" make it only a recommendation and not at all a command. The Federal Board, as has been repeatedly pointed out, has no right to interfere or dictate regarding a label which does not misrepresent.

Grocery and General Store Failures Largely Increase.

Record for January, 1908, Shows Many More Than in Same Month of 1907. Hard Times Blamed.

The official figures showing the failures in the grocery and general store lines for the month of January, 1908, show in both lines a decided increase as compared with January of the year before. The figures are as follows:—

General Stores:—In January, 1908, 308; liabilities, $2,785,417; in January, 1907, 216; liabilities, $1,381,076.

Grocery Stores.—In January, 1908, 344; liabilities, $1,292,869; in January, 1907, 243; liabilities, $800,221.

The financial crisis is held responsible.

AMONG THE TRADE.

Notice has been given that the partnership existing between Jacob G. Carter and William J. Williams has been dissolved by mutual consent, William J. Williams withdrawing. All claims will be settled and the business continued by Jacob G. Carter, trading as J. G. Carter & Co., to whom all accounts of the firm are now payable.

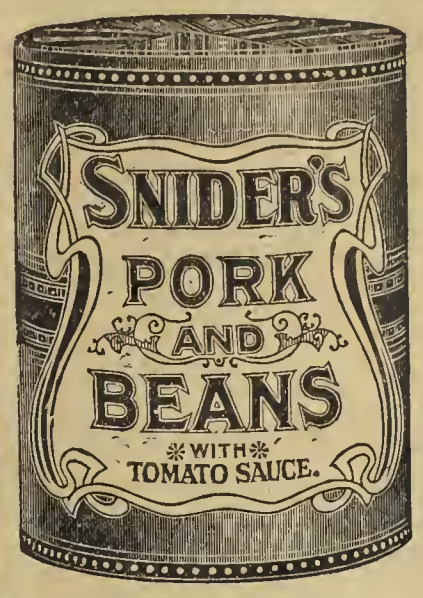
New Sugar Refinery to Open Shortly.

Announcement is made by the Warner Sugar Refining Co. that its plant at Edgewater, N. J., will commence operations about March 15th. On the outset the refinery will have a capacity of about 1,000 to 1,500 barrels per day, which will eventually be increased to about 2,500 or 3,000 barrels per day. The president of this concern, which is capitalized at $3,000,000, is Charles M. Warner, who was formerly in the glucose business.

Two-Minute Sermons for the Retail Grocer

XXIX.—Concentration.

Concentration is the secret of success.



The manager who tries to scatter his attention over all the details of his business at the same time is making the greatest mistake it is in his power to make. He had better put some one else in charge of the business and go entirely away from it than to do this.

The management of any business, if it is to succeed, requires thought concentration. The manager should give his attention to every part of the business, of course, but not all parts at the same time. Let other heads take care of part of the details and then report to the manager. Take time to concentrate all thought on one detail of the business at a time, and hold it there until that particular detail is put in proper condition, and then the same mind can be concentrated on some other part of the business and thus one kink after another be straightened out and the entire machine be made to work in unison.

Any man can develop this power, which means success, and all men should strive at all times for greater development. Too many are to-day trying to make a big showing and try to do everything at once. They dabble in one part of their business for a moment and then in another, and do not put their entire attention in any one place, taking a pride in their ability to hear and understand everything at one and the same time, but the man who really accomplishes things is he who can hold his attention on one subject, no matter how many other subjects are being discussed within his hearing, and go right ahead and get results.

Please Your Trade—and You'll Hold It

Many of your customers leave it to you when they order a can of Pork and Beans, because they have confidence in your judgment and ought to know what kind are the best, even if you don't. If you do know, you have tied your customer to you; if you don't, you are taking a chance. Don't take chances with your trade, it is risky. Just open a can of

METAL SHIPPING PAILS

No Boxing or Crating Necessary

FOR Coffee and Spices we believe you will find this new metal shipping pail the best transportation package on the market to-day. It has been perfected only through practical and exacting experiment. We believe it to be practically theft-proof. The cover fits into the pail and is fastened by clinching the cover-lugs over the wired top of the pail. In addition we furnish small steel fasteners (not shown), which are clinched over the cover-lugs and effectively prevent theft in transit.

This galvanized shipping pail is made in four sizes: Small, Medium, Large, Extra Large.

THE GROCERY MARKETS

Tea.

The tea market is fairly active and steady, no change having occurred during the past week. The demand is probably half what is considered an active demand. Prices show no change and the entire list is steady and unchanged.

Coffee.

The market for Rio and Santos coffee has been very stupid during the week, and speculative options have declined slightly. The receipts of coffee at primal points have increased somewhat, interfering materially with the syndicate's attempt to push values still further upward. The trade is still continuing its hand to mouth attitude, more on account of the financial situation than anything else. Mild coffees are steady. Mocha easy and Java steady. The general consumptive demand for coffee is fair.

Sugar.

The sugar market has weakened slightly during the week. As raws have become in larger supply, the price has eased off, as was expected, and sales have been made for immediate shipment at 1/8 cent off. Refined sugar is unchanged, but if the raw market continues weak it will probably decline. The demand is light.

Syrup and Molasses.

Glucose shows no change for the week. Compound syrup is unchanged in price and in fair demand. Sugar syrup is steady and moderately active. Molasses is quiet, and as to the high grades, firm.

Canned Goods.

Tomatoes are unchanged, both future and spot. Prices show no change in either. Corn is quiet on spot and unchanged; some little future shoepeg is selling. Peas are inactive, both spot and future, prices being unchanged. Eastern peaches and apples are both quiet, peaches being scarce and firm and apples steady to easy. The small Baltimore line shows no change and is quiet. California canned goods in first hands is dull.

Fish.

There have been no changes in the fish market during the week. Norway mackerel are firm and in light demand, without further change in price since the last report. Irish mackerel are almost unobtainable and very high. Shore mackerel are quiet and unchanged in price. Cod, hake and haddock are in moderate demand at prices that are rather easy than otherwise. Domestic sardines are unchanged and prices from second hands are easy. Imported sardines are scarce and firm, the demand eagerly taking all the French brands offered. Salmon is steady in price and quiet.

Dried Fruits.

Prunes are unchanged in price and are in fair demand on the last reported low basis. Peaches are about 1½ cents below the highest point reached, due no doubt to the small demand. Apricots are dull at ruling prices. Currants are active at unchanged prices. Raisins are still dull and weak. The coast shows no further weakness, but second hands holders are very easy in their ideas. Raisins are very cheap just now in all markets. Dates, citron and figs are all unchanged in price, the first named selling in only a small way, and the last two not at all.

Beans and Peas.

Pea beans are firmer, especially on spot. To come forward the quotation is $2.30, but good beans on spot would command $2.40. The demand is good. Marrows have also advanced, being quoted now at $2.25. The demand is fair. California limas are nominally unchanged, though sales have been made at a concession of about 5 points. Dried peas of all grades are unchanged, and as to green and Scotch, very firm and high.

Butter.

The butter market is firm and unchanged. Arrivals of fancy fresh butter are very light, and considerable goods of all grades are being withdrawn from cold storage. Stocks of storage butter are decreasing very fast, and the market is healthy throughout. No change in price is considered likely within the coming week.

Eggs.

The egg market has remained stationary during the past week. Storage eggs are so low in quantity that they can scarcely last more than a week or so. Fresh eggs are increasing, and if there is any change during the coming week it will probably be a slight decline, but weather conditions

Window-Dressing Articles Wanted

For several months the "Grocery World" has been looking for the right man to take charge of its "Window-Dressing Department" and contribute a good, suggestive weekly article. We have tried several, but none was exactly what was wanted.

We will now attempt to get these articles from our subscribers, probably every one of whom has some technical knowledge of window-dressing. What we want is articles clearly describing window displays that can be made by the average retailer; not necessarily new or original—in fact, those which have been used successfully are perhaps preferable to all others.

For all acceptable articles, the "Grocery World" will pay an average price of $5 each. All matter sent in under this arrangement should be addressed to the "Window-Dressing Department." If drawings are also sent they should be made throughout in black ink (not pencil).

"Skipper" Sardines.

THEY'LL SUIT YOU TO A TEA

As you must sell sardines, why not sell the best—the kind that will bring and hold trade for you? "Skipper" Sardines will do this.

The special features "Skipper" Sardines possess are—

Delicate and delicious flavor,
Superb quality of pure Olive Oil,
Nourishing properties,
Ease of digestion.

NOTE.—Our new booklet entitled "History of the 'Skipper'" is yours free on receipt of your name and address on a postal. It contains the "Skipper" history, the true history of the sardine, and some choice sardine recipes. You and your wife will appreciate it.

can change the situation at any time.

Cheese.

The market on fancy cheese is unchanged. Stocks of late made cheese are gradually decreasing, and in another week or two the under grades will be out of the market. The consumptive demand for cheese is about normal. The price is about 10 per cent. above a year ago, while stocks are fully 40 per cent. below a year ago. There will likely be a firm market and unchanged prices for the next few days, after which will probably come a slight advance.

Provisions.

Smoked meats are unchanged throughout. There has been some increase in the demand, but not enough to influence prices. Pure and compound lard are unchanged and in moderate demand. The price now ruling is already low and therefore no change is looked for in the next few days. Dried beef, barrel pork and canned meats are in normal trade and rule at unchanged prices.

Produce.

Yellow globe onions, 75 to 85 cents per bushel; York State, 75 to 80 cents per bushel, demand good; white, $1 to $1.25 per crate, demand poor; Pennsylvania potatoes, 80 to 85 cents per bushel; York State, 75 to 80 cents per bushel, demand fair to good; sweet potatoes primes, $1 to $1.25 per basket; culls, 50 to 60 cents per basket, demand good; Danish cabbage, $2.50 to $3 per 100, $11 to $12 per ton; Savoy, 50 to 75 cents per barrel, demand fair; white turnips, 30 to 35 cents per basket; yellow, 50 to 60 cents per bushel, 35 to 40 cents per basket, demand fair to good; carrots, $1.50 to $1.75 per barrel, demand fair to good; Pennsylvania celery, 5 to 20 cents per bunch, demand poor; parsnips, $1 to $1.50 per barrel, demand fair.

Green Fruit.

Apples, Greenings, $3.50 to $4.50 per barrel; Hulbersons, $3 to $4 per barrel; Spy, $2.50 to $4 per barrel; Spitz, $3 to $4 per barrel; Baldwins, $2.25 to $3.50 per barrel; Kings, $3.50 to $4.50 per barrel; Russets, $2.25 to $3.25 per barrel, demand fair; bananas, jumbo, $1.50 to $2; firsts, $1.50; 8-hands, 90 cents to $1.15; 7-hands, 65 to 80 cents; 6-hands, 40 to 60 cents, demand poor; California oranges, $2 to $2.40 per box, demand fair to good; grapefruit, $2.50 to $6 per box, demand fair; pineapples, $2.50 to $3 per box, demand poor; lemons, $2.75 to $3.25 per box, demand fair to good.

Nuts.

Almonds, 17 to 18 cents per pound; Brazil, 10 cents per pound; filberts, 10¼ cents per pound; pecans, 9¾ cents per pound; walnuts, 12½ to 14 cents per pound; mixed nuts, 11 cents per pound, demand poor; peanuts, choice, green, 4 cents per pound; fancy, 5 cents per pound; jumbo, 6¼ cents per pound; roasted, choice, $1 per bushel; fancy, $1.25 per bushel; jumbo, $1.50 per bushel, demand fair.

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORTS.

Baltimore Canned Goods.

We are getting numerous inquiries for No. 3 standard tomatoes at 77½ cents per dozen, though the amount of business being done is not large. There is only a packer here and there who is willing to sell at 77½ cents per dozen. A great majority of packers are holding firm at 80 cents per dozen. They seem to figure that the present is a poor time to force goods on the market and that it is a pretty safe calculation to look for a decided improvement in buying sometime within the next few months. This seems like pretty good reasoning, and although there are no doubt a number of packers who will weaken and close out their small stocks of tomatoes, yet the majority will probably work along on this policy.

There is nothing being done on future tomatoes. Some good brands are being quoted at 60 and 80 cents per dozen, but there is evidently no disposition either on part of buyers or sellers to get together just yet.

The situation here on oysters is very much stronger. We have had some of the coldest weather of the winter during the past week, together with a good snow storm. The result has been a complete stop of all oyster packing with no prospects of opening up again for at least a week or ten days, under the most favorable conditions; possibly two or three weeks.

Sweet Potatoes.—Stocks here have been reduced almost to the vanishing point. The price may go to $1.25 per dozen at any time.

THOS. G. CRANWELL & CO.
Baltimore, Md.

Imported Fish Products.

The business in general has shown a decided improvement during the last week and orders are coming in more freely for all our lines.

Holland herrings are in better demand, the prices are unchanged and low.

Scotch herrings neglected and prices unchanged.

Irish mackerel decidedly scarce and prices have advanced further during the last week.

Norway Mackerel.—There has been a much better demand and quite a number of sales have been made on a basis of slightly higher prices than were offered by the buyers last week. Buyers are gradually coming around and are placing their orders for immediate wants, as they can clearly see that there is no chance of any lower prices this season. On the contrary prices are sure to advance, as stocks are exceptionally low.

Imported Oil Sardines.—There is a good inquiry and desirable lots are taken out of the market rapidly.

Sprats.—Demand has improved on those, and owing to reports from Europe of poor catch, prices have shown a hardening tendency and buyers are taking hold of the goods in moderate quantities.

Olive oil has shown a further tendency to advance, especially for fine grades.

Spanish Red Peppers are in very good demand, and present low prices offer an excellent opportunity for purchases for the spring and summer trade. Prices are likely to advance in the very near future.

STROHMEYER & ARPE CO.
New York, N. Y.

Spices.

The market has improved, the demand during the last week being far in excess of what we have experienced lately. We now look for a gradual but certain advances in prices from this date.

Pepper is in very good demand. Has had the tendency to make the market firmer. Cables quote decidedly higher prices. We expect to see still higher prices rule within the next week.

Cayennes are very firm at prices somewhat higher. Demand is fair.

Cloves are firmer. Receipts, as stated in last week's letter, have been unusually large. It is very hard to predict how the market will go.

Nutmegs are firm at unusually low prices. Demand shows some improvement during the week. The present is the most safe time to buy in large lots.

Cassias.—Demand improving; prices moving upward. China Cassia in cases is exceedingly scarce and practically none to be had, market value having advanced steadily during the week.

Pimento (Allspice).—Demand is fair. Prices are steady but unchanged.

Gingers are somewhat firmer abroad. Our market is practically unchanged.

Seeds.—Caraway holds firm; in fact 10 cents is selling price today. Poppy is slightly weaker. Coriander is somewhat firm and higher prices will likely rule.

Rubbed sage and sweet herbs are unchanged in value and in very good demand.

McCORMICK & CO.
Baltimore, Md.

MARKET NOTES.

Florida oranges are doing a little better. The range for the lower grades is about 25 cents higher—$2.75 to $3.50. The receipts are ample, but not excessive, and the demand fair.

Florida tomatoes are poor in quality for the most part and show a wide range of price—$1.50 to $4. There is a good demand for good fruit. Hothouse tomatoes average 25 cents per pound, and the demand is good on account of scarcity.

Florida strawberries have ruled a little higher during the past few days, even poor stock bringing 45 cents per quart. Later the market sagged, however, and the present range is 25 to 35 cents. Berries have been very cheap this season. The demand is fair.

New Bermuda white potatoes are doing a little better. No. 2s average $5 and No. 1s $6.50 to $7. The demand is only fair.

Florida grapefruit still maintain the old range—$3 to $6. The demand is good.

Florida tangerines range from $4 to $5, and the demand is limited.

Florida eggplants range from $2 to $2.25, and the demand is only fair.

Florida salad shows a wide range. Stock can be obtained as low as 75 cents, but for anything good the market ranges from $1.75 to $2.50. The demand is fair.

Boston hothouse cucumbers average $1.75 per dozen, which shows an advance. The demand is light.

Red hothouse radishes range from $3.50 to $4 per 100, and white $4. The demand is fair.

Official Chemists' Ideas of Sausage and Mincemeat.

The Association of Agricultural Chemists', in session at Chicago last week, fixed upon the following definition of sausage and meat products:—

> It contains no larger amount of water than the meats from which it it prepared, and if it bears a name descriptive of composition or origin, it corresponds to such descriptive name. All animal tissues used as containers, such as casings, stomachs, etc., are clean and sound.
> Mincemeat is declared to be "a mixture of not less than 10 per cent. of cooked, comminuted meat, chopped suet, apple and other fruit, with salt, spices, sugar, syrup and molasses, vinegar, fresh concentrated or fermented fruit juices and spirituous liquors."

Breaking the News of the Cash Basis.

California Grocer Produces a Model Letter to Announce to His Customers That After a Certain Date He Will Sell Only for Cash.

The "Grocery World" has frequently been asked by subscribers for suggestions for a letter from a retail grocer to his customers announcing the adoption of the cash system. An extremely good model of such a letter is now available. Mr. A. Russell, a retail grocer of Los Angeles, Cal., decided several weeks ago to adopt the cash system and sent to all his credit customers a letter to that effect. A copy of that letter has been obtained and is as follows:—

> My Dear Madam:—On February 1, 1908, I shall place my business on a strictly cash basis, after which date no goods will be sold except for cash. In making this announcement I feel an explanation is due my many friends whom I have to thank for their valued patronage, some of which has extended into years.
> In my endeavor to hold prices down to the lowest notch, notwithstanding the many recent advances in all grocery staples, the advantages accruing for the cash business have not failed to attract my attention, with the result that, after studying the matter from every side, I am convinced that the interests of all are best served by the cash basis. It is the one way to keep your living expenses to the minimum.
> In the first place it is commonly known that every credit business must figure on a percentage of loss through bad accounts. The cash plan turns this loss into profit for you, as the cash dealer does not suffer such loss and can sell you much cheaper.
> By paying cash for my goods I can take advantage of cash discounts and get better prices; this means a material saving which I can turn directly to your benefit.
> Again, it costs much less to conduct a cash business, as it does away with soliciting, etc., which means more saving for you.
> The cash grocery is not an innovation by any means—it has been tried and proven so successful both from the dealer's standpoint, as well as the consumer's, that the largest stores in the country are rapidly adopting this method.
>
> My cash customers have already expressed themselves as pleased with my intentions, so it is particularly to my credit customers that I appeal for a trial of the cash plan, and it shall then be my aim to show you that your money will go further and that you will save more by paying cash than you thought possible.
> The main point now is—will you give the cash plan a trial? I believe you will, and after that I know you will be better satisfied than ever.
> My store has been remodeled with up-to-date fixtures with a view of making a sanitary and attractive display of fresh fruits, vegetables and seasonable goods at lowest cash prices. A full line of granite ware and kitchen utensils will be in evidence. Come and get acquainted with our new conditions.
> Yours for economy,
> A. RUSSELL.

The "Grocery World" has written to Mr. Russell, asking him how the letter worked, and hopes to present this interesting information later.

Michigan rhubarb is scarce, especially anything good. The range in price is 50 to 60 cents. Most of the receipts are coming in bad order.

Biscuit Trust's Enormous Profits.

The sales of the National Biscuit Co., or the Biscuit Trust, during the twelve months ended January 31st last amounted to $41,802,224 and the profits for the same period to $4,101,414, the per cent. of profit to sales being 9.81 per cent. The profits were equal to 7 per cent. of the $24,804,500 preferred stock and 8.03 per cent. on the $29,236,000 common stock. How much of this enormous profit comes from charging for excelsior and cardboard fillers at the cake price is not stated in the report, but it must be a considerable percentage.

THE SCIENCE OF ADVERTISING

This Department is devoted to the criticism of advertising matter sent in, to the devising of new advertising ideas for special occasions, upon request, and to the suggesting of original advertisements when data is supplied. All communications sent in for this Department should be addressed to the Editor of Science of Advertising. They will be filed in their order and taken up according to strict rotation.

Johnstown, N. Y., Dec. 14, 1907.
Editor Science of Advertising.

Sir:—I would be glad to hear the criticism which you have to offer on the inclosed advertisement which we had in our regular space for Friday and Saturday's sales. Thanking you in advance, I beg to remain,

Yours truly,
J. SPONNOBLE, JR.

Here is the advertisement inclosed. In the original it measured 10 inches across three columns:—

Hamburgh Steak—Made from best beef, 3 lbs.	25¢

I don't much like the way this advertisement is set. The paragraphs ought to have been more definitely divided. The advertisement does not present a clean-cut appearance. If I were Mr. Sponnoble I should put my name and address at the bottom. I know of no good reason whatever for putting it at the top. It kills whatever headlines might be put there, which should have no competition, so to speak, and is generally out of place. It would be much better to use a regular headline, followed by whatever introductions might be desired. Let the main head about fill the full width of the advertisement and the introduction, confined to a few lines, be indented both ends. Then I should divide the balance of the space into columns of even width. Mr. Sponnoble's printer has used columns of all sorts of widths—what is the idea of that? It simply clutters the advertisement up and makes it hard to read. An advertisement this size would stand dividing into three columns, rules being used between the columns, and wide dashes between the paragraphs. The advertisement would then look clean and present a much more inviting appearance than it does now.

W
? ? ? ?

WHY do the big downtown merchants light their windows at night and display bargains in them?

To induce the people to stop and look.

WHY do they want the people to "stop and look"?

Because experience has told them that some of these people will come into their stores the next day.

WHY do they want them to come into their stores?

Because they know that is the only way to get them to buy something.

WHY can't the grocer do the same thing? If it works with the department stores, won't it work with yours?

WHY isn't it worth trying, when one new customer a day will pay the cost of the light for a week?

We will have a representative call and show you how to make your windows draw trade and tell you just what it will cost, if you will drop us a line.

As to the matter itself, it is good. Best of all because it is short—there is such a tendency to use unnecessary language and thus waste space. If this advertisement were displayed better it would be a good advertisement.

Mr. Sponnoble also sends in a full page advertisement used by him during the Christmas season. It is surrounded by a holly border in colors and is a very ornamental affair. I cannot reproduce it, on account of its size, but I should make this criticism of it—it purports to be a Christmas advertisement, but contains considerable matter which has nothing whatever to do with Christmas. I should have made all the matter appropriate to Christmas and should have made the advertisement smaller before I put extraneous matter in it.

Heart-to-Heart Talks With Grocery Clerks

"Mutual Aid Sheets" Which a Large Eastern Retail Grocer Tucks in Each Clerk's Weekly Pay Envelope. Some Advice From the Head of the House on Selling Goods and Other Subjects.

[The "Grocery World" has come into possession of a series of "Mutual Aid Sheets," which are weekly little talks issued regularly to its clerks by one of the large retail grocery stores of the East. The talks are typewritten and a copy is enclosed in each clerk's pay envelope. They are so soundly practical and so useful generally that it is this journal's purpose to publish them weekly or bi-weekly for the edification of other clerks as well as other grocers who have clerks.—ED.]

LOOSE CEREALS.

Very likely the grocer of the future will look back upon us today and say, "how did they ever do business and dig meal from a barrel." But we're going to do some cereal selling the coming week, and we want you to get into this spirit of bulk goods.

Take the Irish oatmeal for instance. Think of the quantities of that we used to sell. The same with the Graham and rye and rolled oats.

We'll put the Irish or Pinhead oatmeal out at 6½ cents a pound, the Graham flour at 5 cents, and the rye flour at 3½ cents—and see that you sell some.

Hundreds of wise old-fashioned people want to buy rye flour by the pound; they want to buy hominy by the pound and oatmeal as well.

The fact is we'll have to step back a few paces. We're going too quick with the package craze. Let us take a breath and allow present eaters to catch up with us, so that they can buy what they want and have the order filled.

SALT HERRING.

Four nice salt herring for 10 cents. Many a customer would be glad to have you say that. There are people that don't like to ask for anything so common as a salt herring.

SELL MINCE MEAT.

That is, loose mince meat. We have more of it on hand at this season than the law allows, so to speak. We will allow a commission of 5 cents for every three pounds sold. Price, three pounds for 25 cents.

FRIDAY ORDERS.

We noticed a decided increase in our Friday order business the last two weeks. That's what comes from seasonable notice in the paper and quiet suggestions by yourselves. Keep it up. There is no strong argument for everybody crowding in on us Saturday. Make it clear that Friday is the better day, and that Friday's order will leave the store Saturday morning at 7 o'clock.

FACING MISTAKES.

Be manly about an error. When it comes home to you meet it. It may sting. It may humiliate, but don't try to shift it. Don't excuse yourself out of it. Take your medicine. If "you're business" it will do you good. Many a bright successful man in this city owes a large part of his success to his early carelessness. That sounds contradictory. The "Boss" simply kept knocking the carelessness out of him, until he waked up. Face your mistakes. Take every one to heart. Say to yourself, "This won't happen again."

Give Me the Loafs.

The other Saturday my wife begged for my company at lunch. She wanted to go to Wanamaker's tea room. The tea room's up on the third floor right across from the harness department. It's a pretty place—a regular quick lunch place. If you're lucky you can get a ham sandwich in forty-five minutes.

While we sat there John Wanamaker, the mighty, passed along a gallery on the other side.

"There he goes," I said to my wife.

"I see," she said, "think of the money he takes in in this store in one day."

"He won't take in any of mine if they don't hurry along that sandwich," I said.

But the thought of the day's receipts wasn't what I thought of as I looked at Wanamaker go by. What I thought was that no man with as much under his hat as John Wanamaker has can ever feel the happiness that comes to a fellow who has only one well-heated iron in the fire.

Maybe the one-iron man won't make as much money, but he'll make more flesh and have a smoother mind.

Honest, I don't envy John Wanamaker. Why look at him! First he's got two stores, one in Philadelphia and the other in New York. Both of 'em are among the biggest stores in the country. Of course he can get competent people under him, but the stores are run under his name; he's responsible for 'em, and he's the head of both.

For both of 'em he's just built two big buildings—enormous places. Each one took a monumental lot of financing outside of the businesses themselves. He had to do it.

Outside of the stores and the buildings he's got a lot of other things up his sleeve. He's partner in a clothing store and he's got money in maybe a dozen other schemes. He's got to look after 'em all, first because that's the kind of a man he is, and second because if he don't he may lose his money.

The man who can stand up under a load like that is a giant. But he's a badly worried giant. I'll bet business ain't absent from his mind a single minute of the day, awake or asleep.

Why you know for years there have been rumors that John Wanamaker was about to go under. Last fall they got so bad he issued a statement over his own name. My idea is that a fellow like him gets in so deep that his creditors simply can't let him fail—they've got to club together to tide him over.

The only way a merchant like John Wanamaker can be perfectly happy and contented is for him to have a tremendously big capital so he can float everything without going outside. If he can do that he can get along. But none of these big merchants have that much—they all have to go outside. John Wanamaker's paper's floating about the market all the time.

I know a good many merchants—friends of mine—who have a lot of irons in the fire. Of course, on a smaller scale than Wanamaker.

Not one of 'em is what I call a happy man.

I'll tell you what my idea of a happy man is. It's a fellow who don't have to think of business after he comes home to supper; who can sit down before his fire in the evening and play with his children or talk with his wife in absolute leisure—got nothing on his mind—got nothing to do for the time being but loaf, and who can go to his bed when the time comes and snore like an old horse till morning.

These fellows with ten irons in the fire can't do that. I've known a lot of 'em and I say to you I never knew one who could.

A man like that either can't stay at home at all, or if he does his mind's so full of stuff that the children must go to bed an hour before their time because they make a noise. Or he's chewin' over a lot of figures and grunting when his wife tells him her little story of the day's home doings.

The ten-iron man may leave more money than the other fellow, and he may have more to spend while he lives, but he hasn't got what's better than money—leisure of body and leisure of mind.

I say what I've said before—that the man with a good grocery store in a country town that makes him a comfortable living, and who contents himself with that and don't go galooting around after other schemes—he's the fellow who has a chance to be just about as comfortably contented as anybody on earth.

Some of these days, that's the sort of business I hope to have. I've loved the road—I love it yet. But it's a poor trade for a home. One of these days, as sure as you live, I'm going to have a clean little retail store somewhere that'll give me, after hours, the comfortable loafs that John Wanamaker, I'll bet, hasn't had for twenty years.

Money Tightness Hits Cocoa.

The cocoa market, which was on the crest of a mild speculative movement when the financial crash came, has undergone a sharp readjustment in prices. In some cases, as, for instance, Trinidad, there has been a drop within less than four months of over 40 per cent. Cocoa beans, which sold at 26 cents, are now finding few buyers at 15 cents, and, according to present indications, a still lower level of prices will be reached. In this regard it might be noted that two years ago cocoa beans quoted now at 15 cents sold at 11 cents.

IF YOU SLICE DRIED BEEF

you need Johnson's "EVERSHARP" slicing machine. Because it slices dried beef to perfection, and moist freshly cured beef in full-size wafer slices, thin, smooth and delicious, will attract more new trade than any article you can offer.

IF YOU DON'T SLICE DRIED BEEF

you certainly need Johnson's "EVERSHARP" slicer, because you are losing the prestige and profit of the most salable and profitable specialty in the whole line of eatables.

This machine was invented by an experienced retail grocer to correct the faults, remove the defects and improve the shortcomings of all other machines.

It will slice five pounds of dried beef in five minutes, every slice perfect, the full size of the meat, transparently thin, smooth and shining. It will cut the tough sinewy ends in perfect slices. It will slice up every little end. It will save enough time and labor, prevent enough waste, draw enough new trade, and increase the sales of sliced meat, sufficient to pay for itself in a very short time.

Send for a sample of sandwich sliced beef and see the magnet that draws the trade.

No Consumer Gets a Price from Us

Why does Mother's Oats have the largest sale of any rolled oats in the United States?

First because it suits consumers, but mainly because it suits grocers and they lend it a hand.

It is easy to get 12 cents a package for Mother's Oats, and it is never advertised to the consumer for less. As a matter of fact, we never advertise any price to the consumer, for such a course would bind the dealer to sell it perpetually at that, even though an advancing market made it wholly unprofitable.

DON'T IMAGINE

that because you have not enjoyed as great a business on Egg Dyes for the last few seasons, that the custom is on the wane, for you are in error. It is more likely that you have been selling a brand of Dyes not quite up to the standard, one that does not give your customer as much for his money, or as brilliant colors as he desires.

This, in an "egg shell," is a very good description of Fleck's New Combination Egg Dyes. Each package will color and decorate more eggs with more colors, shades, effects and designs than any other sold.

JUST THINK of each five cent package containing four dozen separate designs of animals, flowers, birds, funny pictures, and a half dozen plain colors, from which may be made more than a dozen shades.

Three and one-half dozen of these five cent packages in each $1.00 box, or six boxes, containing 252 packages, for $5.40. You don't make from 110 per cent. to 133 per cent. on everything you sell; but you do on Fleck's Dyes.

Little Things That Help Trade

Clever Ideas That Retailers Everywhere Have Used to Woo and Win Business. Tonics for Dull Times.

[All of the following plans have actually been used, and so far as can be learned, have all succeeded. They were compiled by Butler Brothers.

An Alabama firm thoroughly systematized its advertising. At the start a territory for a radius of about ten miles from the store was mapped out and they hired a man to go to every house in it and fill out a card like this

Name .....
Sex ..... P. O. .....
Mail How Often? .....
Age ..... Married .....
White or Colored? .....
Occupation .....
Employer .....
Dist. to Jonesville .....
Usually Trade at .....

for every member of the household to whom advertising matter might be sent. These names were divided into four classes, the heads of families, their wives, young men and young women. Some advertising matter is sent out each week to one of the four classes. In this way the whole list is covered every month, and every home in the territory is getting something about the store each week. As the town has no newspaper, the mimeograph used at first has been supplanted by a small printing press that will print a sheet 8¼ x 10½ inches. The mailing list carefully secured and the persistent following up of each name have brought the store a gratifying increase of business. Few large stores have as systematic a method of reaching their customers.

A Kentucy customer has found these two plans excellent in holding trade. A teaspoon costing about $1.15 per gross is given with each cake of a staple soap. This has increased the soap sales and also those in other goods. With another staple a glass tumbler is given with each 10-cent package. In this way the customer is induced to buy until she secures the set, which costs about 20 cents.

* * *

Here is a suggestion for a window display that will boom your candy department and at the same time utilize in another way the popular Teddy Bear. In the centre of your window put a small round table, around which seat a happy family party—father, mother and two cubs; put a dish of sweets in front of each and a tall dish filled with candy in the centre of the table.

* * *

Several merchants in a town where there was no printing office within a reasonable distance bought a copying machine, which they used together in getting out their advertising matter.

* * *

A department store in a Missouri city had an umbrella window which attracted unusual attention. A waterproof umbrella at a stated price was the feature. To emphasize the waterproof idea, the umbrella was opened, turned upside down and placed in the centre of the window and partly filled with water. In it four gold fish were seen swimming.

* * *

Put as many home-goods items as you feel like offering for 25 cents in a conspicuous place in your window with a card reading: "These would cost you —— any time but now. During this sale 25 cents for choice."

* * *

One of our Indiana customers who introduced baking powder gave away a complete aquarium, globe, two gold fish, water plants and pebbles with every pound.

* * *

A Utah merchant has bought a fine baby weighing scales with a basket attachment, weighing up to 25 pounds. Anybody is welcome to use them and the merchant even goes so far as to deliver them free of charge on request. The good will of the baby's parents is certainly secured for the temporary loan of the baby scale, as such a one of approved pattern costs more than the average family cares to pay for the little time it will be of service.

Hotbed spinach averages $3 per barrel, and the demand is fair.

Lansing, Mich.

The Lansing (Mich.) Retail Grocers' Association will endeavor to have a city market established where growers of green stuff and hucksters may gather to dispose of their goods.

A committee has been appointed to confer with the Business Men's Association and the Council.

If sentiment is in favor of it the Grocers' Association will endeavor to have the Council set aside some central and convenient place for the market.

The scheme, the grocers think, is a good one for buyers and sellers alike. It will not bar hucksters from selling on the streets after certain hours, and will give housewives and dealers a chance to get the choice of vegetables, etc., early in the day, and the produce raiser who does not have a clean, good stock would have to "peddle" it if he disposed of his stock at all, it is argued.

The grocers also decided last meeting to establish a credit system for delinquents. Each member of the association will hand to the secretary on meeting nights a list of those customers who have eaten at his expense. The secretary then will compile a list, to which each member of the association will have access.

Colorado.

The action of the Attorney-General of Colorado in the recent suit against the organized merchants of that State, in charging the association with being a trust, and the attitude of the newspapers which have stirred up the agitation against the grocers was considered at the annual convention last week, at Trinidad, of the Retail Merchants' Association of Colorado at a meeting of the Board of Directors held before the convention opened. The committee reported resolutions as follows:—

Resolved, That we denounce and condemn as unjust and untrue the charges of unlawful acts made against the Retail Merchants' Association of Colorado and individual retail grocers, as stated in the complaint of the Attorney-General of Colorado in the recent injunction suit against the association and others, in the District Court of the city and county of Denver, and

Whereas, The daily papers of Denver seem to have been misinformed as to the facts and have not published the just and actual truth in regard to said members, be it

Resolved, That a committee be appointed representing this association to formulate and lay before the public a true statement in regard to all said matter so charged against this association.

Massachusetts.

The Legislative Committee of the Massachusetts Retail Grocers' and Provision Dealers' Association has issued the following letter to all members:—

Dear Sir:—The bill in the present legislature to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors in grocery and provision stores will receive the hearty support of the Massachusetts Retail Grocers' and Provision Dealers' Association. It is known as House Bill No. 402, and reads as follows:—

Section 1. Each license of the fourth and fifth class shall be subject to the further condition that it shall not be exercised in any premises used in whole or in part for the grocery, provision or other retail business except for the business of innholder or common victualler.

Sec. 2. This act shall take effect upon its passage.

The question of prohibiting the granting of licenses to grocers to sell intoxicating liquors is an important measure.

As a grocer are you interested in the subject?

Are you in favor or opposed to the granting of such licenses?

Do you believe in this association taking active part in the controversy?

Are you willing to back your opinion by your effort and influence?

Will you express your opinion to the Legislative Committee of this association, which, if you prefer, will be considered confidential?

Per order,
LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE.

emporium of this spice, exporting 14,316 tons, valued at $2,900,131, during 1906, and 8,644 tons of $1,501,740 value during the first half of 1907. America takes more than any other country, the value being about one-fourth of the total export.

Of late it has become difficult for planters who began or extended their business during the boom in the industry some four years ago to maintain their markets. The planters are Chinese and their difficulties have come mostly by speculation, followed by a fall in the price of pepper. About four years ago the price advanced to 11 cents a pound, and, in the hope that it would be maintained, plantations were extended and others opened; but the present market value is about 4 cents.

The American Consul at Syria writes that the recent continued advance in the prices of foodstuffs in general, and of butter in particular, has placed this commodity out of the reach of great masses of the people, who, of necessity, are compelled to turn to the most wholesome and convenient thing at hand, which in this case proves to be oleomargarine, or "American butter," as they are disposed to term it. Certain commission agents of that Consular district are just now very active in the quest of this article, against the use of which there is no prejudice whatever, but on the contrary it is rapidly growing in favor, the market extending to every community.

American flour, lard and bacon are again on the increase in Brazil. Little is done in the way of tinned American meats, hams and other products, because of the excessively high tariff duties. The United States has been sending a large quantity of codfish to Brazil annually for a good many years, but the Canadians are cutting into the trade, simply because American exporters have not paid proper attention to the requirements of the market. The trade in canned fish and canned fruits is small, because of the duties. Canned vegetables in the market are mostly from Europe, and are confined to two or three articles for the fine trade. Dried fruits are very high in price, but there is no reason why Americans should not have most of the trade, except that their European competitors have better steamship connections and can furnish goods more promptly and in better condition. With proper steamship service and cold storage American fruit men could supply Brazil with green fruit in what would be the best season in Brazil and the season of greatest plenty and least expense in the United States.

All food products for Brazil must meet the ever-present requirements of the hot, damp climate. Thorough packing and careful protection from climatic influence are not only the better policies in all cases, but in many cases are imperative.

Large importations of American syrups are at present being made into Norway. American syrups are in great favor and demand and more attention should be given to the development of the Norwegian trade by manufacturers, which in the course of a few years could be doubled. There is no customs duty on ordinary syrup and molasses. The routes employed in transportation are Rotterdam, Hamburg, Newcastle and Hull.

Window Dressing for Grocers

In this department from now on will appear each week suggestive articles regarding the proper use of the retail grocer's window. An endeavor will be made to deal with the subject practically, in other words, to show grocers how they can turn their windows into a money-making feature of their business. Subscribers are invited to make free use of the department by submitting both queries or suggestions.

Two Seasonable Displays.

A SALT FISH WINDOW.

Here is a window that we got more direct results from than any we ever had.

The background of this window is built like a board fence, out of old boxes. It is about 20 inches high, except in the centre, where the boards are left high enough to saw out the curve.

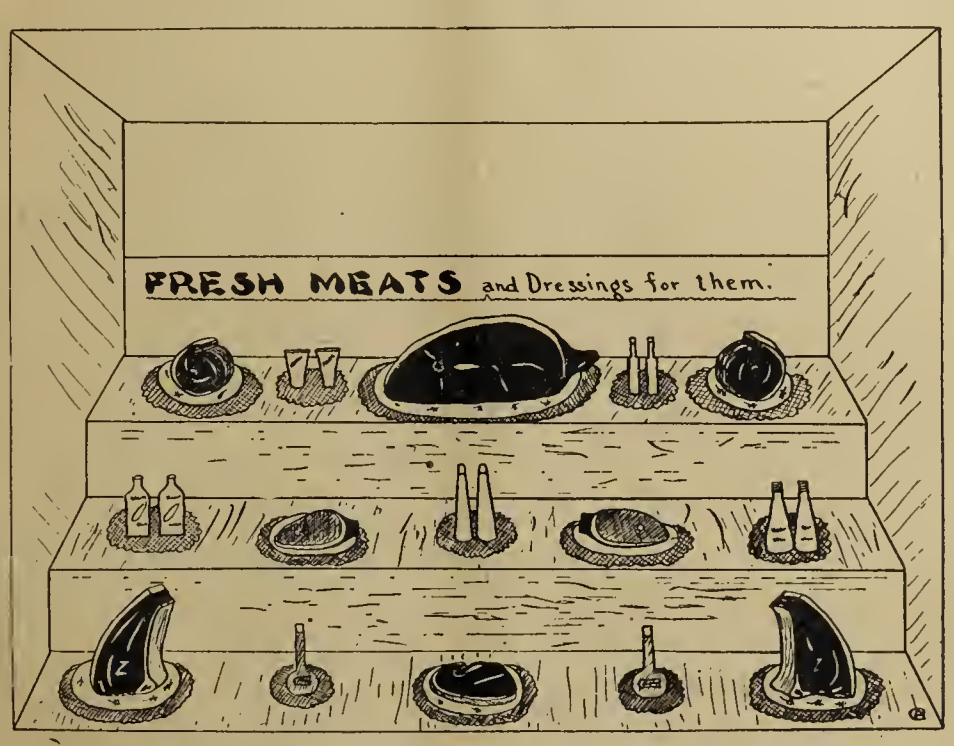
This is then covered with paper and the curves marked out with chalk or lead pencil where the bloaters are to be tacked. Only one tack in each is needed for the ones that hang straight down. The others will require a tack in each end.

The fish in the circles are tacked on cheese box or lard tub lids. After tacking the fish on nail the whole thing to the background in the position shown in the drawing.

In the centre of the window cut out a whole in the floor the size of a pan. Put in the pan so the top edge will be even with the floor. In this pan put water and a few live gold fish; around the edge of the pan put a little sand.

Seat on a can a Teddy Bear with fishing pole and line. Print a card "At Oyster Bay" and put in front of window.

Across the back of the window place a row of canned salmon, sardines, lobster, oysters, clams, shredded codfish, etc.



In the front of the window place salt mackerel, shad, herring, codfish, etc., on platters.

All the different kinds of fish should have price cards on them. A green card with white letters looks well.

(Thanks to Mrs. S. G. Irwin for the Teddy Bear idea.)

FRESH MEATS AND DRESSINGS FOR THEM.

The meats, catsup, horseradish, mustard, salad dressing, etc., are arranged on shelves, the floor of the window being the first shelf.

The second shelf is made of a row of empty corn cases and the third is made of larger boxes or a double row of corn cases. This is all covered with white wrapping paper.

The meat is, of course, on plates and under each plate and bottle is a mat cut out of green crepe tissue paper. The meats are garnished with parsley.

It does not take much stock to dress this window, as it looks better not too crowded.

Oxford, Pa.

Pennsylvania Food Commissioner Foust's First Year.

Receipts and Disbursements of the Office for the Year 1907. Food Fines Show Falling Off, Due to Effect of New Law.

The following statement for the year 1907 of receipts and expenditures of the Dairy and Food Division of the Department of Agriculture has been furnished the "Grocery World" by the Dairy and Food Department:—

RECEIPTS.

Oleomargarine licenses	$26,586.21
Oleomargarine fines	16,438.44
Pure Food fines	8,381.27
Renovater butter licenses	2,369.17
Milk fines	1,015.86
Vinegar fines	589.68
Renovated butter fines	202.00
Meat fines	100.00
Lard fines	50.00
	$55,732.63

The above receipts were turned into the State Treasury for the use of the Commonwealth, as required by the General Appropriation Bill.

The receipts of the office for the year 1907 compare favorably with former years. There is, however, a considerable dropping off in pure food fines, which is due to the new Pennsylvania food law placing the responsibility on the wholesaler and manufacturer, who are often non-residents of the State. In such cases the proceedings are turned over to the national authorities.

The receipts from oleomargarine prosecutions are much larger than any previous year in the history of the division.

The expenditures were as follows:—

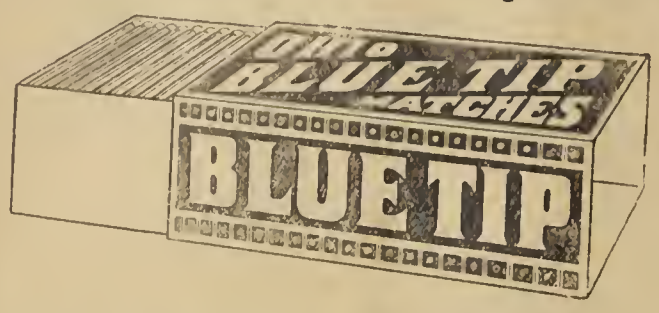
The Acker Toasted Corn Flake Demonstration.



Large Advertisement Showing Apparent Defection of Finley Acker Co. Arouses Much Discussion. Ackers Say Contract Was Signed by Manager Without Their Knowledge and They Could Not Escape.

Apropos of the local conflict over Toasted Corn Flakes, much discussion was aroused on Monday last by the appearance in local papers of a large advertisement announcing a demonstration of Toasted Corn Flakes at the Finley Acker Co's store. The Finley Acker Co. is a close member of the Retail Grocers' Association and has stood with the organization from the beginning of the fight. Naturally the Toasted Corn Flake Co. has made the most of the Acker Co's apparent desertion of the association cause, and its emissaries have worn copies of the advertisement to shreds showing them to retailers as evidence that "one of the leaders of the fight had succumbed."

The whole truth of the matter, according to Mr. A. Lincoln Acker, the general manager, is that the contract admitting the Toasted Corn Flake Co. to the Finley Acker store was signed by a branch manager without the firm's knowledge, in a way which bound them legally. After the matter was brought to their attention they made every effort to escape, but found they could not do so.

The "Grocery World" states, on its own responsibility entirely, that the success which the Toasted Corn Flake Co. will have with its Acker demonstration will probably not dazzle it much.

The STEEL FRUIT JAR CAP from the Chemist's Viewpoint

Prof Chas. T. P. Fennel, the famous Cincinnati chemist, says that a steel fruit jar cap submitted to the influence of organic acids, such as are contained in fruits, do not corrode as much as zinc caps. He further says that resulting salts from this corrosion in the case of the steel cap are absolutely harmless, and that those from the zinc caps are poisonous to the human system.

If you tell this to your customers you can sell a lot of our steel caps.

Warning Against Improper Food Labels

Some Manufacturers, Despite Rigidly Enforced Food Laws, Are Placing Themselves and Their Customers in Dangerous Positions. Two Sample Labels, Both Illegal.

Considering the stringent way in which both Federal and State food laws are now being enforced, some manufacturers of compound goods seem to be taking chances which may place both them and their customers in an exceedingly uncomfortable position.

The chief question surrounding the sale of compound goods is as to branding. Under the law such products are given a perfectly good status, provided they contain nothing deleterious to health and are truthfully branded. The question of branding is essentially a simple one—it involves only the telling on the label of enough of the truth about the contents of the package to completely inform consumers as to what they are buying. This degree of frankness some manufacturers do not seem to be able to reach, and the result is that many goods labeled in absolute violation of the law are still regularly selling in the open market.

One of these labels, for example, is as follows:—

> FRESH FRUIT PRESERVES
> Strawberry
> LOGAN, JOHNSON & CO.
> BOSTON, MASS.

Nothing could legally be packed under this label except straight strawberry preserves. And yet on the small band encircling the neck of the bottle, at the back where not one consumer out of one hundred would ever see it, appears the following in type exactly the size and style of that used below:—

> PREPARED FROM FRESH FRUIT, GRAN. SUGAR AND ENOUGH CORN SYRUP TO PREVENT CRYSTALLIZATION.

This is a flat contradiction of the main label "strawberry," and shows that the product is an ordinary compound, and the designation "strawberry" improper and illegal. In spite of this, however, the words "No. 1,509. Guaranteed under the Food and Drugs Act, June 30, 1906," appear on the other side of the neck band. The guarantee in this case is wholly unfounded because the goods are misbranded and not in conformity with the law. Only under some such description as "Compound Strawberry Preserves" could these goods be legally sold.

The package on which this label appeared was purchased at a Philadelphia retail grocery store within the past few days. The manufacturer may have changed it since the particular goods were sent out, although the label is not an old one, as it bears the Federal guarantee.

Many other manufacturers are using a label for their compound goods of which the following is a type:—

> FRESH FRUIT JAM
> (Manufacturer's name, etc.)
> These goods are compounded from 40 per cent. each fresh fruit and granulated sugar, with the addition of 10 per cent. each fresh apple juice and corn syrup to prevent crystallization.

There is nothing here to show what kind of preserve the jar contains. That information is supplied in a way from the band on the neck of the bottle. Looking the package squarely in the face, all that shows is the words "White Cherry." Turning the bottle around, however, one sees the words "with 10 per cent. apple juice." There is no mention of glucose here, however.

This in the writer's judgment is an illegal label. The proper name for goods of this character is "Compound White Cherry Preserves," and the Federal food law clearly requires the use of the word "compound" in Section 8. Furthermore, even if the words "with 10 per cent. apple juice" were a legal substitute for "compound," the deceptive manner in which they are placed upon the label would undoubtedly fall short of the statutory requirement.

Manufacturers who are correctly and legally labeling their goods are complaining very bitterly over the fact that they are compelled to meet such competition as this, and their complaint would seem to be justified. They contend that retail grocers refuse to discriminate between legally labeled goods and those obviously mislabeled, on the ground that the latter are guaranteed, which makes the dealer safe.

It is practically certain that the retail dealer handling goods packed under the first label above shown is not safe, even if he holds a guarantee of purity. That is because if he examines the package at all he must see that the goods are misbranded, because it is common sense, not to speak of law, that it is not honest to sell as "strawberries" a compound of strawberries and glucose. Such a dealer must therefore know that he is selling a misbranded article, and because he does it with his eyes wide open he is not entitled to the protection of a guarantee and the courts would almost certainly refuse to extend it to him. So that there is such a thing as relying too far upon a guarantee of purity.

Mr. Sielcken Not Commissioner.

Phila., Pa., Feb. 13, 1908.

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—Referring to two recent articles in your paper, one of which was the report of the Deputy Consul-General at Rio de Janeiro regarding the situation of coffee in Brazil, and the other a dispatch from Washington announcing that charges had been preferred against this gentleman by the Brazilian Government on account of matter contained in this report, and that Mr. Herman Sielcken, head of the syndicate in this country, had been appointed special commissioner to investigate whether the protest of Brazil was justified by the facts, the writer would call your attention to a subsequent notice sent out from Washington denying that Sielcken had been appointed as such special commissioner, and this denial must be given credence. This would have been an entirely too open a manner for these people to show their hand, as the trade would have hardly stood for Mr. Sielcken (who is the head of the valorization syndicate in this country) being appointed a special commissioner to investigate charges against a man whose report directly interfered with the claims given out through the syndicate press bureau. Their leader is one of the ablest of the financial pirates infesting the Wall Street Main, and would be the last one to make a false move of this character.

In this connection, the writer would like to call your attention to the manner in which the coffee valorization interest in this country is using the trade press to further their plans. In an article published in the "Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin," under date of Tuesday, February 11, 1908, which bears all the earmarks of intellectual prostitution, the writer is such a poor hack that he doesn't even take the trouble to make his own figures tally. He writes that the last crop of Santos coffee was 18,000,000 bags, that the present crop will be 7,000,000 bags (made up from an actual crop of 4,500,000 bags and a carry over of 2,500,000 bags), and proceeds to prophesy that the coming crop will probably show 8,000,000 bags. He then states that his figures make a total of 30,000,000 bags for the three years, or an average of 10,000,000 bags, while the consumption is between 10,000,000 and 11,000,000 bags. The inference here is that there will be a shortage for the three years and that part of the stock controlled by the syndicate through the valorization plan will be used to make up this deficit. You will notice that according to the gentleman's own figures the total of the three years would be 33,000,000 bags, and as he only claims a maximum consumption of 11,000,000 the shortage which he infers would not therefore exist.

This is only one of the many statements of a similar character which are being spread broadcast through the United States and Europe. If the valorization plan is feasible and a good thing for both the grower and the dealer in coffee, it should not need the help of false figures to bolster it up.

After Jobbers Who Sell Consumers.

Pen Argyl (Pa.) Retailers Will Seek to Have the Retail Mercantile Tax Assessed Against Jobbers Who Sell Consumers. New Local Association Officers.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Erie, Pa., Feb. 13, 1908.

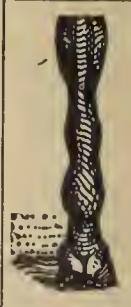
E. S. McAlevy, secretary of the Oil City Business Men's Exchange, has resigned. W. E. Barrett has been elected to fill the vacancy.

J. P. O'Donnell has a successor as secretary of the Merchants' Association of Pottsville and vicinity in the person of T. E. Hummel.

The Retail Grocers' Association of New Brighton has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, F. H. Iden; vice-president, Fred. Roth; secretary, A. M. Latshaw; treasurer, Ed. Blount; delegates to State convention, Stuart Magee and George W. Powell; alternates, S. O. Caven and F. H. Walker; directors, F. H. Walker, chairman; Stuart Magee, A. G. Harvey, John R. Rawling, C. W. Veiock, C. Woods, George Powell. This association took up the matter of wholesalers retailing and are going to ask the mercantile appraisers to impose the retail mercantile tax as well as the wholesale mercantile tax on all wholesalers who are known to sell in a retail way or to consumers.

The Retail Merchants' Protective Association of Hazleton and vicinity has elected the following officers: President, Hugh McKenna; vice-president, James Bond and W. W. Shiner; secretary, George Bittenbender; treasurer, J. B. Brown; insurance board, J. B. Brown, chairman; James Tosh, H. H. Allen, D. M. Montgomery, Frank Haberland.

Arrangements have been made with one of the constables of Pen Argyle to handle all delinquent accounts upon a commission basis. This excellent idea is worthy of the notice of other secretaries in small towns.



The Connellsville Merchants' Association has elected the following officers: President, E. W. Horner; vice-president, P. H. Beighley; treasurer, Harry Dunn; secretary, W. C. Armstrong; Executive Committee, B. P. Wallace, S. M. Goodman, John Duggan, J. S. Patterson, A. W. Bishop, J. G. Groman, A. S. Silsox, J. M. Sembower, Robert Norris and J. A. Renner.

Maryland Will Pass a New Food Law.

From all appearances the Legislature of Maryland will surely pass a pure food bill this year. There are three bills now before the Legislature: one called the Jarrett Bill, one the Ray Bill, and the third the Baltimore Drug Exchange Bill. The principal bill has been indorsed by the Wholesale Grocers' Association, the Retail Grocers' Association, the Wholesale and Retail Druggists, Maryland Pharmaceutical Association, and bids fair to go through just as it is. A copy of the bill has been sent to the "Grocery World." In all important respects it is identical with the Federal food law.

Owner retiring from grocery business, and will sell at inventory. This store has been established 20 years, and is solidly prosperous.

No. 329.—In Germantown, Philadelphia. Does $300 weekly, all cash. Stock about $1,000. No team. Nets clear 10 per cent. This business sells only groceries. The meat department is rented to another dealer on profitable terms, which make advertiser's rent very low. Owner has other business which takes his time. Price inventory.

No. 332.—In West Philadelphia. Size 20x30. Does $350 weekly, two-thirds cash. Stock $500 to $600. Nets 15 per cent. above everything. Dwelling connected. Team if wanted. Owner has not sufficient time owing to other business. Price inventory.

No. 333.—General store in Mifflin County, Pa. An extremely strong proposition. Size 30x100 feet. Business about $4,000 per month, 40 per cent. cash. Stock $6,000, which can be reduced considerably. Uses two teams. Business thoroughly profitable, netting about $5,000 per year. Owner in poor health and wants to retire to country place. Will make very favorable terms. Low price for fixtures. Stock at inventory, with proper allowance for everything not strictly up to the mark. The business can be very decidedly increased.

No. 334.—In West Philadelphia, size 16x44. Does $375 weekly, three-fourths cash. Stock $1500 but can be reduced to $1000. Clear slightly more than 10 per cent. above everything. Dwelling connected for sale or rent. Owner going into manufacturing and will sell at inventory. Fullest investigation.

No. 336.—On best business street of West Philadelphia. Store 16x27 feet. Does $150 to $200 weekly, all cash. Stock about $700. No team delivery. Clears 20 per cent. as expenses are low. Good dwelling connected for sale or rent. Good reasons which will be fully explained. Price Inventory.

No. 340.—In West Philadelphia. Groceries, meats and provisions. Size 24x60 feet. Does $45,000 yearly. Three-fourths cash. Stock carried, $2,500. Uses two teams. Actual net profit, 12 per cent. Reason for selling, ill-health. Established 21 years. Price inventory. Fixtures will run about $1,500. Amount required, around $3,800. No dwelling.

No. 341.—In West Philadelphia. Groceries and delicatessen. Size 20x30 feet. Does $300 weekly. All cash. Stock $2,000, but can be reduced to $1,300. Push cart delivery. Net profits, 15 per cent., as family run store. Established 12 years. Owner must sell as death compels him to assume another business. Price inventory. Fixtures will run about $1,500, but can be reduced to $1,100. Amount required, around $3,000. Cash or good security. Dwelling.

No. 342 —In North Philadelphia. Groceries. Size 16x25 feet. Does $100 weekly, nearly all cash. Stock $600. No team. Business now profitable. Owner wants to leave city. Price, around $600 to $700. Dwelling.

No. 344.—In West Philadelphia. Groceries, meats and provisions. Size 15x27 feet. Does $500 to $600 per week. All cash. Stock only $500, as business handles large amount of meats. Clean net profit 10 per cent. Best reasons for selling. Price Inventory. Will need about $1,400, but can be reduced by not taking cash register. Dwelling.

No. 345.—In West Philadelphia. Meats and provisions. Size 15x28 feet. Does about $11,000, three-fourths cash. Mostly sells meats, so stock only averages $250. No team. Actual net profits, 20 per cent. Owner wishes to change business, for reasons which will be explained. Price Inventory. Take around $800. Dwellllng.

No. 346.—In West Philadelphia. Groceries, meats, provisions. Size, 16 x 30. Does $200 to $250 weekly, three-quarters cash, balance weekly. Stock about $500. Push cart delivery. Net profits 12 per cent. Low rent and expenses. Satisfactory reasons for selling. Price inventory. For stock and fixtures about $1,200 required. This is an extremely strong small proposition.

In all of these the cause of selllng is good, and the fullest investigation courted. Every one paying.

FOR RENT.

FOR RENT—Large General Store (owned by the undersigned estate) in Quarryville, Lancaster County. Pa. This Borough has a population of about 800. Is the terminus of two steam railroads, a trolley line and two new state turnpikes. It is the only town of any considerable size in the ten lower townships of Lancaster County, and commands a large proportion of their patronage. It has two banks, and does more business in a week than most towns of its size in a month. In fact, during the year of 1907, it is carefully estimated to have exceeded $800,000, not including the money paid out in the borough for tobacco which will amount to about $150,000 yearly. The borough has, besides this store, one large general store, carrying every line, and one smaller general store, one small grocery and a large hardware store. This store has enjoyed a large patronage for half a century. The location is the best in the borough, and in the midst of the town's business activity, within 200 feet of the depot of the Lancaster & Quarryville Railroad, the Lancaster, Oxford & Southern Railroad, the freight station and the terminus of the trolley line. The building is large, well-lighted, and is undergoing repairs; it has a fine cellar. It will be rented on good terms. The opportunity for an energetic man to establish a fine business in one of the best towns of its size is here afforded. A renter will not be handicapped with a stock of old goods, as the building is entirely empty and ready for immediate occupancy. For any further information address George W. Hensel's Estate, Quarryville, Lancaster Co., Pa. tf

Got to Buy Good Materials

It is not difficult to make a flavoring extract; but only long experience and particularly the willingness to spend money for good materials can produce an extract like "Waldorf Lemon and Vanilla."

They are truly extracts de luxe. Smooth, penetrating and strong. They are surpassed by no extract made and equalled only by one or two brands at a much higher price. They are the product of the finest materials plus the most expert manipulations.

You can sell these. Every woman using them once will use them again.
